Britisher Invents Novel Railway.

The mechanical wonder of the age, according to an English paper, was exhibited to a wondering meeting of the Royal Society at Burlington House, England, recently. It was the train of the future—a train that travel at the enormous speed of 200 miles an hour. This marvellous single line railway has been invented by Mr. Louis Brennan, C.B., already famous for the invention of the torpedo which bears his name. What the distinguished gathering at the Royal Society saw, was a little rail way truck running along a single rail, balancing itself like a living creature as the lines curved to left or right, dipped or ascended. Whether in motion backwards or forwards, slowly or quickly, or whether standing perfectly still, the thing stood perfectly upright on its single row of wheels, in flat defiance of gravity. Its wheels follow one another like the wheels of a bicycle. Its centre of gravity is far above its point of support. There is no projecting supports of any kind by which it holds to its upright position. The purpose of Mr. Brennan's invention is described in the patents as being to preserve the equilibrium on unstable bodies, or, in other words, to prevent topheavy bodies from toppling over. That is to say, it is a mechanical contrivance for performing a miracle. But there is no mystery about Mr. Brennan's invention. His little railway train is kept in perfect equilibrium on its single line of support by a marvellously ingenious application of the principle which keeps a spinning top upright. Calling the spinning top a gyroscope or a gyrostat, scientists have investigated its properties and mathematicians have lost themselves in intricate calculations. It is the principal of the spinning top which maintains the equipoise of the universe. The mono-railway is really the gyroscope-railway. The wagon does not itself spin round, but boxed out of sight inside the body of the vehicle is an arrangement of gyroscopes which produce the apparently marvellous effect. Of course, if the fixing of a gyroscope or a combination of gyroscopes inside a vehicle were sufficient to keep it balanced upon a single rail, the Brennan mono-railway would have been invented long ago. Mr. Brennan's invention is the gyroscope plus something else, the gyroscope plus a mechanical contrivance by which its effect is brought under direction and control. He employs two gyroscope wheels revolving in opposite directions, but linked together as far as their rotatory movement, that is known as the precession, is concerned. The simple gyroscope of the familiar toy will not give permanent equilibrium to an unstable body for a very short time. The model Mr. Brennan showed is large enough to carry a load of ten stone weight. The two gyroscope wheels which keep it balanced are only five inches in diameter, revolving at a rate of 7,000 a minute. They are driven by electricity from storage batteries in the model, and the same batteries supply driving power to the row of gyroscopic wheels. But any other motive power may be employed. Mr. Brennan has a single rail laid about the grounds of his house. In some places it is an inch or so only above the ground. In one the single rail consists of a wire rope stretched across a dip in the ground at a height of six or seven feet. Across this tightrope the wonderful little car runs with perfect balance. The inventor is constructing a full sized vehicle. The larger the size, he declares, the more effectively his invention operates, since with larger gyroscope wheels the necessary peripheral velocity is attained with a smaller rate of revolution. The advantage of a railway that only needs a single line is self-evident.

Remarkable Rescue.
The truth is stranger than fiction, has once more been demonstrated in the little town of Fedora, Tenn., the residence of C. V. Pepper. He writes: "I was in bed, entirely disabled with hemorrhages of the lungs and throat. Doctors failed to help me, and all hope had fled when I began taking Dr. King's New Discovery. Then instant relief came. The coughing soon ceased, the bleeding diminished rapidly, and in three weeks I was able to go to work." Guaranteed for coughs and colds. 50c. and $1.00, at Clough's drug store. Trial bottle free.

A democratic paper remarks on the presidential situation that the south will be reasonably safe no matter who is nominated. Also unreasonably safe for any thing labeled democratic. Political discrimination in that section has long been unknown, and the vote cast has dwindled accordingly.

Changes in Pension Roll During April, 1907.

Number of pensioners on roll April 1, 1907	972,875
Gains to roll during April, 1907	2,491
Losses to roll during April, 1907	5,468
Net loss to roll in April, 1907	2,977
Number of pensioners on roll April 30, 1907	969,898
Civil war survivors included in above number as follows, viz:
Number on roll April 1, 1907	650,275
Gains during April, 1907	882
Losses during April, 1907	3,616
Other causes	25
Total loss	3,641
Net loss in April, 1907	2,759

Number of civil war survivors on roll April 30, 1907 647,516

There are two things that will at once strike whoever scans the above report.

The first is that in spite of the great activity of the Pension Bureau in passing upon claims, and the unprecedentedly large volume of allowances, the aggregate of the pension roll is steadily diminishing.

In the month of April the Bureau allowed more cases than ever before in its history, but in spite of this the total of the roll diminished 2,759. That is more than a good strong brigade—probably nearer the average strength of a division at the close of the war—marched off the rolls into the Eternal Encampment.

