BOYISH DESIRE FOR WORK.

often a Sign of Arrested Development It Brings to Light Many Curlous Instead of Strength.

Parents often think that their son is get to work young, wants to leave gn of strength, but always of weak-When a boy wants to get to ork instead of getting ready to work indicates arrested development.

There is not one probability in fifty hat a boy who desires to leave school t the sixth grade and is allowed to do will ever amount to anything. It is t the fact that he does not have as ich education as the other boys, but at be does not have their purpose to t ready for the doing of things.

Teachers often greatly err in dealing Ith such boys and their parents by ying to show how important it is at they should know what they will rn in the seventh and eighth grades, bereas that is the least part of it. It a case of arrested development usuy, and this is what should be treattreated as a disease.

CARD PLAYING.

Phases of Human Nature.

Card playing gives an observer an ecially promising because he wants insight into one of the many curious phases of human nature—the almost universal belief in luck even among educated men of more than average in-

One player I knew well-I must admit he also believed in astrologyabsolutely refused to play cards during one special month in each year, be cause he had reason to believe that that month was unlucky to him. Yet he was one of the most level headed card players I have known and in or dinary matters a man of great common

I was at one time intimately ac quainted with a club where the stakes played for were comparatively high and where the players were, with hardly an exception, hard headed men who were keen about winning and who were at the same time a singularly social, kindly and liberal minded body

Among the members was a very pleasant, quiet old gentleman whose only occupation was to spend his days at his club, and especially in its card

At the period when I first knew him he had ceased playing cards himself, but was extremely fond of watching other people play. He was the most inoffensive of spectators, never made comments or criticisms and simply amused himself in watching the fall

Gradually, however, experience showed or was imagined to show that any player whose cards he overlooked held bad hands with, as it was asserted, an extraordinary regularity. He invariably asked permission be-fore sitting down beside a player, and the moment the player held bad cards he offered, without being asked, to leave the table, an offer which, I am ashamed to say, was invariably accept-

To put the fact plainly, he was tabooed from watching card playing because he was supposed to bring ill luck by the mere fact of his vicinity .-Pall Mall Magazine.

MARRED THE MUSIC.

Secret of the Poor Performance at a High Class Concert.

"Musical critics sometimes complain of what they call the roughness of an orchestral performance without always considering that the cause may be found in the instruments rather than in the performers." At least so says the leader of a St. Louis organization.

"There was some criticism of the orchestral numbers given at a concert last winter, but I know that the fault was not that of the men so much as of the instruments. Almost every player has at least two, sometimes three or four, Instruments, and one at least is the best he can afford to buy. This is especially true in the case of the strings, for accidents will happen, and to be prepared against them string players have usually two or three violins-one for ordinary work, like teaching, dancing and rehearsing, and a superior violin for solos and concerts.

"Now, it happened that on the evening of the concert in question the weather was atroclous. It was snowing and sleeting and raining by turns. A genuine violinist thinks about as London Telegraph, is there a word his youngest child, and so on the concert night the string player thought to himself that he wouldn't take out his good fiddle. It might get damp or he might fall off the street car with it and smash it to splinters, so he resolved to leave it at home and take his everyday fiddle, thinking that in the ensem ble nobody but himself would notice the difference.

"But every other string player thought the same thing, so most of them left their best violins at home and brought their practice instruments. The public didn't notice the difference, but the players and the leader did, and in an audience there are always people with almost miraculous ears for variations of tone, and some of these did the complaining."-St. Louis Globe-Demo-

An Awful Shock.

The deputy stage manager at the Theatre Royal, Dublin, at one time was a little man named Linders, who had a strange dislike of the ladies of the ballet and treated them rather harshly. He wore a wig, but the fact was not generally known. On one occasion, however, an enraged coryphee seized him by the hair, and off came the wig, exposing a shiny expanse of cranium. He at once dashed off to complain to Mrs. Harris, the manager's but the good lady could only gasp in stupefied tones, "Good gracious Mr. Linders, why, you are bald!" To which Linders instantly replied: "No, madam, no. My hair became loose with horror!"

The Utilitarian Age.
The more picturesque the country the more inevitable it appears to be that its beauty must be menaced and in most instances eventually much impaired by the erection of a hideous line of telephone posts, with their relent-less reminder that we live in an age in which the beautiful has constantly to be sacrificed to the useful.-Country
