

Editorial Snap Shots.

Dr. Withycombe said it don't pay to grow yellow weed. That is true and a large number of farmers also know it from actual experience.

Taking a trip down the slough the other day at low tide, we were surprised to find such a large quantity of salmon heads and offal in the slough. This is no place to throw such trash, and the way to preserve the public health is to put a stop to it at once.

It might interest Francis J. Heney to know that the ex-U.S. marshal is going by the name of Jack Morgan, so we are informed by settlers on Garibaldi beach, where Jack is camped with two women whom the Portland newspapers claim are his nieces.

The Washington County court don't want to give that county a bad name by publishing to the world that it has toll roads. Tillamook county can prove that toll roads will hoodoo any section of country, so we don't want to see our neighbors east of us pointed out as antiquated toll road advocates.

From what we can learn a large number of persons from Tillamook will attend the State fair at Salem next week, which is always an attraction, especially the stock show connected with it. The dairy operators will have an opportunity to witness one of the latest inventions, that of a milking machine in operation.

There is no jealousy amongst the people of Tillamook because the Columbia river is gobbling up the lion's share of the appropriations for harbor improvements. The resources of the country tributary to the Columbia river demand even larger expenditure of money for harbor and river improvements. One of these days we hope it will be possible to open the eyes of the powers that be and convince them that Tillamook and the other Coast Counties have enormous resources also waiting to be developed, and for a few years, at least, they would like to be in a position where they could get the lion's share of the appropriations so as to give Western Oregon a "square deal," which it hasn't had.

This is a bit of advice one of the pastors of this city would like to impress upon the man who is about to get into double harness: "When you go to get married, first, look over the marriage service with the minister so that you may know and he may know just what you want, whether the rather long service with a ring, or the shorter service without it. Then, when all is done and you have accepted the marriage certificate, don't say to the minister 'What is your bill?' or 'How much is it?' But quietly hand him an envelope containing the usual $5.00 or more, if you wish to. You will thus avoid embarrassment for yourself and him." We must add a little more to this, and advise the happy couple to make tracts for the Headlight office to receive the editor's blessing, for no marriage is complete without a nice newspaper send off. We did live in a community for twelve months where it was quite customary for newly married couples to bring to the editors, or send them, a piece of wedding cake, and, like the pastor, we felt a little embarrassed at first.

The fact that A. J. Hembre is going to take his sentence is, in the minds of a great many persons, a confession that he committed the horrible crime. The dying agonies and the cruel deaths of Hembre's wife and daughter as he committed the bloody deed may never be divulged, but as Hembre passes the rest of his days in the state penitentiary, the cruel scene, with the consciousness of his guilt, will haunt him night and day and make a mental wreck of him. Hembre is getting off too easy, for a man who is that blood-thirsty that he will murder his wife and daughter to cover up another terrible crime ought to die on the gallows, for if one can take life in that manner and get off so easy, where is the protection to human life and for defenceless women and children? It is, as we said some time ago, life is held too cheap in this country, with too many loop holes in the law for homicides to crawl through. However, most every person in Tillamook is aware that it is a travesty of justice to send Hembre to the penitentiary and not to the gallows.

As several of our subscribers feel surprised that the editor should allow a liquor dealer's advertisement to appear in the columns of the Headlight, it is as well for us to explain the position of the Press in such matters. The advertising columns of a newspaper is a business proposition, open to all legitimate business, and for newspapers to discriminate against one and not another advertiser would be a narrow view, with the result that one class would object to one kind of advertising and another class to some other kind of advertisement, so if editors had to comply with either one of the different factions which make up a community, he would either be in hot water all the time or would have no business after a while. Hence, the Press cannot, and should not, discriminate, so we are following the rule. However, we are glad to see that some of our readers so zealously guard the columns of the Headlight. But let us impress upon our good friends that legitimate advertising is one part of the newspaper business and the Commissioners' Court.

The board of county commissioners met on Wednesday, with County Judge H. F. Goodspeed and Commissioner G. W. Bodyfelt and were present.

The bills allowed were: Tillamook City, improving street $5 00; Frank Nordberg, work on road 4 00; Reynolds & Jones, furniture, etc. 653 98.

