OLD-AGE PENSIONS.

How Legislation Administers to Needs of European Workingmen.

Old-age pension systems for working men in Europe are not a recent institution, and have gone hand in hand with other legislation for the care of the masses.

France was the first to turn its attention to the matter, and a series of savings banks under government control to encourage thrift among operatives and others was founded by that country as far back as 1850. The legislation enacted arranged that deposits should be free, and that the pensions paid out should be liquidated on the basis of the laws of mortality—different pensions to different ages.

The practice which has grown up around the original scheme is quite complex; but it suffices to say that saying is rewarded by a pension—when advanced age has come on—whose sum often reaches 1200 francs, and that a rate of interest varying around 5 per cent is paid yearly on deposits. The French workingmen's organizations which had pension systems of their own have merged their funds with those of the government; and last year the aggregate funds amounted to 212,000,000 francs. Forty-two thousand pensioners at the age of 64 received an average of 300 francs for the year.

The German Plan.

The most notable feature of the German project organized under Prince Bismarck is that registration of pensions is obligatory; all who receive wages or stipends under 2000 marks a year are required by law to subscribe for pensions. Subsidies for disability are available after paying the assessments during five years; age pensions are available after thirty years of payments, if the beneficiary is 70 years of age. These pensions consist of three elements—50 marks a year paid by the empire, 60 marks a year paid by the bank of the district where the beneficiary's weekly assessments were deposited, and a percentage of the aggregate of the assessments he has paid. The minimum pension, then, can not be less than 110 marks a year. The maximum pension, which was a trifle above 250 marks, and the intermediate grades, have been enlarged somewhat by the law of 1899.

The Danish Law.

Denmark, believing that "a man who has labored for twenty-five or thirty years, who has done his duty as a citizen, and has kept himself honest, deserves a tranquil repose," adopted a law for the pensioning of the old and destitute. When the Danish citizen has completed his 60th year he has a right to a pension of 240 francs, if he can not provide for himself and his own. This pension does not come from a fund of accumulated savings paid in by the working people and guarded by the state, but is a public disbursement, the expense being borne by the parish or district where the pensioner lives.

The New Zealand Scheme.

On January 1, 1900, a pension system like that of Denmark went into effect in New Zealand. A sum of £18 accrues to a citizen who has been a resident for twenty-five years, and whose personal worth as a man is satisfactory. A similar law is under consideration in Victoria.

Italy's System.

The Italian law of 1898, which went into effect in 1900, adds a government fund to the savings of the beneficiaries. Besides the pension at 60, there is a disability fund. The whole is under the care of skilled financiers selected by the nation. The worker increases the amount of his deposit from year to year, and must have averaged a half lire a month after his thirtieth year to secure 360 lire a year at 60.

It may be said for these subsidies to the masses that they are founded on a public right, and, therefore, escape the term charity. They are a recognition of a life of usefulness.

Pain from a Burn Promptly Relieved by Chamberlain's Pain Balm.

Mr. James N. Nicholas, a merchant and postmaster at Vernon, Conn., makes the following statement: "A little child of Michael Strauss was recently in great pain from a burn on the hand, and as cold application only increased the inflammation, Mr. Strauss came to me for something to stop the little one's pain. From the many liniments I carry in stock, I advised him to use Chamberlain's Pain Balm, and the first application drew out the inflammation and gave immediate relief. I have used this liniment myself and recommend it very often for cuts, burns, strains and lame back, and have never known it to disappoint." For sale by Chas. I. Clough's Drug Store.

Church and Fraternal Orders.

There are a few church members still living who believe that it is their Christian duty to oppose secret orders, and some churches go so far as to prohibit their members from providing protection for their families in the only way they are able to do so, through fraternal orders. Somehow they get an idea that fraternal beneficiary orders are running an opposition to the work they have a monopoly on; that nothing is good but what passes through denominational lines and the church receives credit—instead of being broad-minded enough to admit all good proceeds from the same source, and all evil from the opposite source. Fraternal orders do not oppose the church, nor do they pretend to be doing the work of the church; but they are organizations whereby they can systematically practise the charity learned in the church. The church is doing a work fraternal orders cannot do, and fraternal orders are doing a work church organizations do not do; consequently there should be the best of feeling between the two. Members of churches make the best members of fraternal orders and vice versa. There is nothing in fraternal orders which would tend to unfit one for the work of the church, but the lessons learned ought to make better and more practical church members.

