A Conservative Estimate. County Judge Conder has made a conservative estimate of the work that each district in the county is wanting the county court to do, and it amounts to $241,000. As this would take a tax of about 110 mills, it is just as well to ask the taxpayers if they want to foot the bills for this work, for the county court would be glad to do the work if it had the "dough."

Chicken Wanted. Wanted, chicken, at the Allen House, J. P. Allen.

T. SARCHET, Merchant Tailor. WOMAN A PESSIMIST. After a Certain Age Their Faces Show Signs of Mental Worry and Distress. The average woman is a dyed-in-the-wool pessimist. Almost every woman over 30 years of age looks distressed. Her brows are bent, her mouth drawn into a tight line, and there are deep furrows down her cheeks. She looks exactly as if she were considering how to provide a dinner for 25 cents that will satisfy twenty-five small children, when in reality she may have nothing more serious on her mind than buying a pair of socks for George. No wonder women grow old faster than men, for they hug their worries to them and let them show in their faces. There was once an elderly servant who was superstitious to a degree and who always expected the worst to happen. Did she find a needle on the floor, did a picture fall in the house or a bird fly into one of the rooms, she was instantly plunged into woe. "We're going to have a heap of bad luck!" she would say, and then she'd be lachrymose until some one had the toothache or the cows got into the corn, when she would consider the demon luck exorcised or satisfied for a time and grow as cheerful as it was her habit to be. Some one once asked her if she did not have any good-luck signs. "Why, certainly," she replied, "but they don't count—I don't believe in the good-luck ones," which, by the by, is thoroughly characteristic of the sex. Here is a woman who suffers—suffers in the word—from insomnia. "I can't imagine why I don't sleep," she says to her friends. "I'm sleepy as anything when I go upstairs, but then I begin to wonder if my son Arthur, who travels for a drug firm, is on a train, and in a minute I see him just as plainly bleeding and mangled in a wreck. When I decide that he is really dead, I think of John, and worry because he hasn't a better position. Then Molly comes into my mind, and I feel sure that one of her children must be ill. I feel so blue about her. I fret over Lucy's throat a bit then, and by this time I'm wide awake. It's the strangest thing! I don't understand why I should be so wakeful!" Her physician does, however, and now he's prescribing for her a course of cheerfulness and of "looking for the best." It's a medicine that most women need—their faces show it—but there are few who are sensible enough to take it.
Death Caused by Mosquito. Mosquitoes are now charged with communicating erysipelas as well as malaria and yellow fever. A New York physician has issued a death certificate in the case of a 14 months' old babe, in which he says "Death was caused by erysipelas due to the bite of a mosquito." It is only fair to the mosquito to record that the board of health officers refused to accept the certificate until a coroner's physician had investigated and concluded that there was no other apparent cause for the death than the mosquito bite.—Youth's Companion.
"Coffee Heart" is the Latest. Medical examiners for life insurance societies have added the term "coffee heart" to their regular classification of the functional derangements of that organ. Its effect is in shortening the long beat of the heart. Coffee tapers, they say, are plentiful, and are as much tied to their cups as the whisky toper. The effect of the coffee upon the heart is more lasting, and consequently worse, than that of liquor.—Dietetic and Hygienic Gazette, London.

SCIENCE AND INDUSTRY. There are in Paris 1,316 factories. The world's output of coal in 1900 was 767,636,900 tons. A large factory in Jena, Germany, utilizes its surplus hot water in such a way as to afford the laborers nearly a thousand baths per week. In some German cities it is customary to see street car conductors, who are thus enabled to add from four to six dollars a month to their income. The richest farm in the world is an acre worth $288,000 in the heart of New York's ultra-fashionable district, between West End avenue and Riverside drive. It is tilled regularly and the produce is sold at the nearest market. During the civil war the site was covered by a government recruiting station. A research steamer belonging to the Norwegian government recently carried on the North sea some experimental fishings which yielded important results. In three days 117 halibut and 300 large cod were caught at a depth of 200 fathoms, thus proving the existence of large quantities of these fishes at a time of the year when they are not to be found on the coast of Norway. Many people imagine that the incandescent electric light gives out little or no heat, but it is found that of the energy consumed only six per cent. is converted into light, while 95 per cent. goes into heat. A lamp immersed in water will bring the water to a boil, and many cases of fire have been caused by carelessness in letting inflammable substances rest in contact with the lamp. Prof. James Dewar, president of the annual meeting of the British Association for the Advancement of Science at Belfast, has pointed out in the boldest language that while Englishmen have repeatedly discovered scientific principles and laws of great importance, the Germans and Americans have been making the practical applications of them, leaving England behind in reaping the advantages.