Work in R. D. No. 2, W. H. Hoskins, 28 00; Warren Hoskins, 56 00; Geo. Regan, 46 00; Geo. Regan, 11 00; Wm. Crane, 46 00; W. S. Hare, 60 00; E. E. Cross, 66 00; John Ripley, 64 00; John Legg, 40 00; Sam Johnson, 19 00; Ben Johnson, 20 00; John Hickey, 5 00.

Work on Big Nestucca toll road, J. C. Mills, 108 80; J. Kelly, 84 00; Jerry Lewallen, 56 00; John Lawrence, 58 00; Ed Hanson, 32 80; Ed Kellow, 47 60; W. Schollmeyer, 60 40; L. Jensen, 41 60; Charley Jensen, 20 20; Claude Lewallen, 30 60; Frank Cross, 17 80; Fred Mills, 20 20; Arthur Hill, 1 00; Dave McKinney, 4 00; Arch Meyers, 3 20.

Work in R. D. No. 6, A. Arstell, 129 75; H. P. Ottis, 34 00; W. Wells, 56 00; J. Inlah, 32 00; L. J. Arstell, 36 40; D. Sanders, 92 40; R. O. Allen, 27 20; Chas. Burke, 1 80; Forrest Gist, 8 00; L. A. Burke, 2 00; Walter Hudson, 46 00; Jess Kennedy, 4 80; D. T. Werschkul, 43 20; William Glick, 28 60; Chas. Fleck, 8 00; J. F. Jenkins, 8 00; Walter Bowles, 4 00; Frank Owens, 4 00; A. L. Learned, 25 00; James Whitman, 2 00; Sam Hunter, 29 00; Ed Knoblock, 22 80.

WORK ON LITTLE NESTUCCA TOLL ROAD, Frank Yack, 40 00; L. Yack, 39 00; H. G. McClane, 18 00; T. G. Winne, 2 00; J. Foster, 1 00; G. W. Murphy, 20 00.

WORK IN R. D. No. 3, Wes Day, 31 00; B. Niclos, 60 00; A. Yack, 20 00; Will Elliott, 32 00; Pike's team, 2 00; A. Schiappi, 26 00; L. Wilson, 23 40; W. Doughty, 19 40; J. P. Bickel, 19 00; O. Stasck, 19 60; Anos Vaughn, 21 00; L. McFalls, 12 00; R. McFalls, 12 00; C. Hanson, 6 00; J. Jennings, 1 66; Stasck, 3 75; Wes Day, 40 00.

WORK IN R. D. No. 3, P. Jacobs, 64 80; Geo. Tinnerstet, 73 60; D. Billings, 56 80; J. W. Haldus, 56 80; Albert Nelson, 12 80; Frank Beser, 3 20; Geo. Davis, 3 20; Herbert Edgar, 36 80; Eric Erickson, 38 40; F. Struby, 3 20; Geo. Olds, 20 80; Arnold Wagner, 5 50; Virgil Donaldson, 2 40; Robert Nelson, 4 00; Geo. P. Will, 3 20.

Claims of witnesses in Hembre case, James Alton, 14 00; Lewis Loll, 2 20; V. Donaldson, 3 00; Anna Koenicke, 9 00; C. S. Atkinson, 14 00; W. G. Harris, 2 20; W. D. Stubbins, 2 20; U. S. Edwards, 14 20; Thos. Coates, 6 20; J. S. Stephens, 4 20; F. L. Sappington, 4 20; James P. Eldridge, 14 00; Mrs. Mary A. Phelps, 14 00; E. E. Cross, 14 40; G. W. Bodyfelt, 2 20; John Venable, 22 00; Joseph Atkinson, 12 00; Lawson Hembre, 18 00; Roy Hembre, 16 00; L. L. Hembre, 26 00; J. Lewallen, 14 60; Mrs. Mary Lewallen, 14 60; James Thompson, 26 40; Jeff Wallace, 10 20; Mrs. L. A. Hoyt, 14 20; B. E. Goucher, 26 40; A. Bunn, 5 40; J. H. Harter, 2 20; Geo. Edmunds, 6 20; W. C. King, 2 20; Geo. W. Cox, 8 80; J. R. Eldridge, 8 20.

