At a special school meeting of the Latimer district last week, which was called for the purpose of considering the propriety of teaching the ninth grade, this was voted down by a vote of two to one.
Elmer Hoag has suddenly hopped back to Tillamook from his hopping expedition, having run across six or more hop pickers for every hop pole. So his hopping out of the county was a hopping loss.

Mr. A. S. Palhemus, of the U.S. Engineer's Office in Portland, came in last week to look over and check up the government work being done in Tillamook. About another month's work will exhaust the money available for improvements, and during that time a number of snags will be removed from the slough.
Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Reher was down from Wilson on Tuesday, and as it is eight years since the latter was in the city, she found many improvements here. They have their new house completed and are now comfortably fixed after having been burned out, which was followed by six of their children being taken down with measles.

After a long spell of dry weather, probably the longest in the history of the county, a light shower of rain came on Wednesday afternoon, which continued through to night. Today the indications are, with the wind in the south, favorable for more of the long looked for moisture, and which will start the grass to grow.

Maggie J. Buttz, plaintiff, vs. Elam Buttz, defendant, is a divorce suit filed in the circuit court. The grounds for the divorce in the complaint is for gross intemperance and cruel and inhuman treatment on the part of the defendant. These parties were married the 19th of May, 1881, in Benton County, Ore. Six children were born of the union, three of whom are minors.

Married, on Friday evening, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. L. D. Ackley, who are parents of the bride, Harvey Williams and Miss Myrtle Ackley. Justice G. B. Alley officiated at the ceremony, a number of relatives being present. The newly married couple are well and favorably known in the Fairview district, and their friends wish them a long life of happiness. The young couple will make their home on the John Paquet place, which was purchased by Mrs. Williams and given to her son as a wedding present.

Peter Schield has rented F. M. Lamb's dairy ranch at South Prairie and will take possession on Monday, and next day Mr. Lamb will pull up stakes and take his departure for the classic city of Eugene, where he will make his future home. He was one of Tillamook's early settlers and grew up with the country, having settled in the county in 1866, and during all those years took a great interest in its development and prosperity. Mr. Lamb is greatly respected by all who know him, and we are sorry to see him join the exit whereby the county is losing quite a number of her best citizens.

We are sorry to have to announce the death of Mrs. Smith, wife of Mr. C. A. Smith, of Blaine, which occurred on Wednesday morning. The deceased was a daughter of Mrs. Donaldson, who has been in poor health for some time and her husband had made arrangements to take her to California to see whether a change of climate would benefit her. The funeral will take place this (Thursday) afternoon, and as the deceased was much respected and beloved by those who knew her, a large number of sympathizing friends will attend. The bereaved husband, mother and relatives have the sympathy of the people in this the hour of their sorrow.

A suit was filed in the circuit court on Monday by C. A. Keep, doing business under the firm name and style of Keep & Company, vs. the Oregon Pacific Navigation Company, a corporation organized and doing business under the laws of the State of Oregon, F. H. Skinner, J. K. Locke and A. J. Parrington, defendants. There are six causes of complaint in this action: 1st, John Melville claims $285.60 for labor; 2nd, the Standard Box Factory claims $39.60 for merchandise; 3rd, G. Boese claims $930.00 for travelling around and attending to defendants' business; 4th, that during the year 1903 defendants agreed to purchase of C. A. Keep, the plaintiff, certain engines for $1,620, and having failed to do so, the plaintiff claims $570 damages; 5th, that defendants employed plaintiff to build certain boilers for $4,600. $50 of which was paid down, and on account of this work being delayed and then finally recinded by the defendants, plaintiff claims $1,250 for loss of time, profits and money paid out for material; 6th, for storage, plaintiff claims $4.50. In all, the suit is for $33070.70. The Oregon Pacific Navigation Company was the company that was to run a line of steamers between Tillamook and Portland, but, like so many railroad and steamship projects to bring Tillamook into closer touch with Portland, all that the promoters had to start on was "hot air," and this having become exhausted, the company and the promoters are being sued by those who were unfortunate in not looking into the flimsy project.

