Remember it was Haltom that made prices cheaper and values better in Tillamook

Mr. J. J. Hollett was in from Blaine on Wednesday, and like a good many more from the south part of the county, called on the editor.
We beg the city cows pardon, for it is the 15th of next month, not this month, as we stated last week, they will have to be kept up.
All of the special line of medicines used by Drs. Smith and Mills are now carried in stock by Sturgeon, the reliable prescription druggist.
We would suggest to the city recorder that he place a few decoys in the lake near his residence, for he might get the editor interested in cracking a shot at the ducks which might light there this winter.
Miss Maude Sturgeon, who is a licensed pharmacist by examination, and late graduate of four years course in pharmacy, has charge of the prescription department of STURGEON'S DRUG STORE.
In the action against William Tinner, set last week in the circuit court, in the report we should have stated that Mr. Tinner agreed to sell his place conditionally, and that was if the title was good.
President Mellen, of the Northern Pacific Railroad, was in Portland the fore part of the week. Surely it is in order to ask what will be the outcome of the railroad survey which was made from Pittsburg to Tillamook City?
The Sue H. Elmore took out 2000 cases of choice "Columbia river packed salmon." Tillamook has no kick coming, even if the pack of salmon in this county swells the pack put up at Astoria, as long as the big salmon give the Columbia the tail shake and head for Tillamook Bay, as they did this year.
We believe the Port of Tillamook Commission would be doing the city a great service if it could impress the engineer's department with the importance of straightening Hoquartion slough. It is a very easy matter to do so, and would be of inestimable benefit to Tillamook City and the country tributary to it.

Cohn & Company have made arrangements with about 25 of the leading magazines and newspapers whereby a purchaser of every $20 worth of goods (not including groceries) will be entitled to a 12 month's subscription to either of these papers. This offer is good until the 31st of December, 1902.

What a terrible sacrifice of life there must have been in the fire this week at North Yamhill. The last time we tried to sleep in the hotel which was burned down the editor thought, sure, he had been kidnapped and the bedbugs would demand a ransom of $6000 for his release from that place of torment in North Yamhill.

The question of draining the surface water in the neighborhood of the school building should be taken up by the city council and the school directors, for it is a matter which should be attended to at once and a drain put in to carry the water off. It will not be expensive to do so, for there is almost a natural drain in a westerly direction.

A message was received in this city on Wednesday stating that a number of buildings, including one block, had been destroyed by fire in North Yamhill. The fire started in Messler's store, and the other store destroyed Busby's, the barber shop, J. S. Lamar's saloon, and the hotel. Mr. Lamar left for North Yamhill on Wednesday. The saloon

The building was insured for $650. The stock and fixtures were saved.
During the high water on Monday the Annarine went aground on the tide lands. She was looking after a boom of 1500 logs belonging to the Tillamook Logging Company. On account of such a heavy tide the boom broke. The Maria went to the assistance and succeeded in stretching a boom across the river, which prevented the logs from going out. The next day Captain Cary succeeded in pulling the Annarine off.
The State Superintendent has recently rendered the following decision: School boards shall admit free of charge to the schools of their respective districts all persons between the ages of 6 and 21 whose parents or guardians reside in such districts at the time of making application for free admittance to such schools, even though such persons may have been at the last enumeration legally enumerated in some other district.

At a meeting of the city council Monday evening, with Mayor J. S. Brodhead and Councilmen Geo. Grayson, P. L. Sappington and Arthur Mason present, it was decided to call a caucus next Monday evening at the court house for the purpose of nominating a ticket for the city election, which takes place on the following Monday, Dec. 1st. A. J. Cohn, H. F. Goodspeed and Dave Sexton were appointed judges and O. Heins and D. Pierce clerks of election.

The heavy gale from the south, which had prevailed for several days previous, exhausted itself on Tuesday. During the storm the rain pattered down in true Tillamook fashion, with occasional flashes of lightning, followed with heavy peals of thunder, just to let people in this neck of the woods know that the East and the South have not a monopoly on electric storms. With such heavy rainfall, and with high tides, Tillamook had all the irrigation it required, nor will the county ask the government for an appropriation for irrigation.

The editor has been asked quite frequently the past few days who are likely to be nominated for city officials. That is for the voters to decide, and it rests with them alone what kind of administration the city will have the next year. There should not be the least bitterness in the contest. The Headlight has expressed its opinion somewhat freely upon matters pertaining to the city, but it is not going to quarrel with those who differ with us. As to taking any part in fixing a ticket, that we decline to do, for that is a right which belongs to the people and not to a newspaper.

S. A. Loomis, whose death we announced in our last issue, was fatally injured the previous day at Siskiyou. He was driving a team, which became frightened at a Southern Pacific train and ran away, throwing the rig and driver down an embankment. Loomis received a dislocated thigh, bruises around the head and serious injuries. The injured man was taken to Ashland on a freight train the same night to have his injuries attended to, but the doctors gave very little hope of his recovery and he died the next morning. At the time of the accident one of Loomis' sons was with him. They had left Tillamook county and were en route for Southern Oregon when the fatal accident occurred. Mrs. Loomis was in Portland at the time. For several years he was a member of Star lodge, A.O.U.W., but had dropped out about 12 months ago. He was about 47 years of age. His body was shipped to Astoria for burial in this county, but owing to a storm the steamers have not been able to run.

