

Hunters! Take Notice.

Mr. Hunter: Which do you prefer, a Cartridge loaded ten years ago at the factory, full of caked powder—they are kickers, but not killers—or our hand loaded cartridges, which are beyond competition, and are loaded with nothing but the Best, Clean Shooting Powder, Chilled Shot in Good Shells?

We have positive proof that our factory loaded to order cartridges were loaded since the order was sent in this fall, and not old stock.

Our Motto: Satisfaction guaranteed or money refunded.

TILLAMOOK GOES DRY.

A Strong Public Sentiment Against Saloons and their Gambling Joints.

WAS A VOTE OF CENSURE

Upon County and City Officials Who have Failed to do their Duty and Enforce the Law—Republican Land Slide.

The election on Tuesday in Tillamook county was of unusual interest to most people, not so much an account of the presidential election, but on account of the local option question that was to be decided at the polls whether the people wanted a "dry" or "wet" county, or, in other words, whether the people wanted to get rid of the saloons and the gambling joints some of the saloon keepers run in connection with their places of business. It was a clean cut question to be voted upon, and upon a law that was enacted by the people, and strictly non-partisan in character. Those who wanted to see the law adopted and properly enforced carried on a quiet and active campaign and won the election because they had facts and incidents to prove that some of the saloons in Tillamook City were turned into gambling joints, and it was against the best interests of the people to allow them to run "wide open." The saloon keepers did not make an aggressive fight, but a few days before election they began treating the question on the street grew quite warm, but no bad feeling resulted from this. Those who have watched the trend of public opinion in Tillamook county knew full well that prohibition would carry with a good majority, for the sentiment has been so pronounced against gambling and the disgraceful affairs that have taken place in the gambling joints of Tillamook City that even some of the saloon keepers saw they were whipped from the start. It was the general opinion that conditions needed purifying and the voters went about it in good shape, and with the aid of men who frequent the saloons and who saw the need of closing up the saloons and clearing out the gamblers. To that class belongs the credit of so large a majority for prohibition. There is another thing connected with the vote, for it is a vote of censure upon the county and city officials who have allowed the laws to be openly violated and who have done nothing to enforce the saloon and gambling laws, for it shows most plainly that public sentiment is opposed to men who will not do their duty, for which they are receiving good big salaries. No one could be made believe six months ago that Tillamook County would vote "dry," but it has come about, and it is going to be a number of years before the saloons are voted back now that the people have shown their contempt for the whiskey ring. Not only was it a surprise to some people that Tillamook County went "dry," but when Tillamook precinct, previously controlled in county and city elections by saloon keepers and gamblers, went "dry" also, it was freely admitted there must be something decidedly rotten going on in that precinct when the saloon people lost their grip on the saloon vote. It was that rottenness which, largely, made the voters cast their ballots against the saloons. Only three precincts, and but small ones, voted against prohibition—Foley, with a vote of 10 for, 11 against; Barnegat, 1 for, 5 against; Dolph, 4 for, 10 against—making a majority of only 11 votes for the three precincts. At the election in June, only two precincts, Tillamook and Dolph, voted against the law. At that election there were 566 votes cast for the law and 330 against.

Don't continue to pump water out of a deep well by hand for a lot of farm stock, thinking to save the price of a windmill, remarks the Wisconsin Agriculturalist, and then goes on to say we know of well-to-do farmers who have done this for twenty-five years rather than spend the money necessary to provide wind power. One could always see them at the pump, old and bent from hard work. Strange how some people make slaves of themselves for money; how they hide themselves behind a dollar and can't see out and beyond it to the many advantages that accrue to the thinking man. Time lost pumping water for a lot of cattle will soon pay for a mill, to say nothing of the benefit cattle derive from always having a tank of water where they may help themselves at will. It is almost painful to see a well-to-do farmer come from the field at noon, hurriedly swallow his dinner and then pump water until time to go to the field again. Windmills are cheap and durable and life is short.

The socialist vote will be about 125 and the prohibitionist about 75. The official count will be given in our next issue.
