"I would be willing to give $500 to any one who smashes any camera that holds a snapshot of me," exclaimed Mr. I. P. Morgan after he had gone aboard the White Star liner Cedric by the second class plank in order to avoid a score of photographers.

The Novosti, without giving the exact figures, indicates that the Jews at Kishineff, capital of Bessarabia, during the anti Semite riots there April 20, suffered even more severely than admitted officially. The paper says scores of Jews were shot or beaten to death and several hundred were wounded. Their houses were wrecked and their shops were sacked. Thousands of Jews in the district are homeless and destitute.

The woes of poor old Uncle Tom and the pitiful death of little Eva will no longer bring tears to the school children of New York if they confine their reading to the class libraries provided by the Board of Education. The board of superintendents has voted to drop the novel of Mrs. Harriet Beecher Stowe from the catalogue. The general reason given is that the book has served its purpose and now only tends to revive sectional feeling.

A Chicago life insurance company, through its Philadelphia agents, has just issued to Rodman Wanamaker, son of John Wanamaker, a policy for $1,000,000. The premium on the policy will be $30,000. This makes Wanamaker one of the most heavily insured private individuals in the world, as he carries policies for $2,000,000. His insurance is said to be exceeded only by that of King Edward of England. John Wanamaker, his father, carries policies aggregating $1,500,000.

Advices received from the Orient by the steamer Doric state that a mutiny broke out in the American ship Edward Sewall at Woo Sung. Captain Quick was unable to cope with the mutineers and he sent for assistance to the United States battleship Oregon, which was in the harbor. Marines were sent to the ship and the mutineers were arrested and taken from the ship. The Edward Sewall is now on her way to Honolulu. She is owned by Arthur Sewall, of Bath, Maine.

L. P. W. Quimby, Game Warden for the State, sent in his resignation several days ago to Governor Chamberlain, and the latter has just made the fact public by appointing J. W. Baker, of Cottage Grove, to fill the vacancy. Mr. Baker will take office July 1, and it is believed he will make the headquarters of the Game Warden in the southern part of the state. Little is known about Mr. Baker in connection with game protection and preserves, excepting that he is a well-known old resident of Cottage Grove and a good Democrat.

Addressing a meeting of anarchists in New York, John Most, who was recently released after having served a term of imprisonment on Blackwell's Island, declared that John Mitchell was either a fool or a knave for not snubbing the anthracite strike commission. "As to Kings," he said, "there is an idiot on the throne of Russia, and in England they have an idiot for a King. In Italy the ghosts of Popes play high jinks, but what is a Pope compared to a Malatesa or a Bresi. Anarchists are the only pure, noble, gentle and high-minded people in the world."

To hold a special election under the referendum amendment will cost not less than $30,000, and possibly as much as $40,000. The agitation being carried on by a few persons in favor of invoking the referendum upon the Lewis and Clark Fair bill and the corporation tax bill has caused an investigation of the cost of a special election, and the above figures are the result. The official figures in the office of Secretary of State Dunbar showing the actual cost of conducting the last general election disclose that it cost $57,537.81. This does not include the cost of printing poll books and tally sheets, but does include the cost of printing ballots. For a special election the only difference in cost would be in the printing of ballots. This difference would not be great, however, for the same number of ballots would be required. The ballots would be smaller in size.

Austin Craig, erstwhile editor and publisher of the Washington County Hatchet, who was placed under arrest by Deputy United States Marshal Hall on an indictment by the United States grand jury, charging him with larceny of $72.30 in money from a registered mail package, gave a statement to the Telegram. Mr. Craig sets forth that he has invited the investigation in perfect confidence that his position in relation to the charge is unassailable. He further intimates that the attitude toward him on the part of the postal inspectors was not friendly at the time of making the investigation of his affairs at Whitney. Mr. Craig reiterated his previous statement to the effect that he did not receive the package, as charged, and that he would have been perfectly willing to make good the amount with the understanding that it be considered a fine for carelessness in not reporting promptly the nonarrival of the package. Mr. Craig says he is now collecting papers with which, when the case comes to trial, he expects to establish his innocence.

Uncle Sam After Them.

