The Tillamook Headlight.
 Fred C. Baker, Publisher.

FACTS.
What Tillamook Has:
 One of the best harbors between San Francisco Bay and the mouth of Columbia River.
 35,000,000,000 feet of merchantable timber.
 Great natural resources in diverse branches.
 Balance of trade always in its favor.
 Equable temperature, insuring bodily comfort.
 Good wages, for working men in cash each month.
 Abundant rainfall, guaranteeing crops and water.
 Good schools within reach of every home.
 An honest, law-abiding, peaceful population.
 Healthfulness, especially absence of fevers and malaria.
 Lungs untroubled in productiveness.
 Pure, cool mountain water in abundance.
 Magnificent mountain and beach scenery.
 Splendid hunting and fishing.

What Tillamook Has Not:
 No Chinese to compete with American labor.
 No irrigation, with its expensive litigation.
 No codling moths to destroy the apples.
 No potato pest of any kind.
 No long severe winters, when stock must be housed and fed.
 No severe frosts to destroy vegetation.
 No crop failure from any cause whatever.
 No earthquakes, cyclones, blizzards, droughts, or excessive heat.
 No tramps or strikes.

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy a Safe Medicine for Children.
 In buying a cough medicine for children, never be afraid to buy Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. There is no danger from it, and relief is always sure to follow. It is intended especially for coughs, colds, croup and whooping cough, and there is no better medicine in the world for these diseases. It is not only a certain cure for croup, but, when given as soon as the croupy cough appears, will prevent the attack. Whooping cough is not dangerous when this remedy is given as directed. It contains no opium or other harmful drugs, and may be given as confidently to a baby as to an adult. For sale by Clough's Drug Store.

A PATERNAL CRITICISM.

Sir Henry Irving's Comment on His Son's Early Hamlet.
 H. R. Irving, son of Sir Henry Irving, was not educated primarily for the stage. Studying for the profession of barrister, while he was still in college he took part in amateur theatricals. An amusing story is told of one of his earlier interpretations of the difficult role of Hamlet. On this particular and early occasion, however, Sir Henry was "out in front," and after the performance several, including his son, crowded about him for an expression of opinion.
 "What do you think of Smith as Polonius?" asked one.
 "Good, very good," murmured Sir Henry in his quiet, kindly way.
 "And Miss Blank as Ophelia?"
 "Good, very good," again murmured Sir Henry.
 "And Jones as the king?"
 "Good, very good," repeated Sir Henry.
 "And Thomas as Horatio?"
 "Good, very good," came the answer.
 So the entire cast was gone through with the exception of the principal character, and each received the same precise, neat criticism, "good, very good." Then there was a slight pause, an awkward pause, after which the son, who had been waiting eagerly and anxiously for his father's opinion about his acting, managed to pluck up enough courage to stammer, "But, father—what did you think of—the rest of the cast?"
 Sir Henry looked blandly at his son and then remarked dryly, "Are you sure that you want to be an actor, my son?"—Bohemian Magazine.

MAN AND MONEY.

The Change That Often Comes With the Acquisition of Wealth.
 The transforming power of money the moment it gets into a man's possession is one of the unsolved mysteries of the universe. Of course we know that the poison of avarice and greed is in the character and not in the money, but it is unfortunate that the possession of money seems to develop, to bring out, some of the worst human qualities, qualities which never develop in poverty or show themselves under ordinary circumstances.
 Before we get possession of money we feel sure that we will not allow it to warp and twist our ideals. We are going to show the world a sane use of money. We are going to help everybody. We are going to help struggling merit, assist poor boys and girls to get an education and to get a start in the world. We are going to be helpful and useful in the largest possible way.
 But it is a strange trait in human nature that, no matter how humble or democratic or helpful and companionable people may be while poor, just as soon as the average man gets more than his fellows he begins to domineer over them and to use the very wealth which he was so anxious to get to enable him to help his fellow men to oppress and keep them down.—O. S. Marden in Success Magazine.

Not a Bad Prescription.

On a family druggist's prescription file is an oft repeated prescription bearing number 37,111. The Latin of the twentieth century reads: "Recipe. Ticketori theatri numero duo signa. Take this afternoon. Dr. —"
 Obviously, it is an order on the druggist written by a reputable physician for two theater tickets, and the patients, mother and daughter, are enabled to take needed treatment at a matinee while the busy husband and father remains at work. The reason for the scheme as told the druggist by the doctor was the absolute need of mother and daughter for recreation, and as the druggist has a theater ticket office it was readily and satisfactorily arranged.—New York Sun.

What Breathing Amounts To.

In each respiration an average adult inhales one pint of air. A man breathes sixteen to twenty times a minute, and a young child about twenty-five to thirty-five times. While in a standing posture the number of respirations is greater than when lying down. A man takes only thirteen breaths of air to the minute while reclining. The superficial surface of the lungs is 200 square yards. The amount of air inspired by an adult in twenty-four hours is about 10,000 quarts. The least amount of air needed by an adult in one hour is 380 quarts. The heart sends through the lungs 5,000 gallons of blood daily.

Most Birds Love Toys.

