The Tillamook Headlight
Fred C. Baker, Publisher.

Which Do You Want?

It is a little surprising to the HEADLIGHT, in view of the fact that the dairymen of Tillamook have enjoyed unusual high prices for their butter fat, last year being unprecedented for high prices and prosperity amongst dairymen in the history of the county, that any of them should want to go back to democratic hard times and low prices for butter fat, unless it is that they are getting tired of republican prosperity. Republican prosperity has placed a number of men in this county in good financial condition, and it is not to be presumed that they will go back on the party and vote for democratic candidates, yet this is often done by voters who take no pains to know what their vote signifies when they cast their vote for democratic hard times candidates. The votes for joint representative and joint state senator, and also the county ticket, will determine whether the dairymen want Tillamook to remain in the republican prosperity column or in the democratic hard times column, for that is the issue before the people as much today as it ever was. Let us ask this question: When dairymen are doing well, is it not to their interest to vote for the party which gave them such a large amount of prosperity? Do not be deceived by campaign lies, for the parties who want you to vote for democratic candidates are wanting you to do so so that they can again enjoy the benefit of democratic hard times by discounting county warrants 50c. on the dollar. Those who want a repetition of this will vote the democratic ticket or for some of the democratic candidates, for to argue the question down to a fine point or other construction can be put on your vote next month than this, for you will be either voting for or against republican prosperity.

The Same Old Fight is On.

The HEADLIGHT appeals to the loyalty and patriotism of republicans in Tillamook county to stand by their party, their organization, and their ticket, for if republican principles are worth anything they certainly are worth standing by and voting for. The political situation in Tillamook is like this. The most influential business men of this county and city, the best and most successful dairymen in the county, went into the republican primaries and elected delegates to the county convention. The delegates to that convention were as intelligent a lot of men as could be found in the county, representative republicans from all over the county. No one will deny this. One of the duties of the convention had to perform was to nominate a county ticket out of the numerous candidates who aspired for office. The delegates used their own discretion and in their judgment selected the best men to represent the party, and they returned to their homes well pleased with the ticket and the generally manner in which some of the aspirants accepted defeat and swung into line and continued in line. The convention was certainly harmonious and went off most pleasantly. But as the choice of the convention did not suit J. W. Maxwell, G. W. Sappington, W. G. Chance, Claude Thayer and his hansom friend R. M. Watson, the republican party in Tillamook county is now characterized, for political effect, as a corrupt, ring rule party. If that is the case, then every republican who went into the republican primaries and convention must be ring rulers and corruptionists, for the HEADLIGHT fails to see who else can be, for they nominated the candidates. Now the object of Maxwell, Sappington, Watson, Chance and Thayer is to defeat the republican ticket and elect the democrats to office. And for what object are they fighting the republican party? Simply to rule or ruin the republican party, and we wish to call the attention of republicans to the fact that it is the same faction that is fighting the republican party this year that fought it two and four years ago, with the addition of C. W. Talmage and R. M. Watson as recruits to the half a dozen turncoats who have pitted themselves against the republican party and have been nobnobbing with the democratic party, where they have been received with open arms. That being the case, there is only one thing for the HEADLIGHT to do, as it has done before, and that is to appeal to the patriotism of every loyal republican to stand by the party and the ticket which some of the best republicans and most influential men nominated in open convention. Every candidate scratched on the republican ticket makes the republican vote that much less. We do not think our appeal will be in vain, for as far as we are aware we do not know of any disposition to turn the republican party over to such men as Sappington, Maxwell, Watson or Thayer.

Another "Independent!"

