Dry towns hurt the undertaking business. This fact was brought out by S. N. Wilkins, of Corvallis, at the session of the Oregon State Funeral Directors' As sociation, of which society he is president. Mr. Wilkins stated that for the past 12 years he had kept a record of all the deaths in and around Corvallis, and he had noted that in the past four years, during which time the Benton County capital has been a dry town, there has capital has been a dry town, there has been a decrease of 50 percent in the number of violent deaths over the last four years that the place was wet.

Death of Mrs. Ella R. Hays.

Mrs. Ella R. Hays died on June 30th, 1907, at the St. Vincent Hospital in Portland. Oregon, after a long and pain-

She was married to Robert R. Hays in December, 1883, at Dayton, Wash., where she was at that time con ducting a business college. Soon after her marriage, she came to Tillamook with her husband, where she has resided most of the time since.

Many years of her life, since reaching young womanhood, has been spent with marked ability as a teacher in the schools of Washington and Oregon. She was a teacher for ten years in the public school of Tillaniook City. During her last year's work here, she was elected as a teacher to the Weston State Normal School, and it was while teaching at Weston that she was taken sick, caused by cancer, for which an operation was decided upon last November, in the hopes of her re-covery, but it seemed to have been de-covery, but it seemed to have been decreed otherwise.

She is survived by two sons and two daughters: R. Blaine and Robert Hays and Misses Ella and Helen Hays; also, by her mother, Mrs. E. J. Ross, and a sister, Mrs. Helen Kerr, residing at Milwaukee, Ore.; a brother, Edmund Ross, and a sister, Mrs. Anna Roberts, residing at Portland, Ore; a sister, Mrs. Eva Fitzpatrick, of Tillamook; and Mrs. Edna Kaminer, of Manila. At the time of her death, Mrs. Havs church of Tillamook; also a member of the Woman's Woodcraft and the Fra-

Mrs. Hays was a woman of unusua energy and ability, and always stood for what was the best in the community. A generous, noble and self sacrificing dis position. she will be missed by her many triends.

Womanhood has been exhalted by he having lived, and there must be placed in her life's crown the brightest of jewels-wife and mother-won by a stainless life and character, by pure thoughts and high ideals; sustained by unwavering devotion, tender acts of love and true sympathy. In her death, great is the loss to her children, but the world is better by her having lived.

The remains will be brought in on the next steamer for burial, and, no doubt, a large number of the pupils of the public school will attend the funeral, as she

We think they are wise.

What a beautiful place Tillamook Bay could be made with a suction dredge an the expenditure of some money.

We would respectfully suggest that the matter of building an automobile road be turned over to the honking machine, for it takes several columns of matter every week honking about itself and tooting its own horn.

It was reported at the city council meeting on Monday that over $100 had been collected in fines last month. The city officials must be getting next and must have got out of the long rut of paying the city marshal a salary for no other purpose than for holding down the job and drawing the pay.

Three per cent allowed on deposits subject to check.

If the Tillamook Bay peninsula can be made such a beautiful Summer resort, the Netarts peninsula is just as attraction banking by mail is ready. the Netarts peninsula is just as attrac-tive and pretty, to say nothing of other beautiful spots in Tillamook which will become popular seaside resorts. The Tillamook Bay peninsula is not the only pebble on Tillamook's rugged beaches.

To make any comment whatever upon the conditions, circumstances and events which apparently block the way for a railroad to Coos Bay would be to invite an attack of vituperation from the press of that section of the state. So what's the use? Let us turn to a more pleasing picture of rapid railroad building to Tillamook Bay, and, when difficulties shall have been removed at the port farther south, we can look that way again and enjoy the view of industrial and commercial development. Just now all roads lead to Tillamook.-Oregonian.

One of our business men makes the suggestion that a harbor line be established and that the city improve the water front by driving a row of piling and filling it up with the dirt diedged from the slough. A good water front is a fine thing for any city, and with the expenditure of several thousand dollars, Stopat White House depening and widening the water front, we believe it would be one of the best improvements the city can make, for the time is now ripe to do something and to keep pace with the improvements which will soon be going on in other places. It was while Mr. Talmage was mayor that he interested himself in a water front line and the strip of government land. improvements the city can make, for the line and the strip of government land 202566 202 20220 20220 20220 202 matter up with the Commission, but as far as we know, nothing was accom-plished in establishing a water front line. and for the widening and deepening of the harbor front.

In the death of Mrs. Mary E. Stillwell another name is added to the death roll of pioneer women, who played an important part in the early settlement of Oregon. It is often said of the early pioneers that they possessed extraordinary grit, strength and intelligence. This is true of Mrs. Stillwell, as all who were personally acquainted must readily admit. She ally acquainted must readily admit. She was one of the many noble women who came to Oregon in the early days and valiantly did her part under trying conditions. As a young intelligent woman, as one of the best of wives and fondest of mothers, or as a dear friend, shejhas left her imprint on the sands of time, and as she passed away, her labors ended, to the life beyond, we cannot do other than honor and reverence her memory. Mrs. Stillwell was a good woman, imbued with early piety, industry and intelligence, and she has gone to her reward.

The business men of Tillamook City pulled together and worked together and succeeded in securing a right of way for a railroad, and as a result the county is a raifoad, and as a result the county is about to emerge from its long bottled-up condition. But mark the contrast. It was again demonstrated at the city council on Monday that whenever that body undertakes to open up streets and improve the city there are those who raise obstacles. That is a good way to retard the progress of the city and drive new settlers to other prospective towns in the county. Our contention is that all streets should be opened up and improved at the property owner's expense, for it is not right or equitable to compe people. We say o