Jurors in Hembre Case, C. N. Drew, 2 20; Jobe Foster, 18 20; P. R. C. Lucas, 10 80; F. N. Wilson, 8 20; Theodore Kingsley, 2 20; J. F. Craver, 2 60; J. F. Jenkins, 17 60; A. McDonald, 8 00; M. T. Chance, 2 80; Guy Vaughn, 18 00; E. T. Haltom, 2 20; M. Carl, 17 40; John Larsen, 3 60; W. C. King, 2 20; D. Billings, 8 00; A. Plasker, 2 20; C. A. Elliott, 4 20; Geo. Williams, 4 80; Wm. Tinnerstet, 2 20; Anos Vaughn, 3 00; Jas. Stasck, 4 80; Henry Leach, 5 00; W. S. Elliott, 3 00; Homer Mason, 2 40; J. S. Dehl, 4 40; Alex. Watt, 2 20; Peter Hembre, 4 80; C. S. Frowbridge, 2 20; S. V. Anderson, 5 60; H. E. Weston, 2 20.

Editorial Snap Shots.

Dr. Withycombe said it don't pay to grow yellow weed. That is true and a large number of farmers also know it from actual experience.

Taking a trip down the slough the other day at low tide, we were surprised to find such a large quantity of salmon heads and offal in the slough. This is no place to throw such trash, and the way to preserve the public health is to put a stop to it at once.

It might interest Francis J. Heney to know that the ex-U.S. marshal is going by the name of Jack Morgan, so we are informed by settlers on Garibaldi beach, where Jack is camped with two women whom the Portland newspapers claim are his nieces.

The Washington County court don't want to give that county a bad name by publishing to the world that it has toll roads. Tillamook county can prove that toll roads will hoodoo any section of country, so we don't want to see our neighbors east of us pointed out as antiquated toll road advocates.

From what we can learn a large number of persons from Tillamook will attend the State fair at Salem next week, which is always an attraction, especially the stock show connected with it. The dairy operators will have an opportunity to witness one of the latest inventions, that of a milking machine in operation.

There is no jealousy amongst the people of Tillamook because the Columbia river is gobbling up the lion's share of the appropriations for harbor improvements. The resources of the country tributary to the Columbia river demand even larger expenditure of money for harbor and river improvements. One of these days we hope it will be possible to open the eyes of the powers that be and convince them that Tillamook and the other Coast Counties have enormous resources also waiting to be developed, and for a few years, at least, they would like to be in a position where they could get the lion's share of the appropriations so as to give Western Oregon a "square deal," which it hasn't had.

This is a bit of advice one of the pastors of this city would like to impress upon the man who is about to get into double harness: "When you go to get married, first, look over the marriage service with the minister so that you may know and he may know just what you want, whether the rather long service with a ring, or the shorter service without it. Then, when all is done and you have accepted the marriage certificate, don't say to the minister 'What is your bill?' or 'How much is it?' But quietly hand him an envelope containing the usual $5.00 or more, if you wish to. You will thus avoid embarrassment for yourself and him." We must add a little more to this, and advise the happy couple to make tracts for the Headlight office to receive the editor's blessing, for no marriage is complete without a nice newspaper send off. We did live in a community for twelve months where it was quite customary for newly married couples to bring to the editors, or send them, a piece of wedding cake, and, like the pastor, we felt a little embarrassed at first.

The fact that A. J. Hembre is going to take his sentence is, in the minds of a great many persons, a confession that he committed the horrible crime. The dying agonies and the cruel deaths of Hembre's wife and daughter as he committed the bloody deed may never be divulged, but as Hembre passes the rest of his days in the state penitentiary, the cruel scene, with the consciousness of his guilt, will haunt him night and day and make a mental wreck of him. Hembre is getting off too easy, for a man who is that blood-thirsty that he will murder his wife and daughter to cover up another terrible crime ought to die on the gallows, for if one can take life in that manner and get off so easy, where is the protection to human life and for defenceless women and children? It is, as we said some time ago, life is held too cheap in this country, with too many loop holes in the law for homicides to crawl through. However, most every person in Tillamook is aware that it is a travesty of justice to send Hembre to the penitentiary and not to the gallows.

