Editorial Snap Shots.

Everybody knows that the Headlight is the best home newspaper and advertising medium.

Politics begin to bubble up once in a while—also more aspirants than there are offices to go round.

Court houses in Oregon appears to be in hard luck. The fire fiend wiped out the court house in Cook county.

We are beginning to wonder whether that august body, the Port of Tillamook Commission, is well—under the weather.

We think we express the sentiment of the people of Tillamook county when we say their sympathies are with the little Jap.

Weddings have quieted down some and we have to fall back on the old, familiar expression: "They'll be in on the next boat!" Sure thing.

Clatsop County is figuring upon erecting a $60,000 court house. Our neighbors have set a pretty big pace for Tillamook County, and we shall have to be content with something more modest.

We are constantly in receipt of letters from business and professional men seeking locations. From a newspaper point of view it may be the wrong thing to do, but we have to reply: "All businesses and professions over done."

As was expected, there is likely to be some opposition to Congressman Hermann when the next congressional convention meets. As far as Tillamook is concerned, we do not know but what Mr. Hermann is good enough and it is well to let well alone and not pick up a new, untried man for so important a position.

Carl Haberlach, our promising, young, rising attorney, is getting a little worried lest leap year leave him single. Now girls don't be bashful, for Carl is a nice young man and means business.—Herald.

Rats! Carl don't mean business, for if he did he would have fallen all over himself to get into the Headlight matrimonial hand wagon. He's a diplomat—with the ladies—with a soft spot in his heart for all the "sweet young things."

It would have been the proper thing for the experts, when they examined the county books and found that the previous county court had illegally compromised a number of taxes, for them to have itemized the discrepancies, as they did with the other county officials. But as they recommend an investigation, no doubt the county court will take the proper course and do so.

We received a letter from parties at Grants Pass who are coming to Tillamook to locate in a few months, but they do not want to buy farm property near a town that sanctions wide open gambling. Gambling houses are an all round detriment to any city and every community—and a damnable curse to the rising generation and those who are impregnated with the gambling fever.

It looks like all smoke and no fire with the Skinner transportation company, and by way of a little variation, we would suggest, seeing they have made a failure building the railroad to Tillamook, that Wm. Reid and John McCracken take up the proposition to build a steamer to ply between Portland and Tillamook, and that Skinner build the Portland, Nehalem & Tillamook railroad and become the whole think in that company. How we Tillamookers do get fooled and humbugged with railroad and new steamship propositions. The next fellow that comes into the editor's sanctum with some "hot air" scheme we intend to strike a match, and if there is an explosion in the Headlight office do not get scared, for you'll know what is going off so suddenly.

From present indications there will be another big demand for chittim bark at good prices this year, and those who are contemplating peeling should not be in too big a hurry to contract with the people who are buying the bark. From what we can learn the bark will not be less than 20c. a pound this year, and as there are those who predict that it will go to $1 before long owing to its scarcity, it looks as though a lot of properly dried chittim bark on hand is as good as a fat bank account. Anyway, it should prove a source of big revenue to those who may get the chittim fever this year. As a large number of persons did not "catch on" in time last year to do any peeling, the Headlight man gives this gentle tip so that those who want to "peel off" and get into the peeling business will have plenty of time to make their arrangements to do a land office business.

Looking back at the large number of citizens who voted for the late Henry H. Alderman, it is plain to see that they believed in his integrity and, therefore, were surprised when they heard of the shortage in his account. It was a simple case of misplaced confidence, in which the late sheriff was wholly to blame. Such disclosures bring about a lack of confidence in the public mind in our public officers, but because one happens to err it is not right to lose confidence in them and run away with the foolish notion that all officials are dishonest. A careful perusal of the report filed by the auditors last week goes to prove that we should have confidence in the integrity of our officials, for with the exception of Alderman's shortage, which would not have occurred had the books been expeted every year, there is much to feel satisfied that all the other mistakes were simply clerical errors.

We have come to the conclusion that of the great influx of home-seekers that is anticipated this year in Oregon, but a very few will set their optics on Tillamook and the best dairying county in the state. There is a reason, or several reasons for this: The lack of a railroad and quick traveling, and our antiquated toll roads. For instance, suppose you arrived in Portland from the East or Middle West looking for a new location, would you come to Tillamook when informed something like this: "Why, man, that country over there is hemmed in with toll roads and they're asking $200 an acre for land." Now, wouldn't your eyes bug out in wonderment to be told that the people who lived at the jumping off place in the Northwest had hemmed themselves in with toll roads? Naturally, you'd think that was not a very desirable place to go when a man has to go down in his jeans every time he drives over a toll road. Consequently, the person say, "Well, if that's so, I don't want to go to Tillamook," and they miss seeing the garden spot of Oregon.

If those who are in the habit of wasting so much time chewing the political rag with the expectation that lightning is going to land them into some political office would turn their attention and energies to peeling chittim bark they will have more satisfaction and more money at the end of the year than they would if they were elected to the best paying position in the county. There's only a few who can get a political office, and they bring no money into the county, while, on the other hand, hundreds of our citizens who have chittim bark on their mind will be able, from present indications, to make quite a little stake and be instrumental in bring a large sum of money into the county. There will sure to be a lot of disappointed and sore-head politicians after the election is over, but not so with the chittimites, for they will have a broad smile when gathering in the yellow boys for their season's work. It is a well-known fact that those who went peeling bark last year made quite a nice stake, and we will gamble politics will not take much of their time or thought once they get started again, for they'll "make hay" while the sun shines.