COMPLAIN OF STAMPS. Lot Recently Sent Out by Post Office Department That Stuck Too Well. Many complaints have been made to the post office authorities that the stamps sold in books of 24 and 48 have had a way of sticking to the paraffin paper that was supposed to protect the mucilage on them. An investigation was made, with the result that a circular was issued authorizing the redemption of stamps so glued to the sheets in books. It was explained that "by mistake" the contractor who made the books had used a poor quality of paraffin paper. Postmasters were instructed to return to the department at Washington all books of stamps made with this inferior quality of paraffin fly leaves which they had on hand. Under this order about $12,000 worth of damaged books have been turned in, and it is thought that there will be little more trouble of the kind. This is not the only stamp trouble of the post office. Particularly from the south and along the Atlantic coast there came many complaints that the ordinary one and two-cent stamps stuck to everything they touched. A sheet of 50 or more was turned in at the New York post office this week. They had been sent loose in a letter from the south and were hopelessly glued to the paper. Whether the trouble is due to something wrong with the mucilage or the abnormally wet season in the south and along the coast has not been determined. There is no provision for the redemption by postmasters of damaged individual stamps.
Dueling in Switzerland. The duel, though prohibited by law, still exists in Switzerland, but the practice is confined to the students in the Swiss German universities. Even these fire-eaters are beginning to realize the absurdity of the practice, for a meeting was held at Zurich lately at which student delegates from all parts were present, to discuss the duel and courts of honor. A proposition by the president to abolish the duel altogether was rejected by a large majority. The consequence was that a large number of duels which were previously arranged and whose principles were awaiting the result of the vote took place at Bremgarten, near Berne. Many students received severe rapier cuts, chiefly in the face, but nobody was seriously wounded. The police, though they know the practice exists, and are often aware of the "affair," seldom interfere, for they look upon the duel, as practiced by the students, as a sporting and harmless matter. It is certain that nobody has ever been seriously hurt in these affairs of honor.—London Times.
The Ingenious Inventor. "The market is overrun with substitutes for this food and that," asserts the capitalist. "I see no justification for backing your new health food." With a naive smile the inventor turns to him and suggests: "But it may also be used as a substitute for coal." Then the capitalist displays unusual activity in sending for patent attorneys and clerks to draw up articles of partnership.—N. Y. Times.
Chronos. Belcher—"What was the use in showing Nuritch through your art gallery?" He couldn't appreciate your paintings." Kuleher—"Well, he seemed interested and surprised." Belcher—"Really, and what did he say?" Kuleher—"Gee! what a lot of 'em you've got. You must 'a' bought an awful lot of 'em in your time."—Philadelphia Press.

There are in Paris 1,316 factories. The world's output of coal in 1900 was 767,636,900 tons. A large factory in Jena, Germany, utilizes its surplus hot water in such a way as to afford the laborers nearly a thousand baths per week. In some German cities it is customary to see street car conductors, who are thus enabled to add from four to six dollars a month to their income. The richest farm in the world is an acre worth $288,000 in the heart of New York's ultra-fashionable district, between West End avenue and Riverside drive. It is tilled regularly and the produce is sold at the nearest market. During the civil war the site was covered by a government recruiting station. A research steamer belonging to the Norwegian government recently carried on the North sea some experimental fishings which yielded important results. In three days 117 halibut and 300 large cod were caught at a depth of 200 fathoms, thus proving the existence of large quantities of these fishes at a time of the year when they are not to be found on the coast of Norway.