On Saturday ex-County Judge G. W. Sappington filed a petition as an "independent" candidate for justice of the peace for the second justice district, and this is taken as meaning that Sappington is running to defeat the regular republican nominee for justice of the peace, and is the avowed "independent" saloon candidate, as the names on the petition clearly prove:

L. L. Stillwell,	S. C. Morris,
W. G. Chance,	G. Bryant,
Geo. Tene,	J. D. Morris,
James E. Paldin,	A. E. Holden,
Ed. F. Laughlin,	C. B. Handley,
H. A. Snow,	G. A. Barnard,
C. B. Hadley,	A. D. Barnard,
Jas. W. Hunt,	A. C. Vogler,
W. H. Eberman,	D. C. H. Ellison,
W. F. Richardson,	O. J. Edwards,
Clyde Clements,	John Perry,
W. A. Williams,	Byron Clark,
P. H. Doughnev,

If there are any republicans amongst the above signers, it is evident they are not willing to support the regular republican nominee for justice of the peace, and having thus shown their hand, the lines are being sharply drawn in this election. Sappington's county saw mill notoriety and now his opposition to the regular republican nominee will act as a regular boomerang upon himself in June, and it is only right and proper that it should, for those who cast a vote for Sappington cannot have the county's interest at heart. No doubt our democratic brethren will pass the word around that the democrats must vote for Sappington, but mark what the HEADLIGHT says, there are dozens of good, honest democrats who are hot in the collar because their party is being made the cat's paw for a few republican turncoats.

New Irrigation Projects.

A few days ago the secretary of the interior approved new irrigation projects the estimated cost of which is $21,000,000, making the total amount of reclamation work approved to date $27,000,000. It is stated that this not only exhausts the fund now on hand for enterprises of this kind, but mortgages for several years to come all receipts for irrigation purposes. There have been fourteen projects, scattered through as many states and territories, adopted, and it is estimated by the officials that something like 1,000,000 acres of land that is now utterly worthless for grazing and agricultural purposes will be converted into fertile and productive farms upon the completion of the government dams and reservoirs contemplated in the irrigation projects. Those in charge of the work say that in the course of the next year or two new homes for thousands of families will be thrown open for entry on public lands. The charges for these homesteads will be nominal and every precaution will be taken to prevent syndicates of the land grabbers from monopolizing the sites to the exclusion of the home seekers.

It thus appears that this great work of government irrigation, which means so much for the west and for the material benefit of the whole country, is making good progress and undoubtedly is being carried on with the greatest care and practicable economy. From what has already been done it is possible to get an idea of the enormous character of the undertaking and the great cost which it involves. It may be a generation before the work of reclamation is completed and the expense will be vast, but no one familiar with the matter doubts that the results will most abundantly repay the cost and that the region reclaimed will contribute most generously to the wealth of the nation. That there will be a demand for the irrigation lands as rapidly as they become available is certain, as evidenced by the fact already many persons are endeavoring to secure lands which the officials are not prepared to dispose of and which are not in a condition for occupancy.

How it Goes with Turncoats.

This is how chronic office-seekers act: After holding office in their own party, and on finding they cannot hold on any longer, they commence to back and complain, with the idea of defeating the very party that once honored them. Failing in this they come out as independent or "reform" candidates, and also failing in this, they end up by joining the democratic party or the party that has some kind of aism attached to it. As the republican party in Tillamook has so many office seekers, the county is under the fire of the "independents," "reformers" and "turncoats," who are trying to persuade the people that the republican party is rotten and run by ring rule methods, while they, the bolters, are little political angels dropped down into Tillamook to "reform" the party and the taxpayers who have no further use for them as public officials. Surely republicans of this county are not going to be deceived and humbugged and induced to scratch and weaken the republican ticket. Republicans in this county in previous years have sat down on the bolters most severely, and the sentiment is growing much stronger that those who go into an open political fight and will not abide by the will of the majority, ought to be downed and kept down.

Quaint Features of Life.

Paul Lasch, a young Louisville (Ky.) man, won $3,000 by reason of an infirmity, stuttering. He wanted to bet on Alice Lloyd in the second race, but he began to stutter when he got in line with the bookmaker. The latter looked appealingly to a bystander, who said: "He is trying to bet on Lady Lasca." The bookmaker filled out the ticket and handed it to Lasch, who began to protest, but too late. Alice Lloyd finished sixth in a large field.

