NIGHT OF TERROR.

An Appalling Phenomenon at Soufriere.

KINGSTOWN, St. Vincent, Sept. 6.—An appalling phenomenon was witnessed last night. It lasted from 9 P. M. till 3 o'clock this morning. A dreadful eruption of the Soufriere volcano enveloped this whole island in an electric cloud and smoke. At 11 o'clock this morning the atmosphere was still unsettled, but the eruption was apparently subsiding. The sea is slightly agitated. No sand has fallen here.

An official who has just returned here says that Chateau Bellair is safe. Only a small quantity of sand and stone fell there. An adjacent estate, Fitzhughes, suffered greatly, all cultivation being destroyed. The parish is being evacuated. There was no loss of life. Georgetown is also safe. No one ventured within the fire zone, the Soufriere being still in eruption. The destruction of the Caribbean is presumably complete.

The eruption was longer in duration and more violent than even the first dire outbreak of May 7. With a recollection of the fate of St. Pierre, Martinique, and the last disaster here, the people converged on Kingstown and ran to and fro, seeking the safest shelters from the electric cloud spreading over the hills toward the town, while shocks of earth, quake, though not severe, increased the panic.

At 2 o'clock in the morning, loud, rapid explosions were mingled with a continuous terrible roar and the Cimmerian darkness changed into a constantly glimmering firmament, illumined by forked lightning, balls of fire ascending from the crater and bursting into meteor like showers. Such an awe-inspiring scene the wildest fights of fancy could not have imagined. This lasted until 3 o'clock in the morning.

The rumor that a tidal wave was expected caused increased agitation, and hundreds of people fled to the hills. Superheated clouds rose to an immense height, and rain clouds below sent down showers. At 6 A. M. silver clouds were issuing from the crater, and throughout the day they moved slowly northward. The heat was abnormal and there were renewed indications of a further outbreak of the volcano.

Last night there were unmistakable signs of Mount Pelee being in eruption simultaneously with the Soufriere.

Authentic reports received here from various sources confirm the statements that the eruption of Mount Pelee during the night of August 30 was the most terrific experienced. The captain of the French trans-Atlantic steamer Salvador, which has arrived here, furnished the following: "I left Port de France at 5 o'clock in the afternoon of August 30. On passing St. Pierre at 7 o'clock at night, Mount Pelee was in violent eruption. At 4 A. M., August 31, on approaching the Islands of Les Saintes, volcanic ashes began to fall. I arrived off Point-a-Pitre, Guadeloupe, at 5 A. M. but was unable to enter the harbor until 11 o'clock, everything being obscured by falling ashes."

The heat in Martinique is said to be almost unbearable.

Thousands in Peril.

PARIS, Sept. 6.—With almost certain death staring them in the face the inhabitants of the Islands of Martinique and St. Vincent are on the verge of a state panic that has never been equaled in history. The people are becoming almost frantic and as many of them as call are leaving their homes, fortunes, everything, to seek a place of safety.

In parts of the Islands where the magnitude of their danger is most thoroughly realized the inhabitants may be seen huddled together in groups, some of them shivering with fear and begging and pleading with their neighbors and companions to save them, not thinking that they are in as much danger as themselves.

The sight of the eruption of the volcanoes is most appalling, the immense volume of fire and smoke striking terror to the hearts of those who have seen the results of the destructive belching. Men, women and children are constantly offering up prayers for their deliverance from the horrible death which they fear awaits them.

Menace of Pelee.

CHICAGO, Sep. 5.—"I am seriously alarmed at the news of the renewed activity of the Martinique and St. Vincent volcanoes," says Louis H. Ayme, United States Consul at Guadeloupe, who is in Chicago on sick leave. "Should Mount Pelee 'blow its head off,' the loss of life would be appalling. With Pelee as a center, a chain of islands extends northwestward, embracing a population of some 750,000. Almost without exception, the cities and villages are situated along the coasts, and but slightly elevated above the sea. A tidal wave 40 feet high would probably destroy 500,000 lives before it dashed against the shores of Porto Rico with its 1,000,000 inhabitants."

"The people of these islands are in a hard situation. Their communication with the outer world depends chiefly on a single line of steamers, which call at intervals of from 10 days to three weeks at some of the islands, when freight offers. The whole fleet of this line could not carry 3000 persons."

Out of the Ordinary.

Switzerland has just celebrated its national festival, which was established on August 1, 1291, and has been kept up without interruption during the six centuries that have since elapsed. This year, however, says the Tribune de Geneve, the day was rather damped by an execution taking place at Aerne in the morning. By evening, however, the popular spirits revived, and the fireworks on the mountains were splendid.

According to the calculations of the Hospital, an English medical journal, 5,776 officers and men were killed in action in the South African war and 3,019 died of the wounds which they received. In action one officer was killed to every 10.15 men and one officer was wounded to every 11.34 men. But of those who died from disease only one in every 38.5 men was an officer. The number of invalids sent home during the war was about 70,000 and of these more than 6,000 died or left the service. The vast majority, of course, were restored to health. To prove that the war, after all, was not a big one, the Hospital quotes the figures of the battle of Gravelotte, in which the victorious German had 328 officers and 4,900 men killed and nearly 15,000 wounded.

