Others Saw Them.

Last Wednesday evening Mr. Reed, one of the chief promoters of the proposed Portland and Tillamook railway, came out here in company with Mr. Josslyn, said to be an associate of A. B. Hammond in the railroad business. The next morning they drove to Gales Creek as far as the summit, apparently looking over the proposed railway survey. A id returned in time to take the evening train for Portland. Just what such a visit means is problematical, but apparently it indicates a growing interest in the line on the part of Hammond. He controls the Portland-Astoria line, and knows the value of the Tillamook region for railway exploitation, but owing to the nature of the country he cannot well get down there from the north, and so it may be possible that he may be planning to go in from this way. Some company is yet going to build into the Tillamook region, and there is scarcely any doubt but that the most feasible route is up the Gales Creek Valley and across to Wilson River. One of the peculiarities of this visit by Mr. Reed and Mr. Josslyn was that they seemed not to want knowledge of their presence to get out.—Forest Grove Times.

Seven men were killed and five others injured by an explosion at Conrings' distillery at Peoria, Ill., Saturday. One large section of the five-story building was thrown into the air by the bursting of a copper cylinder 20 ft. in length and eight feet in diameter. Every man who was in the building at the time of the explosion was instantly killed, the injured being men who were on the outside.

BIG DEAL CLOSED.

The Colonization Company Buys Hacienda Near Colima.

Messrs. H. L. Bradford, Wm. Olsen, Louis Olsen, Henry Striker and C. A. Bailey, representatives of the Vallhalla Colonization and Improvement Company, who have for several weeks been prospecting in this neighborhood for a suitable site for a colony of well-to-do people from Oregon and Washington, on Wednesday closed a deal for the purchase of the Naranja Hacienda, located in the southwestern portion of the state of Jalisco, about twenty miles from Colima.

The price paid for the property was in the neighborhood of $1,000,000. It consists of over 200,000 acres of land, the greater part of it level, and some of it mountainous, the latter well timbered with tropical and other woods. The entire tract is forty-five miles long and from three to ten miles in width, and is watered by a number of streams, including the Tuxpan river. The surveyed route of the Colima branch of the Mexican Central Railroad crosses the property, and it is anticipated that another railroad will also run through it.

Operation have already been commenced to provide the hacienda with an irrigation system, which will irrigate 14,000 and cost $150,000. Some portions of the property are being worked by its late owners, and several thousand head of cattle will be placed at once upon the lands by the purchasers.

The members of the party, with the exception of Louis Olsen, left yesterday for the states, but will return within 90 days and set things in motion at the hacienda. Some of the colonists will return with them, and the rest, consisting in all of about one hundred families from Oregon and Washington, will come within a year. They are principally well-to-do Scandinavian-Americans, all well versed in agriculture and a number of them skilled in certain lines of manufacturing. They will come by water to Manzanillo, —Guadalajara Times.

About Noted People.

People close to William E. Corey, Charles M. Sciwab's successor as head of the United States Steel corporation, actually fear he will kill himself working. They say he is so wrapped up in affairs of the steel corporation that he is literally "working himself to death." For instance, they say that he lies awake night after night solving or attempting to solve problems that come up, and frequently at 2 or 3 o'clock in the morning will call up his lieutenants by telephone to consult them. His friends believe that no living man can go through this sort of thing and survive it.

Robert H. McCarter, the well-known New Jersey lawyer, who has been appearing as counsel for the Shipyard trust tells this story to illustrate how worthwhile the bonds of a corporation sometimes become: "When my father was a trustee of Princeton college, the late John L. Blair of Blairtown informed the board of trustees that he was going to give the college many thousands of dollars' worth of the bonds of a new western railroad. There was great rejoicing at Princeton. Every body celebrated over the gift. Then the bonds came. The trustees discovered that the donor had cut off the coupons for the next forty years."

Endless stories of Charles H. Hunt, chief of police of Portland, Me., are told by his admirers, and among them is one that illustrates the ready humor of the old man. At a dinner given by prominent citizens of that place, the chief was the principal guest, and in the course of the feast he was called upon to respond to the toast, "The Police." Amid applause, Mr. Hunt arose in the full dignity of his gorgeous uniform and in a silence indicative of the affection felt for him, said with a conical wink: "Here's to the police; first in war, first in peace, first in the pockets of the countryman."

Prince Joachim Albrecht of Prussia is like other male members of the royal family, an officer in the German army, but he is much fonder of music than of war. He has written the music for a ballet and is engaged upon an opera. He is a regular attendant at the theater and is said to resemble in character the late Prince George, who devoted much of his time to writing poetry. Some surprise is expressed at the public and democratic way in which a member of the royal family has gone among the composers, having his name "billed" like any other, and it is considered unlikely that the emperor may suddenly interfere.