Anyway, what's become of the $60,000 water question and the water commission? Cold feet?
Who was it that loaded on the shingles that didn't belong to them in the west end of town the other day?
It's not a "Good Old Summer Time," but a good old summer's job getting the streets which were graded fixed.
It is a wonder that the bond agitators did not want to bond the city or a new city hall and city warrants at 50c. on the dollar.
Rollie, in posting the pictures of the republican candidates in his window, has made the president to turn his back on his running mate.
When W. J. Bryan said "Judge Parker is not a fit man to be nominated by the democratic party or any other party," we suppose he knew what he was talking about.
They made a mistake when they named the company that was to run a line of steamers the Oregon Pacific Navigation Company. It should have been the Skinner Line.
Tillamook County is all right, even if there is a little stagnation in business, for that will pick up soon, after a good Tillamook down pour, which usually makes people feel good in this county.
It does amuse us to hear a peace officer say he'll arrest a person who is breaking the law if someone else will swear out a complaint. What are the taxpayers paying peace officers big fat salaries for, anyway?
What a misnomer to have an outsider advertising shark come to the city and write up business ads, for a big wad under the guise of patronizing home industries. The idea is so utterly inconsistent that it is enough to make a monkey grin.
Tillamook republicans, who knived at the June election several republican candidates, are now wanting to get into Roosevelt's band wagon. The republican candidates in this county were just as staunch republicans as Roosevelt ever was, and to knife one and shout for the other is an admixture of political inconsistency peculiar to some people in Tillamook.
We fail to see why some of the patrons of the Latimer school district should want part of the high school studies taught in that district when, by a little figuring with the directors of the Tillamook district they could give all their pupils who want to take those studies at a nominal charge in this city. That would be the cheapest and best course for districts like Fairview and the Latimer to follow if they are really in earnest and want to give their pupils the advantage of high school studies.

We guess we'll have to take water after Rollie's latest duck fit about the Headlight hustler. My! Such journalistic ability—now, don't snicker—was enough to give those who read it a duck fit also. We offer him our most humble thanks, and apology for that matter, for we do not wish the impression to get started that the Headlight man is running that sheet. We are accused wrongfully quite often of doing things we know nothing about, so do not want to be accused of writing matter that would give people duck fits.
Thus far, Tillamook County has not experienced any forest fires, although the conditions are such, owing to the unusual long spell of dry weather, should the wind change to the east, that all fear is not allayed. Considering that many of the dairymen have burned up slashing and logs in clearing their land this fall, it is surprising that they have all been kept under control. The heavy logs and deers the past few weeks have done much to prevent the spread of fires. It cannot be long now before it rains, and should the east wind keep off until then, Tillamook County will have passed through the dry season without any forest fires and destruction of timber or property. The rain has come.
The advertising fakirs have come and gone, carrying away with them well filled purses. But what good have they done the county or the business men who patronized them? None, whatever, for business is the same. From a business point of view, business men could have come to the Headlight office and obtained better write ups and considerable more space for one-third the money. But, don't you know, some men can easily be induced to dig up $10 to $25 to have the wool pulled over their eyes by an advertising fakir, whereas, if the Headlight man went to them and made a business proposition to give their businesses good advertising at reasonable rates, they would squire, talk about poor business and could not afford to advertise. We do not like to see advertising fakirs doing the town and the business men any more than we do outside fakirs soliciting trade which rightly belongs to the local merchant. As we said before, the advertising fakirs have come and gone and have carried off a pretty big wad, with little or no results, so it is no good crying over spilled milk, but whenever business men have a little money to spend for advertising let them patronize the Headlight, the home newspaper that has stood by the county and fought for its interests for so many years.
They are all coming to it. The sheriff of Union County has bowed to the will of the public demand, which is growing stronger every day in Oregon, that the state laws in regard to saloons and gambling be enforced. For the first time in the history of Union County saloons and all other business houses were closed on Sunday last, the drug stores opening for a few hours only. It will come Tillamook's turn soon, and no matter how distasteful to peace officers to do so in this county, they will have to enforce the law like other peace officers in the state. Saloon men, too, are catching on to the fact that their persistent violation of the law have boosted the anti-saloon sentiment and given it such a big following that a number of counties will vote to put the saloon men out of business next November. As the Headlight has repeatedly pointed out, it is the saloon men themselves who are responsible for the strong anti-saloon sentiment, especially in Tillamook county, and it is surprising to find so many voters who want to see the anti-saloon law given a fair trial, and who will vote that way in November. Perhaps, the saloon men have thought the Headlight man a crank the past few years in advocating the enforcement of the saloon and gambling laws, and in view of the fact that their persistent violation was sure to create a prejudice against their business, all that the Headlight man did was to look farther into the distance and saw what was coming by running a "wide open" town and "wide open gambling. So, on that score, they, not us, failed to see the signs of the times.

A Word of Seasonable Advice.
Patronize the home merchant, the business men of our city, who, for a number of years, have treated the people of this county square and honorable. To keep sending outside for merchandise and giving orders to solicitors who come into the county every summer and persuade people to buy inferior articles at a stiff price is not right nor proper. The business men of Tillamook City are deserving of home patronage, for they carry large stocks of fine and superior goods, and as they are all reliable business men, the people of this county can rest assured they will be treated fair and will get their money's worth. The way to build up a community is to patronize home merchants and home industries. The way to pull down a community is to patronize the people who come from other towns. We must speak a word of praise for our local merchants, and at the same time the Headlight man would advise the people not to send outside for merchandise nor buy a pig in a poke from those who solicit orders from outside places, but we recommend them to trade with local merchants; who are deserving of the local trade, whereas the strangers—the men we know nothing about and who does nothing for the county nor pay one cent taxes, are not entitled to nor should they be patronized. Do all your trading with home merchants in future, is the advice of the Headlight, and everybody in the county will be better satisfied in the end.
