

THE LAST OF TRACY. Particulars of His Last Battle, Death and Burial.

DAVENPORT, Wash., Aug. 6.—Harry Tracy, the notorious Oregon, Washington convict-murderer, ended his life some time this morning by sending a bullet into his brain. Fatally wounded, and with death certain, he hid the men who had surrounded him in a place of a chance to battle with him. On entering a wheat field near Fellows, Wash., early this morning they discovered the dead body of the long-hunted outlaw. He was game to the last, and only gave up after his leg had been broken and an artery severed. With no way of stopping the flow of blood, he decided on self-destruction, rather than be taken alive. With his famous 30-30 Winchester clamped in his hands, and his face turned heavenward, the convict was found. His death was a relief to the town. For two days he had terrorized the occupants of the Eddy ranch, out in the Lake Creek country, three miles from the little siding of Fellows, on the Central Washington Railroad. Then five determined citizens of Creston, hearing of his presence there, took their rifles and revolvers and went after him. They knew their business, and did it without flinching. When Tracy ran, they hung upon his flank as the deer-hound stayed by the hunted deer. Sighting the man and securing his rifle, Tracy sought cover behind a haystack, escaping several rifle bullets. He then crawled to a point, and tried to stanch his cruel wound, failed, and with his revolver sent a bullet through his brain.

By this time dusk had fallen, and the posse and enable him to pour a merciless rifle fire upon them. But once only was he able to fire from this vantage point. Then, weakened by loss of blood, he tried to stanch his cruel wound, failed, and with his revolver sent a bullet through his brain. "Is that Tracy?" asked one of the party. "It surely is," replied Eddy. The party separated, Lanter and Smith accompanying Eddy in the direction of the barn, while the other two men swung around to cut off any break for liberty in another direction. The two men were wounded, and the outlaw made a leap for the barn door. His pursuers, stepped a little closer and commanded: "Hold up your hands!" The outlaw jumped behind Eddy, and then first the man and then his horse between himself and his pursuers. He commanded the farmer to lead his horse to the barn and under this cover he moved toward shelter. When near the stable he broke and dashed inside. He quickly reappeared, rifle in hand, and started on a dead run down the valley. Turning on the two men, the desperado fired two shots, but without his usual luck, neither bullet taking effect. Without waiting for further fighting Tracy took to his heels down the valley leading south from the barn, heading off in the brush. The man and horse were off in pursuit, firing as rapidly as possible. Coming to a rock, Tracy dodged behind it and resting his gun on the rock began a fusillade. Eight shots in all were fired by the outlaw, not one hitting its mark. Seeing that he was not succeeding, he left the position and made a dash for a wheat field not far distant. Just as he was entering the field he stumbled, and, falling on his face, crawled into the field on his hands and knees. By the time Tracy disappeared in the wheat field, it was getting dark. The pursuers did not dare to proceed, as they did not know where their man was. After holding a consultation they decided to surround the place, and wait for daylight to come to their assistance. In the meantime Sheriff Gardner, with Policemen Stauffer and Geming, of Spokane; Jack O'Farrell, of Davenport, and other reinforcements had arrived on the scene, and they went into camp around the field. Shortly after Tracy's disappearance into the field of wheat the watchers heard a shot, which sounded as though coming from the spot to which he had crawled. No investigation was made, however, until this morning, but that shot is supposed to have been the one which sent the notorious desperado into the great beyond.

Early this morning, as soon as it was possible for the hunters to get an advance going on around the wheat field. In a few minutes the party came upon the dead body of Harry Tracy, lying amid the grain with his face turned toward the sky. His left hand thrown over his head, held a 45-caliber Colt's revolver, which had evidently inflicted the mortal wound. The thumb of his hand was on the trigger of the pistol. His right hand, thrown across the lower part of his body, firmly grasped the barrel of his famous 30-30 Winchester. The body was cold when found, pointing to the belief that the shot heard by the guards about 8 o'clock last evening was the fatal one.

Body Taken to Salem. SALEM, Aug. 9.—The body of Convict Tracy arrived in an express car on the Southern Pacific train at 11 o'clock, just two months from the day of his escape from the penitentiary, and was met by Superintendent Lee, who welcomed Dr. Lanter, Mr. Straub and Mr. Smith, the captors of Tracy, who accompanied the remains.

Relic-Hunters Out in Force. When the Sheriff, with the body, drove through this place, hundreds of people followed up the street and crowded around the wagon. By the time the funeral procession reached the morgue the streets were crowded, and from every corner could be heard, "Three shouts for Lincoln County." The town was wild. The morgue doors had to be closed, and the crowd was asked to stand back. A number were allowed in to see the body, and that is when the trouble started. Everyone wanted a relic, and the most of them got it, for after a short time nothing was left but the body. Some-one even picked up the clotted, blood-stained handkerchief, which had been used by Tracy to keep from bleeding to death. Before he could carry the awful relic away he had to do it up in paper, as it was too wet to place in his pocket. Some one got the strap which had been pulled around his leg to keep him from bleeding to death. Flat, too, was soaked with blood, which ran from the upper wound. Many locks of his hair were carried away, and in some his trousers were cut into strips, and before they were divided they were cut into smaller pieces. Some of the men standing about the streets said that warrants should be sworn out for the arrest of people who were stealing the articles of good many warrants would have had to be sworn out. Many of Tracy's cartridges were divided among the members of the posse and to those who could get at the buckskin sack.

Men Who Found Tracy's Body. DAVENPORT, Wash., Aug. 6.—The party to which belongs the credit of capturing Tracy was made up of the following citizens of Creston: C. A. Straub, Deputy Sheriff; Dr. E. C. Lanter, Maudrick Smith, attorney; J. Morrison, rail-way section foreman, and Frank Lillengren. These men, armed to the teeth, set out from Creston yesterday afternoon, about 2 o'clock. They were working on the information of the Gold-finch youth, who had been forcibly made a companion of the Oregon convict for over 24 hours at the Eddy ranch. Proceeding southwesterly for about 11 miles, the party made all possible haste in getting near the ranch of L. R. Eddy, on Lake Creek, about three miles south of Fellows. The county is full of "scab" rock, and the party took all precautions as to ambushes. When within a few hundred yards of the farm they saw Farmer Eddy mowing in one of his fields. While engaged in conversation with Eddy, the manhunters saw a man issued from the barn door.

King Edward Crowned. LONDON, Aug. 9.—King Edward and Queen Alexandra were crowned in Westminster Abbey, shortly after noon today. Through the ceremony was bereft of some of the elaboration and pageantry originally contemplated, it lacked little in various particulars, with princely and diplomatic officers in gold-laced uniforms, with heralds, pursuivants and other officers of state medieval costumes, with peers and peeresses in rich robes, with Oriental potentates in many-hued raiment, with men of all types and all shades of complexion from distant points of the new-crowned monarch's empire, with its dazzling display of jewels and wealth and color, presented a picture which, in its combined brilliancy and distinction, has seldom been excelled.

A syndicate of Americans, led by T. B. Hoard, of Nebraska, a wealthy cattleman, will establish the first bonanza wheat farm in Canada, between Craik and Davidson, on the Prince Albert branch of the Canadian Pacific. Forty thousand acres of land were purchased, for $200,000, and another $100,000 has been set aside by the syndicate for improvements. One whole township has been converted into a monster wheatfield and a greater portion of a township adjoining is also to be a part of the syndicate's interests. Mr. Hoard and his associates will introduce steam plows and other modern farm machinery. The syndicate will own its own elevators, two of which are to be built this fall at Garvin, in the center of the new farm. It will also operate nine elevators at adjacent points.