EUGENE, Ore., April 25.—The present whereabouts of Miss Marie Ware, who is wanted by the Federal authorities to answer charges of crookedness while acting as United States Commissioner, cannot be learned. She has not been in Eugene for the past three weeks. When she left here she said she was going to visit friends. It is learned that she spent a few days in Portland, then went to Seattle and visited a few days, returning about a week ago. She did not stop in Eugene, but went through on the night train, whether to visit some intimate friends in Ashland or to go farther south cannot be learned. She has apparently made no effort to conceal her whereabouts. Before leaving here she told some of her friends she expected an indictment would be brought against her.

She was well qualified to act in land matters coming before her, and all who have had business relations with the office will so testify. Her friends are confident that if any crookedness has been done it has been at the instigation of another party, who has seemed to have undue influence over her.

Reports of a crooked transaction in timberland matters, in which an outsider figured, and which was quickly hushed up when discovered, were current some time ago. Her friends do not think she would commit any frauds for personal gain, and if she has done so it has been to shield or aid those who have seemed to have an undue influence.

Expensive Electricity.

Several times within the last eight or ten years—since the great success of the experiment of "harnessing Niagara" became apparent—some one has proposed to generate electricity in the coal regions of Pennsylvania and to transmit it to New York by wire. Just now the matter is receiving fresh attention, and our esteemed contemporary, "The New York Herald," prints three interviews in regard to it. Charles R. Huntley, vice-president of the corporation which distributes in Buffalo current derived from the falls, views the scheme with favor; L. B. Stillwell, one of the leading electrical engineers of the country, fails to discover any economy in it; and the technical periodical devoted to electrical interests also points out a minor drawback. Mr. Huntley is an executive official of rare capacity, and is the right man in the right place. He is not an authority in science, though; and it is not disconcerting to attach less importance to his views than to the other ones just referred to.

Coal is used in New York City and vicinity for three purposes: To warm houses, to generate steam for manufacturing purposes and to develop electricity for light and power. Experts agree that the first of these kinds of service cannot be performed by electricity cheaply. Even on trolley cars, where current is available, the operation is a wasteful one. No one disputes the fact; and no electrical engineer would think of recommending the application of that system to the dwellings or offices. Coal stoves, oil stoves and gas stoves are much more economical. A long time will probably elapse before the manufacturers who do not now employ electricity to drive their machinery will introduce that exceedingly useful agent. Suppose, for a moment, that they had already done so, though, and that they were on the same footing as the electric light and electric railway companies. Then the problem to be solved would be this: Would the electricity cost less if produced at the mines and sent here by overhead wires than if the coal were hauled to New York and burned at this end of the line? Mr. Stillwell declares that he can see no advantage in the former plan over the latter; and his judgment will give the project a bad black eye.

Any one who has mastered the elements of long distance transmission knows that there are three important considerations to be included in estimating the wisdom of employing it. One is the cost of copper wire, and another is the loss of energy by leakage and resistance. Both of these have a fixed ratio to distance. Hence a short line would pay when a long one would not. Years ago there was much talk about supplying Syracuse, Albany and even New York with electricity from Niagara. No one hears it now. Even Rochester, only seventy-five miles from the falls, has not yet been accommodated; and the distance between Wildesbarre and New York is twice as great. A third factor in the vexing problem is the voltage, or pressure used. Owing to the dry air in Colorado, Montana and California it has been feasible to employ 40,000 and even 50,000 in those States. The voltage on the Niagara-Buffalo line was raised from 11,000 to 22,000 two years ago; but owing to the dampness of the atmosphere in the East it is questionable whether it will ever be safe to do much better than this here. Now, it takes more copper to conduct a given amount of energy at a low voltage than at a high one. Hence the service cannot be performed so economically near the Atlantic seaboard as in and beyond the Rocky Mountains.

It must be remembered, too, that unique commercial conditions prevail out on the Pacific Slope. Coal is scarce and expensive there. In spite of the cost of line construction and the heavy losses of power in transmission, therefore, electricity can be sent 150 or 200 miles by wire, and even then compete successfully with its rival. Mr. Stillwell concedes that. He limits his reasoning to those localities where the country is level and transportation is beset with little difficulty. If so sagacious and experienced an authority cannot see any money in the enterprise the outlook is indeed discouraging.—N.Y. Tribune Farmer.