Expectation of an early challenge from Great Britain for another international yacht race for the America's cup has stirred up speculation in yachting circles. Much secrecy surrounds the plans for the English challenger, and the intentions of the New York Yacht Club also are shrouded in mystery. There is talk of a syndicate to build a new defender, but it is certain that August Belmont and the yachtsmen associated with him in the ownership of the Constitution will take no part in a new craft. They believe that the Constitution can be improved so that it will be much faster than last year. However, the club feels itself in duty bound to build still another defender, and not trust too implicitly to the Constitution and Columbia, as should the challenger beat either of these the club might come in for much criticism. There is no lack of patriotism or money in the club, and just as soon as the challenge comes to hand, vigorous action may be expected.

FALLS FROM LOOP.

Rider Larsen Plunges Into Crowd.

In an attempt to loop the loop, John Larsen was dashed 75 feet through the air and down into the heart of the throng of spectators at the Elks Carnival in Portland on Saturday evening. He owed his life to the fact that three men in the crowd were unable to get out of his way. The Carnival was a drama with a deep note of tragedy. A sunny day and rollicking merry-makers made the grounds the scene of a brilliant festivity. But as the day neared its climax the minds of the revelers began to turn in thrilling anticipation to the crowning event.

The afternoon's attendance was insignificant before the surging masses that streamed through the gates in the evening and filled the Carnival streets to suffocation. By 8 o'clock 15,000 people were in the Midway. Every show was packed, and long before the hour set for the daring ride through the loop thousands collected around the lofty structure of the loop. For a while the police managed to keep the people behind the ropes, but when the last guy rope was made fast, and the rider appeared on the runway, every crevice and cranny of the park was jammed.

Larsen Prepares for the Start.

As the young athlete, clad in red jersey and tights, finally started up the 100-foot incline, unroarious cheers and laughter and jest greeted him. In spite of the warnings and threats of the guards, no one thought for a moment of the scene so shortly to be enacted. Finally Larsen reached his place of starting, and as he stood up there, high above the lights and the nets, a momentary hush fell upon the throng. The big barrel of the loop rose stiffly before their eyes, and as they realized that that figure in red must ride 100 feet down an incline of 60 degrees to strike the upshoot of the huge cylinder 30 feet in diameter, a sense of his daring brought a look of awe into the upturned faces of the watchers. A showman climbed into a commanding position and be sought quiet. He voice rang out clearly as he cried: "The rider's success depends on your making no noise." The spell was broken. Jest and banter were bellowed at the motionless figure above the shadows of the trees. He was exhorted to cheer up, to hurry, not to be afraid. An attendant ran up the slope with the 95 pound wheel that was to be used, and when the jokers saw that it was without pedals there was more fun at the rider's expense. He received his wheel and tested the pads that had been placed on his shoulders, hips, knees and head. Then with a swift movement he was in his seat, and the crowd waited almost impatiently.

Through the Air He Plunges.

There was a low note to signify that he was coming, then Larsen bent low and was off. His wheel wobbled slightly for the first 100 yards and then came straight and true as an arrow. A second later there was a roar, and he was in the huge loop. Within 10 feet of the top, while going 80 miles an hour, the wheel swerved, and the rider still head down, swept up and over the guard nets. The terrific impetus had carried him past all obstructions and into the crowd. As people held their breath a shout was heard from above. It was Larsen's voice calling, "Look out! Look out!" A second later wheel and rider plunged to the ground. The vast multitude surged forward and then back, as the police reformed. Men turned away and blinked at the lights around the lofty station where a moment before had stood the plucky athlete: women sobbed and fell to moaning to themselves. Then there was a tempest of shouting. Larsen stood in the loop bowing to the throng. And as the innumerable crowd uttered a second roar of joy a body was laid at Larsen's feet. Then a full realization of what had happened came over those now wild with emotion. Rapid inquiry elicited the fact that four persons had been struck by the plunging rider, and there was instant confusion. By quick work on the part of the police, under Chief McLaughlan and Sergeant Church, the injured were put in the hands of physicians and their hurts attended to. Five minutes later the information was given out that none was seriously injured. P. C. George, the man brought to the runway of the loop, was revived, and as he rose to his feet the multitude gasped with relief. Looping the loop had put an end to the day's Carnival, and those who had witnessed it went home nerve-shaken.

Bright's Disease.

The largest sum ever paid for a prescription, changed hands in San Francisco, Aug. 30, 1901. The transfer involved in coin and stock $112,500.00 and was paid by a party of business men for a specific for Bright's Disease and Diabetes, hitherto incurable diseases. They commenced the serious investigation of the specific Nov. 15, 1900. They interviewed scores of the cured and tried it out on its merits by putting over three dozen cases on the treatment and watching them. They also got physicians to name chronic, incurable cases, and administered it with the physicians for judges. Up to Aug. 25 eighty-seven percent of the test cases were either well or progressing favorably. There being but thirteen per cent of failures, the parties were satisfied and closed the transaction. The proceedings of the investigating committee and the clinical reports of the test cases were published and will be mailed free on application. Address John J.
