FRANCE'S BURIED CITY.

Brought to Light by the Discovery of Two Ancient Tombs Near Interesting ruins which point to the existence of a buried city have been found in the woods of Charbon nierre, near the chateau of that name, some miles distant from Orleans. Two tombs composed of monolith stones, in one of which the re mains of a skeleton were reposing. have been found under ancient oaks. They were at a depth of 30 centimeters below the soil. It is estimated from the nature of the stones, their dimensions and form, that the tombs date from the sixth, seventh or eighth century.

According to a local tradition on this site, which was formerly crossed by a great Roman way, many cenof which the ruins still exist, though crowded and crushed under the earth long ago by wood cutters and excavators.

This tradition attributes to this buried city the name of Sergy. It is probable that these tombs are not the only relics in this place, and that a well-condudcted search would reveal an entire cemetery, whose extent would give an idea of the importance of the buried city.

A BLIND GIRL'S POWER.

She Detects Absence of Flowers from Dining Room the Moment She Enters.

There is a wealthy young woman living in Philadelphia, says the Times, who has the misfortune to be blind When traveling as a young girl she contracted Roman fever in Italy and lost her sight. She is the only living member of her immediate family now and occupies a handsome house in the residence part of the city. She has a companion who seldom leaves her, but the ability she shows for conducting her own affairs in spite of her misfortune is wonderful. Her remaining senses are marvelously acute, and it seems to people who are not well ac quainted with her almost uncanny her cognizance of everything going on around her. On one occasion recently when her companion was away at dinner time, the butler, either by intent or carelessness, failed to place flowers on the dining table, according to his custom. If he expected to evade the duty he was mistaken. The mistress of the house had hardly entered the dining-room when she discovered the omission. "James," she said, "you have forgotten the flowers to-night."

IT IS KNOWN AS SOLANINE.

That Is the Name of a Deadly Poison That is Sometimes Found in Potatoes.

Chemical examination has revealed the fact that a poisonous alkaloid known as solanine is contained in potatoes. Little of this poison is found in new potatoes, but even fresh po tatoes which have grown about the surface of the soil and have a green skin are generally known to be sonous says a scientific authority. When potatoes are kept a long time they contain a large amount of this poison, and many cases of serious poisoning have occurred in late sum mer from eating old potatoes. About ten years ago many soldiers in the German army were ill from an unknown cause. They suffered with headache, colie, diarrhea, vomiting. weakness and slight stupor, and in some cases dilation of the The matter was investigated and it was discovered that the men had been eating potatoes which had been kept for a long time in a dam's place until they had begun to sprout. These potatoes, a chemical analysis showed contained as much solanine as is found in new potatoes.

"Ab Chee."

In the household of a prominent Postonian is a Chinese servant who was brought east by the family several years ago from California, where he had ingratiated himself during a winter sojourn at Pasadena. Recently a young man named Archibald has been visiting the family, and the Chinaman seemed to take a strange fancy to him. He is called Archie for short, and every time the name of Archie was mentioned the Mongolian would grin and beam at the guest with a pride that seemed little less than paternal. That it was at least fraternal was disclosed one day, when he said: "Why for you have name alles samee like Chinaman?" Archibald was rather taken back. "What do you mean?" he asked. "Why, you name." replied the Chinaman, according to the Philadelphia Record. "When they talkee to you they callee you Ah Chee!

Wants "Wide Open" Town.

The Astoria Herald says that some of the business men of that city have organ. ized for the purpose of advocating a wide open" town. If they are onto the drift of public opinion they won't do anything of the kind, for it is those who advocate "wide open" towns who turn the drift of public opinion against the saloons and make it possible, with the local option law, to make a county dry, Anyway, the best way to make Astoria and Clatsop county dry is to boost a free for all, "wide open" town.

Fred Jennings, a farmer and carpenter living near Zillah, committed suicide Saturday night by hanging himself to rafters in his workshop. He had become melancholly over sickness and financial troubles. He owned a 40-acre turies ago an important city stood, farm, and owed $2.00 on it. This bothered him. He carried $3000 insurance in the Woodmen and Forester orders. He left a will, by which he gives all his property to his wife.

Clubbed into insensibility and until the lower portion of his body was paralyzed, Edward Marshall, timber locator and the man who three months ago drove Miss Birdie McCarty, of Heryford breach of promise fame, from a claim in the Big Basin country, lay 30 hours in the brush half a mile from Stevenson and is now there, with slim chances of recovery. Marshall was found last Friday night. He was undoubtedly left for dead by his assailant, and was in a pitiable condition when found.

The irrigation project, involving an ex. penditure of about $20,000,000, authorized by the secretary of state for India, will command by its canals an area of about 6250 square miles, though only a small part of it will be completed for a number of years to come. The water will be taken from the Ihelum river, in which there is now unappropriated at the site of the headwaters a flow of 5000 to as much as 8000 cubic feet per second, and the estimated return for a project of this kind is put down at 10 per cent. One of the objects of this project is to afford relief work in case of famine.
