It is reported that the recent visit of A. B. Hammond to Seaside was in connection with the extension of the present terminus of the railroad to Tillamook. That arrangements have been made with the mill company to extend it to their timber, also to the large timber holdings of Mr. Hammond, and that a contract has been made with the Northwest Construction Co., who are furnishing rock for the jetty, to build two spurs to the rock quarries south of Seaside and that the rock will be taken from these places. *

It is stated by those who claim to know that work will be commenced on the extension of the road immediately and a large force of men put to work.—Seaside Sentinel. *

Albert Mason is erecting a nice, convenient up-to-date barn on his place, the dimensions being 35x40ft., and since he has been relieved of the deputy clerkship he has gone to work in earnest improving his place. We think that Albert is entitled to a good deal of praise for the pains-taking and business-like manner in which he did his work while deputy clerk. He was always regular at his work, very obliging to those who had business in the office, and adapted himself and became thoroughly conversant with the work of that office, so much so that he could step into the office of clerk and do the business as well, if not better, than the best clerk that the county ever had. We wish him as much success in running his dairy ranch as when he was working for the county. *

Last week, W. Riggins, of Fairdale, hired a horse and saddle from the Carlton livery stable with the promise that it would be returned in a few hours. As the horse was not returned as agreed the liveryman began a search and found that Riggins had tried to sell the horse, and after chasing him for two days without securing the horse, they swore out warrants for his arrest and Joe Bower retained Sunday morning after the thief. Riggins had started for Tillamook and Brower telephoned to the toll gate to head him off. Accordingly, when he reached the gate he was given a scare and told that the officers were after him. He turned back and took to the timber, where he was closely followed. The chase became so warm that he left the horse and disappeared in the brush and gave Brower the dodge. The horse and saddle were secured and returned to their owners.—McMinnville News. *

Free Lecture this Evening.

Dr. Joseph Koshaba will lecture at the Presbyterian church this (Thursday) evening. His subject is "Persia; Its People, Customs and Religion." Dr. Koshaba is a native of Persia, and when he came to the United States ten years ago he could not speak a word of the English language. Since then he has worked his way through college, studied medicine and obtained a diploma from a medical college, has become a citizen of this country and will return to Persia with an American wife this fall to practice medicine. He will dress in Persian costume during the lecture, which is free, but a collection will be taken up to defray his expenses. He has been lecturing in Portland and Astoria, where they were highly appreciated. *

What a contrast there is in the weather this side of the Coast. Come over and get cooled off, ye outsiders. *

The local democrats who could not stomach Parker before the nomination will not be able to swallow him now. *

A fire feels comfortable, anyway, even if we are near the "hot place" over in the valley on the other side of the Coast range. *

Good roads are certainly necessary for business and pleasure, and, furthermore, it is a humane movement in behalf of dumb animals. *

It looks as though all the visitors who have come to Tillamook during the past few weeks have come from the "hot place" by the way they shiver and hug the heaters in the evening. *

One would suppose that A. B. Hammond, if he contemplates extending his Seaside railroad to Tillamook right away would be around once in a while at this end of the proposed extension. *

After several months of nice weather, the patter, patter of the rain was heard again this morning. But we hope this is only a passing shower, as most of the farmers are in the midst of hay harvest. *

If the fugal lords of Tillamook county would get in and settle their petty differences and then all pull together in the interest of the county, there would probably grow out of it something that would boost industries and business. *

Although business may be a little slow at present, Tillamook City will always be a good agricultural town, and though there is nothing in sight to anticipate that the population will grow for the next few years, when things do begin to move in Tillamook—look out. *

Who is the most particular in the choice of their company, a man or a woman? This was a question that we heard asked last week. The answer was like this: Men do not choose as their companions, or care to be seen on the street with women who use profane language, smoke or chew, or are of bad repute. *

Every Tillamooker will give a broad smile when they read Father Schell's latest newspaper notoriety. It seems to us, if we are not mistaken in the time, that it was Archbishop Christie's predecessor who appointed Father Schell to Tillamook. And that being the case, it is certainly surprising that he should want to distort facts. *

Tillamook will always be a prosperous section of Oregon, because the feed question, which is of vast importance to successful and profitable dairying, is the strong point which makes this county pre-eminently the dairyman's paradise. To be able to raise cheap feed is one of the great features in favor of the county; and being able to raise an abundant crop of hay, were a crop failure is a thing that has never been experienced here, makes this an idea section of country for those to locate in who are looking to the West for a new location. *