As several of our subscribers feel surprised that the editor should allow a liquor dealer's advertisement to appear in the columns of the Headlight, it is as well for us to explain the position of the Press in such matters. The advertising columns of a newspaper is a business proposition, open to all legitimate business, and for newspapers to discriminate against one and not another advertiser would be a narrow view, with the result that one class would object to one kind of advertising and another class to some other kind of advertisement, so if editors had to comply with either one of the different factions which make up a community, he would either be in hot water all the time or would have no business after a while. Hence, the Press cannot, and should not, discriminate, so we are following the rule. However, we are glad to see that some of our readers so zealously guard the columns of the Headlight. But let us impress upon our good friends that legitimate advertising is one part of the newspaper business and the Editorial Snap Shots.

Dr. Withycombe said it don't pay to grow yellow weed. That is true and a large number of farmers also know it from actual experience.

Taking a trip down the slough the other day at low tide, we were surprised to find such a large quantity of salmon heads and offal in the slough. This is no place to throw such trash, and the way to preserve the public health is to put a stop to it at once.

It might interest Francis J. Heney to know that the ex-U.S. marshal is going by the name of Jack Morgan, so we are informed by settlers on Garibaldi beach, where Jack is camped with two women whom the Portland newspapers claim are his nieces.

The Washington County court don't want to give that county a bad name by publishing to the world that it has toll roads. Tillamook county can prove that toll roads will hoodoo any section of country, so we don't want to see our neighbors east of us pointed out as antiquated toll road advocates.

From what we can learn a large number of persons from Tillamook will attend the State fair at Salem next week, which is always an attraction, especially the stock show connected with it. The dairy operators will have an opportunity to witness one of the latest inventions, that of a milking machine in operation.

There is no jealousy amongst the people of Tillamook because the Columbia river is gobbling up the lion's share of the appropriations for harbor improvements. The resources of the country tributary to the Columbia river demand even larger expenditure of money for harbor and river improvements. One of these days we hope it will be possible to open the eyes of the powers that be and convince them that Tillamook and the other Coast Counties have enormous resources also waiting to be developed, and for a few years, at least, they would like to be in a position where they could get the lion's share of the appropriations so as to give Western Oregon a "square deal," which it hasn't had.

This is a bit of advice one of the pastors of this city would like to impress upon the man who is about to get into double harness: "When you go to get married, first, look over the marriage service with the minister so that you may know and he may know just what you want, whether the rather long service with a ring, or the shorter service without it. Then, when all is done and you have accepted the marriage certificate, don't say to the minister 'What is your bill?' or 'How much is it?' But quietly hand him an envelope containing the usual $5.00 or more, if you wish to. You will thus avoid embarrassment for yourself and him." We must add a little more to this, and advise the happy couple to make tracts for the Headlight office to receive the editor's blessing, for no marriage is complete without a nice newspaper send off. We did live in a community for twelve months where it was quite customary for newly married couples to bring to the editors, or send them, a piece of wedding cake, and, like the pastor, we felt a little embarrassed at first.

The fact that A. J. Hembre is going to take his sentence is, in the minds of a great many persons, a confession that he committed the horrible crime. The dying agonies and the cruel deaths of Hembre's wife and daughter as he committed the bloody deed may never be divulged, but as Hembre passes the rest of his days in the state penitentiary, the cruel scene, with the consciousness of his guilt, will haunt him night and day and make a mental wreck of him. Hembre is getting off too easy, for a man who is that blood-thirsty that he will murder his wife and daughter to cover up another terrible crime ought to die on the gallows, for if one can take life in that manner and get off so easy, where is the protection to human life and for defenceless women and children? It is, as we said some time ago, life is held too cheap in this country, with too many loop holes in the law for homicides to crawl through. However, most every person in Tillamook is aware that it is a travesty of justice to send Hembre to the penitentiary and not to the gallows.

