The old city council held a meeting on Monday evening to receive the reports of the recorder and treasurer, but as the treasurer had only just returned from Portland, they will be handed in at the next meeting.

The committee of the non-partisan law enforcement league held a meeting on Friday and decided upon a course of action for an aggressive campaign. What the committee proposes doing is kept to itself, for it will not give out for publication its deliberations.

The school boundary board made changes in the following districts: Nos. 5, 11, 28, 39, 14, 46, 38, 3, 17 and 33. The most important change was the uniting of districts Nos. 3 and 38, where a new school house will be erected at the corner near the Riverdale cheese factories.

William Durfee, of Tillamook, arrived at Astoria yesterday. He states that he came in on the Elmore and wouldn't take another trip for all the money in the world. Wednesday night they laid off the bar all night, and the wind blew a gale. He thought every minute would be his last. While there was no danger, especially under such an experienced captain as yet Mr. Durfee was glad to get ashore. He left on last night's train for Portland, and unless conditions change, will return home overland.—Astorian.

After a hearing upon a writ of review, upon alleged irregularities in calling the prohibition election and other matters connected therewith in Douglas county, Judge Hamilton has handed down a decision holding that the election was regularly conducted under the local option law. Therefore the precincts in that county which voted "dry" became so on 1st of this month. Seven saloons in Roseburg will either be compelled to move into the "wet" precincts or go out of business.

Mr. Herbert Cooper, assisted by his sister and Miss Vessey, entertained a number of his High School friends on last Friday evening at his home. Those present were: Misses Grace Whitehouse, Sadie Watt, Eacie Oliver, Hazel McNair, Clara Watt, Margaret Watt, Edna Alderman, Esther Munson, Ida Goyne, Messrs. Whitman Lamb, Clifford Hiner, Henry Diehl, John Aschim, Prof. Whitney, Howard Drew, Solomon Whitehouse, Walter Oliver, Robert Watt, Edward Weston, Edgar Munson and Herbert Parsons.

Mayor Cohn has received a letter from the Oregon Traction Company, and it offers to build an electric railway from Forest Grove to Tillamook, provided the right of way can be obtained and a subsidy can be raised for the company. This is the company that is about to build an electric road from Portland to Forest Grove, and is willing to extend the line to Tillamook if enough inducements by way of a subsidy, etc., are offered. What amount of money the company requires we do not know, but it is Mr. Cohn's intention to call a public meeting next week.

The saloons keepers closed their places of business the first of the new year and they will remain so until another vote of the people is taken or by an order of the court, and for the first time in the history of the county, Tillamook goes "dry" in the wettest season of the year.

Editorial Snap Shots.

Dry, oh so dry.

All the correspondence relating to the negotiation of the city bonds should be placed in the hands of the new city council.

It looks as though Secretary Hitchcock is trying to "do up" Senator Mitchell and Congressman Hermann on the evidence of a gang of perjurers.

What's the use of getting out a special edition of a few thousand copies when it will require a hundred thousand copies or more to go with the county exhibit at the Lewis & Clark Exposition?

Won't it be just lovely—we mean for the banker—to have $45,000 deposited in this city next March and the money not required for several months, but, of course, drawing interest.

"It is a good thing the saloons have closed," said one man who has been in the habit of spending most of his time in saloons and often drinking a little too freely. "I'll go to work now and get some new clothes and look decent like other people."

Councilman Leach is in favor of having all the gambling devices removed from the fruit and cigar stands in the city. It is nothing more than right, for there are too many kids in the city learning the habit of gambling by dice throwing and other seductive games.

Since the bonding business has been consummated, it is a question how much Tillamook City property has depreciated in valuation. Every bit of property has now a mortgage plaster on it, thanks to the bond agitators, so people who have property to sell or want to buy must take this into consideration.

Tillamook City is badly split up morally, and it has come to a serious state of affairs when some of our citizens have been offered money to circulate lies about respectable citizens, just out of pure cussedness to blacken their character and reputation. Some day there will be some thing doing to give these scandalous liars a wholesome chastisement. And it cannot come any to soon.

Supposing that Judge Galloway does throw out the vote on local option at the next term of the circuit court, would the city council or the county court be justified in granting new licenses in the face of so overwhelming a majority of the people for a closed county? So it does not depend upon the decision of Judge Galloway whether saloons will be allowed to run again.

The Headlight man will ask the county court to reconsider the matter of awarding the county printing, as there was a misunderstanding with Judge Conder and the editor about putting in a bid with the sworn list. Had we had the least idea that a bid was required, we certainly would have done so, so on that grounds we shall respectfully ask the court to reconsider it.

Mayor Cohn, in his message says: "I may be pardoned if I at this time ask that during this year of 1905 every member of this council, every citizen of this community, 'erase from the tablets of memory' all hardness, bitterness and anger, and that united we stand for a good, economical administration, for bringing into our city new and healthful enterprises, and for a prosperous and happy ending of the year." That is certainly a commendable recommendation, and one we heartily endorse, and if this is the intention and determination of the fact that is behind Mayor Cohn, then there should be no difficulty in bringing about a truce and a last peace between all factions.

The causes which lead to the closing of the saloons was again the subject of discussion on the streets on Saturday, it being the last day in which they were allowed to do business. Some say that it was on account of the saloon faction fighting the republican candidates at the June election, some say it was on account of the gambling joints, but whatever are the causes, the saloon keepers can thank themselves for having to close down, for they would not comply with the conditions under which their licenses were granted, and having undertaken to dictate city and county politics, the people, the first time they had an opportunity, showed their indignation, and they will do the same thing again if Judge Galloway, through some trivial technicality, knocks out the provisions of the local option law.

The Nehalemites appear to be the most enterprising people in the county at this time. As the county has thus far paid no heed to the repeated demand for a bridge across the Nehalem river—a long felt want and something that they are entitled to—they have levied a tax to bridge the North fork and want the county court to put in a bridge across the South fork. That appears to be a fair proposition, and we hope that the county court will see its way clear and be able to spare the "dough" this summer for a bridge across the South fork. We are glad to say that the Nehalemites are united, and with considerable enthusiasm and determination, they mean to get out of their "bottled up" condition by taxing themselves and asking the county court to help them out.

Tillamook County has almost reached normal condition, and is now dependent upon its dairy industry. The inflated valuation put into agricultural land in this county a few years ago practically put a stop to home seekers coming here and it is going to take a long time to counteract the false impression that the land in this county is selling from $150 to $200 an acre. What is going to interest home seekers, and also a large number of Oregonians, for the next few years, is the irrigated districts in Eastern Oregon, for the reason that they will be able to raise two or three crops a year. We do not anticipate a great influx of home seekers to this county until the bar is improved or the advent of a railroad, but with the inflated valuation knocked out of land, and the conditions nearly normal, this is a good time for home seekers to come to Tillamook if they want to locate in the best dairying section of Oregon.

From present indications, and from the unbusiness-like way in which Tillamook City officials have started out to construct a new water system, the people will have to pay $50,000 for a system that is worth half the money, that is if the engineer's charges are any criterion to go by. The Headlight has contended for a commission of business men to take hold of the proposed new water system, but this was not in accord with the ideas of some of the members of the late city council, consequently it rushed, with undue haste, to bond the city like so many autoerats with the authority that it was endowed with. Probably, after the bonds have been taken up and the contracts have been all let, then those who have been interested so much in these matters will be willing to turn the running of the water system over to a commission.