The Oregonian says: "Henry G. Davis, of West Virginia, nominated for the vice-presidency, is nearly 81 years of age. His distinction, beyond that of his advanced age, is his enormous wealth. He is a member of all the great trusts, and is to 'work' them for the campaign fund." As the common expression goes that it is all fair in love and politics, we certainly do not see that it is any worse for democrats to "work" the trusts than it is for republicans to pull their leg for campaign funds. We all have an idea that Mark Hanna made the trust magnates dig up, and from this neck of the woods it looks as if both the old parties will work the trusts to a finish this year. Anyway, they can stand being "worked" once in a while, for they "work" the people as slick as anything. *

Everybody will be glad to know that the average of human life is increasing. That fact is attested by a recent compilation of statistics made by the Bureau of Statistics at Washington, from which it appears that the average age of the American at death was a little over 31 years in 1890 and at the last census it was a little over 38 years. It is also noted that the proportion of deaths to population decreased 10 per cent during the ten years, which is a most encouraging fact. The explanation of this is easily found in the better methods of living which are peculiar to modern existence. Sanitary and hygienic conditions are very much better than they were 20 or 30 years ago and they are being constantly improved. *

The weather conditions this year have been peculiar in Oregon, not that we are a weather prophet enough to account for it. In Eastern Oregon heavy rains have blessed that dry section of country, with an occasional cloud burst thrown in to make the conditions interesting. In the Willamette valley it has been tropical for individuals and tough on vegetation. Even in Old Tillamook, where the rain as a general thing never knows when to let up in the spring of the year, there was a marked change, with beautiful bright weather. If Eastern Oregon could have some of Western Oregon's rainfall, and we could have more of their clear days here it would be a blessing to both sections. But for what reason the conditions have changed this year we do not pretend to be wise enough to know, so will leave an old weather prophet like Captain Dawson to wrestle with the problem. It looks, however, that the Willamette valley has got the worst of the changed conditions thus far by becoming the "hot place" of Oregon. *

As to subjects for discussion by good roads clubs, it will be proper to take up the matter of taxation upon improved and unimproved farm property. There is something unjust and radically wrong when every improvement upon agricultural land is tax to its full extent, or in other words the system of taxing industry, thrift and perseverance, while the land belonging to the non-resident, the unproductive agricultural land, the land owned by the speculators, although enhancing in value every year on account of the industry of others, is only taxed a nominal amount. Here is something that should furnish good roads clubs a subject that should elucidate the injustice of taxing the person who improves his farm for all it will stand, and not raising the taxes on the unproductive land. For instance, if one man buys a piece of land to improve and make a home, and another man buys a piece adjoining for speculation and allows it to remain idle, we say it is wrong to tax to death the person who makes the improvements and helps develop the county, while the person who does nothing is let off with a nominal sum. If we could have our way we would reverse this to some extent to make it more equitable. *

How foolish it is to think that saloons bring trade to a town. When only quite recently Tillamook City had five saloons, did they help to make or kill business? We notice that two have gone out of business for the want of the business that some people claim that saloons bring to a town. Take for instance the only two towns that are of any importance in Washington county, and what are the facts. Hillsboro is the county seat and saloons are permitted. Forest Grove is a closed town on account of the university being there. Now what do we find? Forest Grove is having a steady growth right along, with new industries going in and a large number of nice residences being put up, while on the other hand Hillsboro is making no progress or improvement, in fact, as a country town it has deteriorated and gone back. Here is a practical illustration in our neighboring county where the argument that the saloons bring business and will kill a town if they are closed out does not bear out the argument, for it is actually reversed in those two towns—the "dry" town being progressive and building up and the "wet" town being in a state of stagnation as far as enterprise and push is concerned. *

Refuses to Close Down.

SEATTLE, Wash., July 11.—The Weyerhaeuser Timber Company will not stop cutting logs in the Clark County camps which the big corporation opened last year. This is the positive answer that the big timber concern gave to the committee of Columbia River loggers, who asked the co-operation of the company in securing a shutdown of all Columbia River camps. The Weyerhaeuser Company, however, has conceded to the other loggers the privilege of curtailing the amount of logs thrown upon the market. The company will agree to store all its logs and to maintain the price of the Columbia River Association without a skip. The company promises to adhere to any policy outlined, save that of closing its own camps, which was the proposition submitted by the lumbermen's committee. *

When the Weyerhaeuser Company began cutting in the Vancouver district, the necessity of holding logs for some future time was a factor considered by the company. It was decided that instead of curtailing the cut, the company would store its output, and provision was made for this emergency. At an expense of more than $20,000 the Weyerhaeuser Company constructed a big storage pond, in which logs cut in the Weyerhaeuser camps will be held, if necessary, to preserve prices until the market will take the output. *

To an Oregonian correspondent who asked him, George Long, manager of Weyerhaeuser interests, stated that the company must cut its timber to prevent loss. The Clark County fires two years ago scorched their timber, and it will take five years to cut these trees. Mr. Long said that his company would do anything short of closing its camps to sustain Columbia River prices. *