Buy Miller's all wool Clothing and get the best—Haltom sells it.

The body of Mrs. Howard Cary, who died at Pendleton last week, will be brought to Tillamook for burial, but owing to rough weather and the steamers being unable to get out, the remains are detained at Astoria. They will be buried at Beaver on arrival here. A great deal of sympathy is expressed for Howard in the loss of his wife, who was beloved by all who knew her, and whose death has caused a feeling of deep sorrow in the neighborhood.

Most everybody in the city is looking forward for the game of football which is to be played on Thanksgiving Day between the Pippins and the Athletics, and as the boys are putting in considerable practice a good game may be expected for their first adventure groveling in the mud for the possession of the pigskin. Of course each team will have to have a mascot to be up-to-date, but who the young ladies will be we have not learned. The game will be in the afternoon, and as foot ball players pay no attention to the elements, we suppose the game will come off, anyway.

Another instance of men procuring life insurance and then allowing themselves to drop out for the lack of paying their assessments is furnished in the case of S. A. Loomis, who was fatally injured last week. For several years he had been a member of the A.O.U.W. lodge in this city, but allowed himself to become delinquent, thus depriving his family of the benefits which that order affords. The Headlight has repeatedly called attention to the importance of men making some kind of provision for their wives and families in case of death, and it is on account of so many women and children being left destitute and at a time when they are least able to earn a livelihood, we again call attention to it. We hear a great deal about women's rights now and again, but right here they would be exercising their rights if they would see to it that they are properly protected in case of their husband's death, for charity commences at home. As this is of vital importance to every married woman, especially with a young family, now is the time, not when face to face with distressing and often heart-rending circumstance, for women to be considering where they are at should the grim reaper visit their homes and carry off the bread winner of the family.

Union Thanksgiving Service.

On the morning of Thursday, November 27, 1902, at 10:30 o'clock, let us crown the U. B. church for an enthusiastic union Thanksgiving service, of which the following will be the programme:

Benediction.
A Thank offering will be taken.

Christmas Entertainment.

The members and friends of the M.E. Sunday school met at the parsonage on Monday evening and decided to hold an entertainment on Christmas eve. The following committees were elected:
Building chimney—Frank Paterson, John Brant and John Johnson.
Decorations—Mrs. Beals and persons to be selected by her.
Making candy—Mrs. Stanley and persons to be selected by her.
Program—The teachers of the Sunday school as to literary and the choir as to music.
Solicitors—George Lamb and Wm. Latimer.
Furnishing Evergreens—Mrs. Beals' class.
Filling boxes, etc.—Mesdames Goynne, Wilt, Ford, Eberman and Goodspeed.
Purchasing sundries—T. H. Goynne and Prof. Whitney.
Distributing presents—Estella Nelson, Ida Goynne, Dot Stephens and Esther Munson.
Receiving presents—Same as distributing presents.
Calling names—Mr. Beals and Prof. Whitney.

The Country Newspaper.

There is a union printer in this city who has spent many years working at his trade, every branch of which he has learned thoroughly. He has kept abreast of his calling; when hand composition was superseded by the linotype he familiarized himself with the complications of that machine, and became an expert operator. He is a great reader and has a retentive memory, and as a consequence possesses a fund of information that is marvelous.

A friend asked him the other day what newspaper published in the United States is his favorite, and he unhesitatingly gave the name of an obscure weekly printed in a small Eastern town. "I have read it almost ever since I can remember," said he, "and impatiently await its arrival each week. It is my favorite newspaper."

There are thousands of other people who view the matter in the same light as this printer. The newspaper published near the old homestead appeals to them more strongly than can that of any other publication. Each week it brings memories of happy boyhood days that were all but forgotten. "The past rises before us like a dream." The personal column is eagerly scanned for a familiar name. Cy Watkins is treating his house to a coat of paint may not be a sensational piece of intelligence but his old schoolmate in the West reads it a dozen times, and wonders if he could trounce him now as he used to do. He sees that Sallie Brown is ill, and recalls with a smile the night that she gave him the marble heart when he asked to see her home from a spelling bee. The advertisements are even read in order that nothing escapes his observation. His former companions are the business men who are letting the public know what they have to sell. Everything is interesting—he reads it all.

The country newspaper will always be a welcome visitor to thousands of homes. It is performing a mission that is entirely separate and distinct from the great daily. Its gossip paragraphs are like the paws of a mother used to make—they touch the right spot.—Portland Journal.

Publishing the News.

It is the function of a newspaper to give the news, not to suppress it. The adage that "the truth always hurts" should remind those whose toes are sometimes stepped upon, to be a little more careful in their method of conducting themselves. A newspaper cannot hold itself responsible for the shortcomings of a delinquent citizen, nor out of pure sentiment suppress intelligence that subscribers have a right to demand.

There is no greater coward on earth than the newspaper that is tied hand and foot by the enemies of Truth and Justice when a momentous occasion calls for its most telling blows in the interest of Right. Any newspaper that will at the wave of the hand of any man squelch a "story" that is of vital public importance is unworthy of the support of honest persons. The poor man's troubles should not be aired with any more flourish of type than those of the man of wealth. The newspaper that represents equality to all men is the publication that will meet with success and can come to you in good faith and ask you for your subscription.—Portland Journal.