As several of our subscribers feel surprised that the editor should allow a liquor dealer's advertisement to appear in the columns of the Headlight, it is as well for us to explain the position of the Press in such matters. The advertising columns of a newspaper is a business proposition, open to all legitimate business, and for newspapers to discriminate against one and not another advertiser would be a narrow view, with the result that one class would object to one kind of advertising and another class to some other kind of advertisement, so if editors had to comply with either one of the different factions which make up a community, he would either be in hot water all the time or would have no business after a while. Hence, the Press cannot, and should not, discriminate, so we are following the rule. However, we are glad to see that some of our readers so zealously guard the columns of the Headlight. But let us impress upon our good friends that legitimate advertising is one part of the newspaper business and the Editorial Snap Shots.

Dr. Withycombe said it don't pay to grow yellow weed. That is true and a large number of farmers also know it from actual experience.

Taking a trip down the slough the other day at low tide, we were surprised to find such a large quantity of salmon heads and offal in the slough. This is no place to throw such trash, and the way to preserve the public health is to put a stop to it at once.

It might interest Francis J. Heney to know that the ex-U.S. marshal is going by the name of Jack Morgan, so we are informed by settlers on Garibaldi beach, where Jack is camped with two women whom the Portland newspapers claim are his nieces.

The Washington County court don't want to give that county a bad name by publishing to the world that it has toll roads. Tillamook county can prove that toll roads will hoodoo any section of country, so we don't want to see our neighbors east of us pointed out as antiquated toll road advocates.

From what we can learn a large number of persons from Tillamook will attend the State fair at Salem next week, which is always an attraction, especially the stock show connected with it. The dairy operators will have an opportunity to witness one of the latest inventions, that of a milking machine in operation.

There is no jealousy amongst the people of Tillamook because the Columbia river is gobbling up the lion's share of the appropriations for harbor improvements. The resources of the country tributary to the Columbia river demand even larger expenditure of money for harbor and river improvements. One of these days we hope it will be possible to open the eyes of the powers that be and convince them that Tillamook and the other Coast Counties have enormous resources also waiting to be developed, and for a few years, at least, they would like to be in a position where they could get the lion's share of the appropriations so as to give Western Oregon a "square deal," which it hasn't had.

This is a bit of advice one of the pastors of this city would like to impress upon the man who is about to get into double harness: "When you go to get married, first, look over the marriage service with the minister so that you may know and he may know just what you want, whether the rather long service with a ring, or the shorter service without it. Then, when all is done and you have accepted the marriage certificate, don't say to the minister 'What is your bill?' or 'How much is it?' But quietly hand him an envelope containing the usual $5.00 or more, if you wish to. You will thus avoid embarrassment for yourself and him." We must add a little more to this, and advise the happy couple to make tracts for the Headlight office to receive the editor's blessing, for no marriage is complete without a nice newspaper send off. We did live in a community for twelve months where it was quite customary for newly married couples to bring to the editors, or send them, a piece of wedding cake, and, like the pastor, we felt a little embarrassed at first.

The fact that A. J. Hembre is going to take his sentence is, in the minds of a great many persons, a confession that he committed the horrible crime. The dying agonies and the cruel deaths of Hembre's wife and daughter as he committed the bloody deed may never be divulged, but as Hembre passes the rest of his days in the state penitentiary, the cruel scene, with the consciousness of his guilt, will haunt him night and day and make a mental wreck of him. Hembre is getting off too easy, for a man who is that blood-thirsty that he will murder his wife and daughter to cover up another terrible crime ought to die on the gallows, for if one can take life in that manner and get off so easy, where is the protection to human life and for defenceless women and children? It is, as we said some time ago, life is held too cheap in this country, with too many loop holes in the law for homicides to crawl through. However, most every person in Tillamook is aware that it is a travesty of justice to send Hembre to the penitentiary and not to the gallows.

As several of our subscribers feel surprised that the editor should allow a liquor dealer's advertisement to appear in the columns of the Headlight, it is as well for us to explain the position of the Press in such matters. The advertising columns of a newspaper is a business proposition, open to all legitimate business, and for newspapers to discriminate against one and not another advertiser would be a narrow view, with the result that one class would object to one kind of advertising and another class to some other kind of advertisement, so if editors had to comply with either one of the different factions which make up a community, he would either be in hot water all the time or would have no business after a while. Hence, the Press cannot, and should not, discriminate, so we are following the rule. However, we are glad to see that some of our readers so zealously guard the columns of the Headlight. But let us impress upon our good friends that legitimate advertising is one part of the newspaper business and the Editorial Snap Shots.