It is said that St. Louis exposition authorities have found it necessary to have a series of signs painted to be posted in the Filipino village, reading, "Keep Your Shirts On!" or whatever is the Filipino equivalent. The little brown brothers don't wear much, but even this little, it is said, they have an unpleasant habit of removing at the most unexpected times and places. If they do this now it is not difficult to imagine what they will do when the weather warms up. Their clothing, when they wear it, consists of a narrow strip, called a gee string, at the loins and a hat. They are particular about the hat.

"Going along the street the other forenoon," says the Vermilion (S. D.) Republican, "we saw a woman out in a yard whipping a carpet on the line with a mop. The woman's dress gaped badly at the waist and her disheveled hair was partly crowned by a red handkerchief knotted at the corners. Her eye flashed and the dirt flew. Once the strings of the mop lovingly caught her about the neck. Before we were out of earshot her timid hubby came to the door and asked her how many loaves he should cut the dough into. She gave him the magic number, told him to grease the knife, see what the baby was into and fix up a good fire. House cleaning time—wheew!"

Patrick J. McNamara, once a pugilist of note, now a saloonkeeper in Baltimore, is a terror to the police at times. One of these times arrived last week when he created a panic in his neighborhood, tossed out several policemen as though they were feather-weights, and was not subdued until a squad of policemen had made a combined attack on him. McNamara was let off easily on his promise to go to an asylum. He returned next day, went to the saloon and for the cash register. His wife ordered him to desist. McNamara refused. Fifteen minutes later he appeared at the police station in a dilapidated condition and with blood streaming from his ear. He asked for a warrant for his wife, whom he accused of knocking him out. She appeared, acknowledged the accusation and paid her fine.

Two men who had worked together for fifteen years and had grown to be devoted comrades died suddenly at Hartford, Conn., within a few hours of each other. The medical examiner, when called to examine the body of the second man, suggested that the death of the other was perhaps the cause. The men were Henry W. Collett and Charles Edwards, the former 60 and the latter 65 years old. Collett became suddenly ill in his room and told the land lady to telephone for Edwards, who was at work. She did so, and Edwards hurried to the house. A physician found Collett suffering with cerebral spinal meningitis, which is epidemic in Hartford. Collett was taken to the hospital, where he died. Edwards was with him when he died, and grieved greatly. A few hours afterward he fell dead from heart disease, aggravated, it is believed, by grief for his friend.

"One of our readers," says an English newspaper, "sends us a curious instance of physical agility which he culled from a serial story. The passage runs as follows: "The stranger granted, and I noticed that he smiled faintly for the first time, but just at that moment he turned, and catching sight of my back through the half opened door, started slightly."

EDDY'S CORPORATION LAW.

Income From the Corporations Amounts to Over $300,000.

SALEM, MAY 21.—One year ago today the Eddy corporation law went into effect. The state has received under the provisions of that law $106,866.03. During the first year of the operation of the new law, 465 new domestic corporations have qualified for the transaction of business in this state.

The total number of domestic corporations is now 2022, which number, with the 200 foreign corporations makes a total of 2222 companies authorized to do business in Oregon. The total income was made up as follows:

Declaration fees, foreign corp.	$10,000.00
Organization fees, new domes.
Dissolutions, decreases and supplemental	775.00
Annual license fees	85,216.03

Total from all sources.....$106,866.03

To this sum will yet be added several thousand dollars of delinquencies which will be paid as corporations find difficulty in transacting business without complying with the law.

During the next 12 months the receipts from declaration fees of foreign corporations will be very small, but this will be more than made up from annual license fees from foreign corporations. In the past year many of the foreign corporations paid only for a fraction of a year, but hereafter they will pay for full years.

The income of the state from the Eddy corporation tax law will therefore exceed $100,000 a year and within a year or two will probably reach $120,000 or $100,000 a month. The expense of maintaining the corporation department is about $2000 a year.
