

THE TILLAMOOK CREAMERY

Received 2,675,034 Pounds of Milk Last Year.—The Banner Creamery.

At the annual meeting of The Tillamook Creamery George Williams, M. Melchior and Jos. Durrer were elected directors, and the bank of C. & E. Thayer, treasurer. The Secretary's report shows the standing of that factory which received last year the largest amount of milk of any factory, which is as follows:

Tillamook, Ore., Feb. 10th, 1906.
To the Directors and Stockholders of The Tillamook Creamery.

Gentlemen,—I herewith present to you my report as Secretary of your corporation for the year ending December 31st, 1905:

Milk received at factory in pounds as follows: January, 36,969; February, 26,574; March, 143,117; April, 251,013; May, 389,932; June, 429,195; July, 400,669; August, 202,462; September, 278,030; October, 232,848; November, 125,848; December, 67,543; making a total of 2,675,034 lbs. for the year 1905. Total butter fat, 105,482.48 lbs.

63,543 lbs. of milk, containing 2,616.98 lbs. of butter fat, were manufactured into butter during the months of January and February, 1905.

2,901 lbs. of butter were manufactured, for which the factory received $770.61, and for which patrons were paid $696.59. For these months patrons were paid for butter fat as follows: January, 26.2 cents; February, 27.3 cents.

2,611,491 lbs. of milk were manufactured into cheese. This milk contained 102,865.50 lbs. of butter fat.

269,457 lbs. of cheese were manufactured and sold. Amount received for cheese, $31,785.09. Total amount received for product of factory, $32,555.70. Average amount received is practically 11.8 cents. Boxes of cheese sold, 4,462.

Amount paid patrons for cheese (estimating December), $27,730.49. Total amount paid patrons for product of factory, $28,427.08.

There is due the factory from merchants for cheese, $1,250.41.

Amount received for making for the season, $4,107.04.

Expenses of all kinds for the year, $3,555.16, leaving a balance in favor of the factory of $551.88. Amount of supplies left over $221.35. Amount sundry receipts of factory, being salt, rennet, etc., sold, $66.94.

Liabilities at beginning of 1905 were $371.71, as per secretary's books. These have been paid off, and with payment of supplies left over have wiped out surplus. Now that we have paid off all indebtedness and have supplies ahead, it would seem that the corporation would be in a fair way to accumulate a small surplus. As it is, we are continually handicapped in getting goods at a discount for cash.

The amount of milk received at the factory was the largest received at any factory in the county last year, and I believe, the largest ever received at the factory. The amount of milk received during 1905 was 133,000 lbs. less than the total for the two years 1903 and 1904, while the value of the product, $32,555.70 for 1905 was $1,505.12 in excess of the totals for the year 1904 ($15,613.00) and 1903 ($15,437.00). This would indicate a healthy growth, but as a considerable amount of milk was brought to the factory from South Prairie, and as the people of South Prairie have incorporated a co-operative factory this year, the growth this season will be less. However, unless the farmers of Fairview make a success of the agitation of incorporating a new co-operative factory, the outlook for an equal amount of milk for the factory for this year seems bright.

Respectfully submitted,
CARL HADENLACH,
Secretary, The Tillamook Creamery.

A Woman Who Wants to Vote.

MR. EDITOR.—You know your humble servant is a strong advocate of woman's rights and I am waiting for you men to give us a chance to vote. Well, we will keep our place, thinking of the near election. We must yet wield the broom and rock the cradle, to say nothing of preparing 21 meals a week. We hope always to do this, but we would like to stand by our proud husband and sons on election day. But, enough, or we will be called a politician.

POINTS FOR A TOURIST.

The Englishman, as Usual, Enjoyed Asking a Few Curious Questions.

Jenkins is infamously belied by his countenance—a simple, frank and sober physiognomy that betrays all he says with unworried plainness. He tells how he met an English tourist on board a steamboat in the Niagara river, below the falls. The English tourist, like all of his kind, was anxious to ask questions. He fixed on Jenkins as a likely source of information, says the New York Commercial Advertiser.