Dr. Withycombe said it don't pay to grow yellow weed. That is true and a large number of farmers also know it from actual experience.

Taking a trip down the slough the other day at low tide, we were surprised to find such a large quantity of salmon heads and offal in the slough. This is no place to throw such trash, and the way to preserve the public health is to put a stop to it at once.

It might interest Francis J. Heney to know that the ex-U.S. marshal is going by the name of Jack Morgan, so we are informed by settlers on Garibaldi beach, where Jack is camped with two women whom the Portland newspapers claim are his nieces.

The Washington County court don't want to give that county a bad name by publishing to the world that it has toll roads. Tillamook county can prove that toll roads will hoodoo any section of country, so we don't want to see our neighbors east of us pointed out as antiquated toll road advocates.

From what we can learn a large number of persons from Tillamook will attend the State fair at Salem next week, which is always an attraction, especially the stock show connected with it. The dairy operators will have an opportunity to witness one of the latest inventions, that of a milking machine in operation.

There is no jealousy amongst the people of Tillamook because the Columbia river is gobbling up the lion's share of the appropriations for harbor improvements. The resources of the country tributary to the Columbia river demand even larger expenditure of money for harbor and river improvements. One of these days we hope it will be possible to open the eyes of the powers that be and convince them that Tillamook and the other Coast Counties have enormous resources also waiting to be developed, and for a few years, at least, they would like to be in a position where they could get the lion's share of the appropriations so as to give Western Oregon a "square deal," which it hasn't had.

This is a bit of advice one of the pastors of this city would like to impress upon the man who is about to get into double harness: "When you go to get married, first, look over the marriage service with the minister so that you may know and he may know just what you want, whether the rather long service with a ring, or the shorter service without it. Then, when all is done and you have accepted the marriage certificate, don't say to the minister 'What is your bill?' or 'How much is it?' But quietly hand him an envelope containing the usual $5.00 or more, if you wish to. You will thus avoid embarrassment for yourself and him." We must add a little more to this, and advise the happy couple to make tracts for the Headlight office to receive the editor's blessing, for no marriage is complete without a nice newspaper send off. We did live in a community for twelve months where it was quite customary for newly married couples to bring to the editors, or send them, a piece of wedding cake, and, like the pastor, we felt a little embarrassed at first.

The fact that A. J. Hembre is going to take his sentence is, in the minds of a great many persons, a confession that he committed the horrible crime. The dying agonies and the cruel deaths of Hembre's wife and daughter as he committed the bloody deed may never be divulged, but as Hembre passes the rest of his days in the state penitentiary, the cruel scene, with the consciousness of his guilt, will haunt him night and day and make a mental wreck of him. Hembre is getting off too easy, for a man who is that blood-thirsty that he will murder his wife and daughter to cover up another terrible crime ought to die on the gallows, for if one can take life in that manner and get off so easy, where is the protection to human life and for defenceless women and children? It is, as we said some time ago, life is held too cheap in this country, with too many loop holes in the law for homicides to crawl through. However, most every person in Tillamook is aware that it is a travesty of justice to send Hembre to the penitentiary and not to the gallows.

As several of our subscribers feel surprised that the editor should allow a liquor dealer's advertisement to appear in the columns of the Headlight, it is as well for us to explain the position of the Press in such matters. The advertising columns of a newspaper is a business proposition, open to all legitimate business, and for newspapers to discriminate against one and not another advertiser would be a narrow view, with the result that one class would object to one kind of advertising and another class to some other kind of advertisement, so if editors had to comply with either one of the different factions which make up a community, he would either be in hot water all the time or would have no business after a while. Hence, the Press cannot, and should not, discriminate, so we are following the rule. However, we are glad to see that some of our readers so zealously guard the columns of the Headlight. But let us impress upon our good friends that legitimate advertising is one part of the newspaper business and the Table with multiple columns listing names and amounts, including 'Commissioners' Court', 'Jury in Hembre Case', and 'Jury in Hembre Case'.

Advertisement for St. Mary's Academy, featuring the school's name in a decorative font and text describing its location and educational offerings.

Cut of the Fountain Pen will appear next week.