SOUTH PRAIRIE.

Mrs. Willis Powell returned on the 19th from a visit in Clark county, Wash. Bell Johnson and crew have finished up logging on the Fitzpatrick place, on the Trask river, the first of this week.

Ed. Moren has sold his place of 28 acres to Guy Vaughn for $2,300. The neighborhood will be sorry to lose a good neighbor who is always ready to extend a helping hand.

P. McIntosh & Co. expect to begin building an addition to their factory in a few days to accommodate their large increase of patronage they are receiving this year.

Miss Ethel Marolf is on the sick list this week.

Marion Green is working in the cheese factory.

There is over seven thousand lbs. of milk received at the factory daily. There are already 33 patrons, several coming from the road south, some from Long Prairie, some from Trask river and some on the Netarts road as far as Monte Redding's.

Thos. Goyne will put several men to work this summer clearing up on his ranch.

Dwight West has added some cows to his dairy herd.

NEHALEM.

The cheese factory started up the 16th with Mr. Balentine as cheese maker. C. L. Alley carries the milk on the north fork and Louie Ludtke carries on the south fork.

Herman Tohl is building a new barn, Pat Smith is doing the carpenter work.

The options on Coast flour mills, renewed on January 1, have been allowed to lapse and will not be renewed again. The promoters of the plan to consolidate the more important Coast flouring mills, forming one of the largest of the coast industrial corporations, have abandoned the project for the present. If anything further is done with the deal it will not be undertaken for at least ten months and the scheme may be laid aside for good.

COULSONBURG.

The recent rains have greatly hindered the process of garden making in this locality.

Miss Minta Swab, of Salem, began a three months term of school at this place last week.

P. R. Coulson and family, of near Oretown, spent Easter Sunday with his parents here.

R. Y. Blalock is moving to his new place near Browns.

Rev. Nash and wife, of Beaver, were the welcome guests at Mr. N. Coulson's Friday and J. Friday night.

C. Mills was a caller at the burg one day last week.

Frank and Connie Dye have gone to work at the logging camp.

The Misses Coulson, of this place, and Miss Lesta Pinley, of Beaver, spent the day at Mr. Ed. Kinnaman's Monday.

Chas Smith, of Boulder Creek, brought his team down Monday and took a load of household goods for Mr. Blalock, to the latter's new home.

N. Coulson sold three head of young cattle last week, consideration $55.

Mrs. Mable Woods, of Blaine, has been down here visiting at Norman Dye's.

Walter Wensky, the German Consul at Dawson, has written a long letter to the Lokal Anzeiger, warning people against emigrating to the Yukon district, especially to Tanana. He describes the great distances in Alaska, the severe cold, scarcity of work, fall in wages from $1 an hour to 40 cents, and the high price of food, and concludes with saying: "While on the Canadian side law and order prevail, Tanana lies within the United States where the contrary is the case, as Cape Nome has shown. One must be an American citizen or declare his intention of becoming naturalized before being allowed to prospect, although foreigners are permitted to buy land, Only large capitalists can be successful."

Announcement was made from the headquarters of the Santa Fe system, that the road would soon install oil-burning locomotives on the Seligman-Winslow division, in Arizona, adding about 146 miles to the mileage now covered by oil-burning engines on the Santa Fe system. The change will increase the Santa Fe's consumption of oil from 30,000 to 35,000 barrels per month. The company will then be burning a total of 140,000 to 150,000 barrels, all of which is supplied by its own wells.

Civilization is Menaced.

CHICAGO, April 20.—"The danger in the huge National liquor bills reaches beyond misery and moral degradation. Civilization itself is menaced by the growing economic waste."

With this statement, D. D. Thompson, editor of the Northwestern Christian Advocate, opened a lecture last night on "Economic Aspects of the Liquor Problem." The First Methodist Episcopal Church, in which he spoke, was well filled. He said this view of the danger was not the idea of a prohibitionist fanatic, but of a scientific investigation. Dr. E. R. L. Gould, lecturer on social economics and statistics in John Hopkins University, a special commissioner of the United States Department of Labor, who had investigated the effects of liquor in Europe and this country, said:

"The most important, though as yet scarcely observed, new phase of the temperance movement is the economic. The economic phase is so many sided and appeals to so many selfish interests that it attracts classes of men who regard the moral aspects of intemperance with indifference. Business men and workingmen will in time come to realize that the liquor problem concerns them vitally and that the one billion dollars now annually spent for drink in this country would settle many labor problems and help to settle many more.

"Perhaps the most important lesson to be imposed upon the rising generation is that their business and industrial future will depend upon whether they use alcohol."

James McKinney, the outlaw, has been "taken," but not alive. The finish of the desperado came with a terrible battle to the death between him and the officers of the law. McKinney, in giving up his life, claimed the lives of William E. Tibbett, a Deputy Sheriff of Kern County, and Marshal Jeff Packard, of Bakerfield.

One of the biggest timber deals transacted in Southern Oregon for some time was the recent transfer of some 42,000 acres of timber land on the Upper Rogue to W. H. Strobbridge. Mr. Strobbridge is an extensive lumber operator and has charge of the large saw mills near Glendale. He has taken the tract on the Upper Rogue under bond, the price named being $25 an acre for 24,000 acres of the tract, and $20 per acre for the remainder. The total price is $960,000.