In fraternal orders there is nothing allowed but which tends to elevate and ennoble its members. Certainly no true church member ought to find fault if his neighbors should contribute a dollar apiece (until one or two thousand dollars are raised) to his widow or children when he is unable to provide for their wants; neither ought there to be any objections if he should feel kind-hearted enough to reach down in his pocket and pay a dollar to help some one less fortunate than himself. It seems almost an inconsistency for a church member not to belong to some fraternal order and provide for the family when he or she is unable to provide. Almost the last words of our Saviour, while hanging on the cross, were addressed to His most intimate friend, John, asking him to take care of His mother and provide for her a home. In this case the burden of protection was thrown on one, while in fraternal orders the burden is shared by many.

Can we do better than provide homes for the widow, or fatherless children and at the same time provide for our own?—Exchange.

Good Roads and Rural Mails.

It is announced that the government will look more carefully to the enforcement of its rule regarding the roads over which rural free delivery is established. The present requirement is: "Roads traversed shall be kept in good condition, and unobstructed by gates; there must be no unbridged creeks or streams not fordable at any season of the year." In many cases the residents along proposed routes have made improvements that enable them to obtain rural delivery service, but sometimes the efforts to keep up the roads are relaxed. But the government has decided that unless the roads traveled by the carrier are properly maintained the service will be withdrawn. The post office department now calls on the carriers for reports on the roads and will stop the service where the highways in question are bad.

The 35,973 rural delivery carriers now employed cover 863,363 miles daily, and it is unreasonable to expect them to contend with neglected roads, or to work for communities lacking the enterprise to keep its common highways in decent shape. Wherever a route is discontinued the inhabitants themselves will be to blame for it, for if alive to their own interests and their duty to the public they would give their roads vigorous and constant attention. The idea that a route once authorized is necessarily permanent is a mistake. Advice on the best road methods is supplied by the agricultural department, and a neighborhood that loses its rural delivery must itself bear the discredit for so unpleasant and humiliating an event.

More Earthquakes to Come.

Meningitis is the disease affecting the backbone of the American continent, according to Dr. C. Hayes of the United States geological survey. Mexico will be the next country to be visited by a seismic disturbance, is his prediction. In discussing this topic, Dr. Hayes said: "These mountains of what is called the backbone of the American continent are among the newest in the world. The earth's crust is thinner along the line of these newer mountain systems. The pressure of the immense weight of the mass is so great that the earth is not solid inside. At a depth probably of fifteen miles granite would flow like tar, because of the pressure. Now, in the processes of cooling and adjustment of the crust to conditions within, there come times when great strains accumulate on the outer crust; something has to give, and when the crust at last, by a sudden movement, adjusts itself to the new conditions, there is a slipping along the line of a fault in it. This fault line is likely to follow the course of one of the newer mountain ranges. This is what happened at San Francisco and in Chile. "Earthquakes are caused in two very different ways. One is by volcanic acitivity; the other is by the slipping of the earth's crust along a fault line readjusting it to the new distribution of pressures. This volcanic earthquake is caused by the operation of forces lying much nearer the surface, and, therefore, is more local in its effects. The earthquake of most widespread effect comes from deeper seated causes than volcanic activity. The Californian and Chilean quakes were not volcanic."

Gove and the Preachers.

"Repent ye for the kingdom of heaven is at hand."

There is a difference between preaching and talking about a thing. When Noah preached the coming flood he knew nothing about it. So it was with Jonah when he preach "Yet 40 days and Nineveh shall be destroyed." There are thousands of men who undertake to preach the gospel, but they are so anxious to appear to know what they are talking about that they neglect to preach the gospel entirely. Preaching "Repent ye for the kingdom of heaven is at hand," constitutes preaching the gospel. There is no other gospel. "The glad tidings," "The good news of the kingdom of God," is the gospel complete. When John was cast into prison Jesus began to preach, saying "Repent ye for the kingdom of heaven is at hand." His parables and sayings were all about the kingdom of God. He taught to pray, "Thy kingdom come."

The popular preacher has so many brilliant subjects to talk about that there is no use of trying to compromise with him to preach the gospel. I think that a man is very unfortunate to make pretense of preaching the gospel simply to get a good living without work. Preaching the gospel is not a very bright job, if a man wants to shine he had better look for something else. The most successful men have been of ordinary intelligence, that were contented to make their own living by their own sweat, that believed in the possibilities of the kingdom of God their own selves and not the ordinary setter and pointer who sets around the whole week and who points to doing as I say, not as I do. Jesus said to him, "Let the dead bury their dead; but go thou and preach the kingdom of God."

WAS A VERY SICK BOY

But Cured by Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy.

"When my boy was two years old he had a very severe attack of bowel complaint, but by the use of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy we brought him out all right," says Maggie Hickox, of Midland, Mich. This remedy can be depended upon in the most severe cases. Even cholera infantum is cured by it. Follow the plain printed directions and a cure is certain. For sale by Chas. I. Clough's Drug Store.