Most birds love toys. The playthings help to while away the time and prevent them from tearing their plumage. Parrots are especially devoted to playthings and can be trained to do simple tricks with the objects specially fancied. A soft billed bird will amuse itself for an hour with a peanut which it cannot break, a tiny bell or a mirror just big enough to reflect its own head.—Mary Dawson in St. Nicholas.

Fixing the Value.

Jones—So the price of that "old master" is $5,000. It doesn't look to be worth $10.
 Art Dealer—Yes, but remember it was painted in 1240. Just think what $10 at compound interest would amount to for that length of time!

Impertinent.

Old Doctor—What are those white objects I see in the distance, my dear? Miss Pert—Those are signs advertising your profession, sir. Old Doctor—Ah, I thought they might be tombstones. Miss Pert—So they are.

Suppose She Had Been Out!

"What day was I born on, mother?"
 Thursday, child.
 "Wasn't that fortunate? It's your day at home!"—Harper's Weekly.

"A GOOD LOOKER."

Appearances Have Much to Do With Success in Business.
 "Send me a good looker. I don't mean pretty, you know, but one who knows how to dress—the tailor made kind who visits the hairdresser and the manicure. Of course I know it costs, but we are willing to pay for it." This was a telephone message received by a large employment agency from a business man who required the services of a young woman bookkeeper and general office assistant.
 A shabby necktie or soiled linen or a cheap, well worn hat may cost you very dear, for it may be a turning point in some one's mind who has been thinking of patronizing you. Business men are keen eyed, very sharp and often influenced by little things. Many a worthy youth has been sent away when applying for a situation because of some telltale in his dress or manner which made a bad impression. Young men may so far emphasize the matter of dress that their good appearance is about all there is to them. At the same time appearances have much to do with one's advancement, especially in large cities. In New York it is almost impossible for young men to get a start who are obliged to overcome the handicap of an unfavorable impression. It seems as though New Yorkers would forgive anything quicker than a slovenly or a poverty stricken appearance.—Success Magazine.

STREETS IN A BIG STORE.

The Piles of Merchandise Are Numbered Like Houses.
 In a large wholesale grocery house in Kansas City the lanes that intersect the great piles of merchandise have been named as streets, and the stacks of boxes, bags and packages have each been marked with a number, as the houses upon city streets are numbered. The other day a member of the firm gave the following order to a trucker: "Go over to Easy street, get that bunch of swells and take them to parlor 8."
 A stranger in the big store would not have known what that order meant. The trucker knew.
 All canned goods that swell from the formation of gases inside are called "swells" in the grocery trade. In this house all "swells" are kept in a room upstairs called "parlor 8." "Easy street" is a lane that leads down to "Fairland," the big room where many girls work putting up packages.
 "Clabber alley" is the lane which passes through the great stacks of condensed milk. "Cornucopia lane" goes through the cornmeal packages and barrels.

The system of naming the streets and dividing the different brands of goods into numbers facilitates the business of order filling to the extent that almost twice the work can be done now by the same number of order fillers that could be done a few years ago.—Kansas City Star.

The Free Lance's Paradise.

The literary free lance is bred naturally in New York and thrives in its atmosphere because the market for his wares is stable and infinitely varied. The very life of metropolitan publishing lies in the search for new men and variety. Publishers spend great sums upon the winnowing machinery that thrashes over what comes to their editors' desks, and no editor in the metropolis grudges the time necessary to talk with those who call in person and have ideas good enough to carry them past his assistants. Publicly the editorial tribe may lament the many hours spent yearly in this winnowing process. Yet every experienced editor in New York has his own story of the stranger, unthought, unpromising, unready of speech, who stole in late one afternoon and seemed to have almost nothing in him, yet who afterward became the prolific scribbler or the great D'Auber.—J. H. Collins in Atlantic.

What a Jubilee Is.

Some years ago, before Queen Victoria's death and about the time that the queen's jubilee was to be celebrated, the following conversation between two old Scotchwomen was overheard one day on a street corner in London: "Can ye tell me, wumman, what is it they call a jubilee?"
 "Well, it's this," said her neighbor. "When folk has been married twenty-five years, that's a silver wuddin', and when they have been married fifty years that's a golden wuddin', but if the mon's dead then it's a jubilee."—Harper's Weekly.

Arnold and His Circus.

Matthew Arnold used to travel in company with Mrs. Arnold, his two daughters and the agent, whom he elegantly called his "impresario." They usually had railway passes given to them, and on several occasions, when presenting these to the conductor, he remarked in a condescending tone, "Oh, the Arnold troop, I suppose?" "Just as if we were a traveling circus," said Mr. Arnold, with a hearty laugh.

The Best Return.

After all, it isn't the way we live or the work we do that matters, but the ideal we put into it. Is there any work too sordid, too prosaic, to yield a return of beauty?—Ellen Glasgow.

Nothing to Steal.

Minister's Wife—Wake up! There are burglars in the house, John. Minister—Well, what of it? Let them find out their mistake themselves.—Christian Register.

Don't speak too plainly.

If a man were to set out by calling everything by its right name, he would be knocked down before he got to the corner of the street.—Exchange.