The next thing is the fewness of the original claims.

Some of the paper have been putting up great "scareheads" about "Rush of Veterans for Pensions." "A Total of 325,415 Application Up to Date," "Commissioner Warner's Force Swept Off His Feet," "No Slackening in Sight," etc.

Good Manners Secret.

Most mothers hold, consciously or unconsciously, one of two theories about the acquirement of manners by their children.

One mother says: "Manners are only the outward sign of the inner nature. If my daughter has a kind heart and a well trained mind she will behave in a gentle, charming fashion. It will teach her compassion, respect for age, unselfish zeal for helping with the world's work. Her manners will take care of themselves."

Another mother says: "My girls will never get on without conventional manners. They shall be taught from babyhood to emulate the speech and bearing of ladies. They shall be instructed in the proper behavior for every occasion. They shall walk and dance and write and speak with graceful perfection."

Neither method, says the Youth's Companion, produces altogether satisfactory results.

Unselfishness is truly the foundation of good manners, but not the superstructure. Many conventional restrictions have grown about social relations. Some can be explained by the demand of kindness and some cannot. Could a child infer from his desire to help other that he should not eat with his knife? Many offenses against good taste interfere in some way with the rights of others, but many others do not.

Still no set of rules to produce a polished lady will achieve a result fit for the strain of life. The members of the French boarding school may adorn the ballroom, but are too likely to fall at the breakfast table or in the crowded car. The woman of perfect manners must reinforce her unselfishness by social rules, and conventionality must be vitalized by the way of others' pleasure. The best or the never "comes naturally," whether in manners or morals.

The secret of charming manners is the desire for them. When the mother wishes them for her daughter as much as she wishes the other goods of the world her daughter will have them.

Every Man His Own Doctor.

The average man cannot afford to employ a physician for every slight ailment or injury that may occur in his family, nor can he afford to neglect them, as so slight an injury as the scratch of a pin has been known to cause the loss of a limb. Hence every man must from necessity be his own doctor for this class of ailments. Success often depends upon prompt treatment, which can only be had when suitable medicines are kept at hand. Chamberlain's Remedies have been in the market for many years and enjoy a good reputation. They sell for 25 cents a bottle.

Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy for bowel complaints. Chamberlain's Cough Remedy for coughs, colds, croup and whooping cough. Chamberlain's Pain Balm (an antiseptic liniment) for cuts, bruises, burns, sprains, swellings, lame back and rheumatic pains. Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets for constipation, biliousness and stomach troubles. Chamberlain's Salve for diseases of the skin. One bottle of each of these five preparations costs but $1.25. For sale by Clough's Drug Store.

There is an unwritten law in South Carolina which entitles the citizen to an eye opener and a nightcap, no matter what the legislatures and courts and temperance people may say on the subject.

A Forunate Texan.

Mr. E. W. Goodloe, of 107 St. Louis St. Dallas, Tex., says: "In the past year I have become acquainted with Dr. King's New Life Pills, and no laxative I ever before tried so effectually disposes of malaria and biliousness." They don't grind nor gripe—25c. at Clough's Drug Store.

Rejoicing vs. Lamentation.

TO THE EDITOR TILLAMOOK HEADLIGHT. It all depends on how we worship, whether we seek to rejoice in the hope of glory or whether we seek God's favor by our lamentation.

Somehow or other we conceive the fool idea that God is pleased to see us in a lamentable condition, so we try to droop our ears and look melancholy, so that the people will say that we look like a weeping Jesus.

If you give a child a spanking you will put him in a sorry mood, but if you give him a toy he will rejoice. What parent glories to see a child with a broken spirit?

We who believe in the grace of Christ, the love of God and the communion of the Holy Ghost have reason to rejoice. Chastisement might have been good enough for the dark ages, but God has given us something over which to rejoice and be glad.

This is where the popular preacher and I conflict. He wants men to bow at his feet lamentably, while I want a man to rejoice in the hope of glory to be glad that he is living in the greatest age of all.

Lamentation is one of the objectionable features of insanity. To live in a morose, lamentable atmosphere, makes one dependent and forlorn and hopeless, but to rejoice in the hope of life brings happiness and joy.

The Independent Church is for men to rejoice in. There are plenty of other churches in which to lament.

A word to the cheese maker. A little more paint please, as we see, we got more for cheese in April than March.

DROWNED—Little Florence, the two year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. M. Curl, of Blaine, was drowned last Friday, in a small stream close to their home.

O sad is our home, Since Florence has left us, No more through the house will her happy laugh ring. In the cold ground, neat the sod we have laid her; Soon o'er her the flowers will blossom in spring.