The marriage of Miss Ruth Baird Bryan and William Homer Leavitt, was solemnized on Saturday at Fairview, Neb., the country home of William J. Bryan. The Chancellor of the Nebraska Wesleyan University, Dr. Huntington, an old-time friend of the bride and her parents was the officiating clergyman.

Strikes and lockouts at the mines in Cripple Creek and other gold-mining districts in Colorado have already reduced the mineral production of the state this year at least $2,500,000, and if the present conditions obtain until the end of the year, the production will fall more than $6,500,000 below what it would have been.

Quaint Features of Life.

Charles Heckel, of Milwaukie, fell and broke his neck a few days ago and still lives. He is totally paralyzed and only manages to breathe by the natural exercise of the diaphragm muscle. If this gives out before at least a partial recovery from the paralytic condition the patient is certain to die of suffocation. Heckel fell from a wagon and struck on his head and shoulders.

Scores of floral tributes were left at the home of A. G. Remsen of Plainfield, N. J., one day last week to be given to his mother, Mrs. Letitia Swartout Remsen, who celebrated her 100th birthday. One of them was an immense bank of dahlias, with the inscription "1803-1903." Mrs. Remsen was not fatigued by the reception of the callers. She insisted on seeing them all and spent some time in romping about the house with her 4-year-old great-grandson, Joseph Remsen Curtis of Richmond, Va. "I seem as if I had made a mistake in counting the years," said Mrs. Remsen. "I can't believe that I am really 100 years old."

Six-year-old Alvin Black who was operated upon at the New York State hospital at Tarrytown for a hip disease by Dr. Lorenz at the expense of Mrs. Armour, of Chicago, left the hospital cured last week. The boy, while suffering from congenital dislocation of the hip, heard about little Lolita Armour, daughter of a Chicago millionaire, who was operated upon by Dr. Lorenz. He made a large doll and sent it to the Armour child, and it affected her mother so much that she had Dr. Lorenz treat Alvin. The boy was so happy when he learned that he could go to his home in Rondout that he danced with joy. "Oh, I am so glad I can walk," said Alvin, as he strutted about the Tarrytown station. "I played with the other boys at the hospital and beat them all in a running race. I am going to make another doll and send it with a letter to that rich girl who had the doctor cure me."

Two years ago Henry Downey of the Downey cab and transfer line, Kakomo, Ind., went totally blind. This week his sight came back to him mysteriously and completely. He went to bed sightless one night. The next morning he awoke with restored vision. "The doctors say it is a miracle," said Downey, "but it is a fact. Whereas I was blind, now I see. At first I could not realize it. I pinched myself and ran about the room to make sure I was awake, fearing I was still asleep and dreaming. The great flood of light dazzled and confused me. The surroundings were new and unfamiliar. I was staggered and so bewildered that I first thought I had gone mad. I had lost all conception of color, form, distance and time, and everything seemed new. I was a newly-born babe in a world of sunshine. I now see as well as I ever did, and appreciate the blessing of sight as I never did in my life before."

If Colombia expected this country to be thrown into a state of excitement by the rejection of the ishmanian canal treaty it has been undeceived. Perhaps the Colombian Congress thought there would be a rush to increase the consideration offered, but there again that body has been disappointed. American sentiment on the subject is in the nature of disgust, coupled with a conviction that the matter will right itself in a short time. Colombia has acted foolishly. Though but one remove from bankruptcy, it has the most extravagant views of what it should be paid in solid cash and cash annuity to allow the construction of a work of the greatest value to the commerce of the world. No nation but the United States will ever build it. The offer made was munificent Colombia, to its own detriment, is daily losing the best opportunity it ever had. This country is not worrying. Colombia's folly will injure only itself.

Venezuelan papers attack Americans and Europeans indiscriminately. In fact the Venezuelans appear to be more hostile to America than to any other country. Some of this feeling was shown in 1896 after Cleveland and Olney had saved them from England in the boundary dispute. It came uppermost in 1903, not long after Roosevelt and Hay had called a halt on Germany and the other countries which were going to wipe Venezuela off the map. President Castro has been credited with sense. He cannot live up to his reputation, however, unless he stops those newspaper assaults on the United States in his country.

Between the Georgia proposition to deport American negroes and the foreign combination to grow cotton, the present production of 10,000,000 bales a year in the United States seems to be a point of attack. Canada also is trying to attract Southern negroes to its western lands. Deporting the negro from the South is a large proposition from the labor point of view.

A Colombian Senator who appears to have reliable information says, that the commission appointed to draft a new proposition for a Panama Canal will report it to be useless. The Senate will examine the legality of the canal company's extension of time on the contract of Macinia Calderon before taking any new action on the canal proposition.