"It's a fine river," he said.
"One of the finest in the world," Jenkins answered.

"Could you tell me how deep the water is here?"

"About 300 feet just here," Jenkins replied, without hesitation. "It's deeper higher up."

The tourist made a mental note of it, and Jenkins hoped the boat had not scraped the bottom as she left the wharf.

"The current must be very strong."

"Not on the surface," Jenkins replied, brazenly, "but the undercurrent makes 20 miles an hour."

"Well, well! Good fishing, I suppose?"

"Not very good. The current, you see, prevents the fish from coming up. A few crabs and limpets crawl along the bottom."

"Well, well!" He looked at the water with a new appreciation. "Have a cigar?" he said.

Jenkins took one as if he deserved it.

"I'm a stranger to this country," the tourist explained.

"Oh, indeed!" said Jenkins. "You speak our language very well."

"Yes," the other replied, doubtfully, "I appreciate your courtesy, you know."

Jenkins nodded over his cigar.

"Suppose the boats do not run here in the winter," the stranger went on anew. "The river freezes over?"

"Well, no," said Jenkins, "the water gets so heated at the falls it never freezes over."

The tourist looked another look at his informant.

"The friction there is very great," Jenkins hastened to explain. "You may have heard how a professor at Harvard made water boil by stirring it vigorously. It is like that at the falls."

"I think I see that. Very curious. Well, well."

They had already passed out of the river into the lake. The stranger found a new wonder. A storm blowing on shore, during the previous night, had stirred up the muddy bottom at the river mouth and discolored the shoal waters. A line of froth marked the boundary of these yellow shallows and the deeper waters further out were distinctly blue beside them. The tourist remarked the difference to Jenkins.

Jenkins assumed his blandest air.

"Yes," he explained, "that is the boundary between the American and Canadian waters."

The tourist gaped at it a moment. "Excuse me a moment," he said, rising with an eye still on the line of the froth, "I left my camera downstairs in the luggage room."

He hurried down the after companion way. Jenkins did not wait for his return.

The English Coastguard.

First and foremost, a coastguardman is a man-of-war's-man. He belongs to a particular ship of war, on board which he is liable at any moment to be called upon to report himself. He knows his place and his duties on board that vessel; and he and his personal belongings are in a perpetual state of readiness for active service on her decks, in her storeroom, or elsewhere, as the case may be. We learn that he must have served for at least ten years in the Royal navy, and that he is kept in touch with the latest nautical practice by yearly periods of training on board an ironclad.—Chambers' Journal.

Gladstone at Church.

A writer in the London Church Gazette tells this story about Mr. Gladstone: "I happened to be in a church one Sunday morning when Mr. Gladstone came in; it was a church he attended very rarely, so he was quite unexpected. He had much difficulty in finding a seat, for it was a free and open church, and apt to crowd up dreadfully. A curate deacon, whom we all loved, but whose forte was not preaching, happened to be in the pulpit, and caught sight of the prime minister as he hurried in and looked round for a chair. It was almost his first sermon, and nervous before, this quite upset him. This Mr. Gladstone quickly perceived, and picking up his hat and umbrella, he scurried to the top of the church, and, finding a seat among the children, sat through the whole of a long sermon with his hand to his ear, paying the most marked attention to every word. This gave the curate—I am sorry to say he is since dead—more courage, but after the service Mr. Gladstone took an opportunity of thanking him."

Arrested in Tillamook.

Last Monday Albert Lucy came down from Tillamook City and on Tuesday arrested a man at Woods going under the name of Alfred Furgerson and known in Yamhill County as Alex. Steward. The man was charged with stealing a gun from a Mr. Broadwell near Dundee, and was traced to Salmon river where he said he was looking for his brother's homestead. He had traded the gun to S. A. West who lives near Salmon river, for a six shooter and $5.00 in money. From there he came up to Woods, where he was suspected and the Sheriff was phoned for, who sent Albert Lucy to arrest him. Albert passed through Cloverdale Tuesday en route to Dolph where Sheriff Corrigan of Yamhill County met him and took the guilty man to McMinnville for safe keeping.—Cloverdale Courier.
