The Round Up of the Rascals.

Mayor Schmitz of San Francisco has been found guilty on the charge of extorting money from restaurant keepers. This is only one of the charges that have been brought against Schmitz. The case has been pending for a long time. It is not ended yet, even for Schmitz, for he will appeal to higher courts. And many other offenders are still to be brought before the bar. The courts will be kept busy for months to come. It will be a grand work for the city and for the state which the courts will be called upon to perform, and they have made a beginning which gives confidence in the courts' intelligence, courage and civic spirit.

In this whole San Francisco rottenness figures the shabbiest and vilest rascals whom the country has seen. Tweed and all his confederates who were caught and convicted took their punishment with a courage which won them the respect of the community which they despoiled. But when the law began to reach out for the San Francisco grafters there was a race between the chief bandits to see which one of them could turn state's evidence first, and get the immunity which comes to the informer who 'peaches' on his pals. 'Abe' Ruef, the man who furnished the brains to Schmitz, got to the confidential first. There has been a wordy war between these two personages since Ruef's confession, but the whole truth will be sure to come out before the courts let go their hold of the leading brigands.

And this is the beginning of the end of an experiment in government by the lower elements of the community. When Mayor James D. Phelan, in the teamsters' strike of seven years ago in San Francisco, suppressed the rioters and restored order, the rioters and their sympathizers determined to set up a government of their own in that town. Feeling that the candidates who would be put up by the republican and democratic parties would be public spirited men, who would enforce the law against law-breakers of all sorts, they formed the union labor party, nominating Eugene E. Schmitz, a member of an orchestra in one of the theaters, for mayor, and in the strife between the two big parties the union labor party put Schmitz in office, and he has theoretically been in ever since, except as the courts have hampered him in the exercise of his activities. It is pretty safe to say that one or the other of the big parties will elect the next mayor who is chosen in San Francisco.—Globe Democrat.

Swindler in Pulpit Impressed Bishop

UTICA, July 6.—The Rev. Philip R. Peabody, a native of Batavia, N. Y., but recently engaged in missionary work in Colorado and Wyoming, preached in two local Episcopal churches last Sunday. His eloquence and general dignity made such a profound impression that Bishop Olmsted set about arranging to have him supply various pulpits in this diocese during the vacation period.

To-night the Rev. Mr. Peabody is a prisoner in Utica Jail, beginning a term of six months at hard labor for larceny, which he confessed in Magistrate O'Connor's court today. Thus was a smooth-tongued rogue brought to justice after swindling religious bodies and merchants from the Atlantic to the Pacific coast.

When Peabody came to Utica with his wife several weeks ago he produced credentials which appeared to bear out his story of being a clergyman in the East for a change of scene, and he quickly ingratiated himself into the confidence of the local ministers. But it was not long before he had some financial transactions which aroused suspicion, and investigation proved him to be an impostor.

On Wednesday he fled with his wife and the same afternoon his turned up in Rome with a check to cash, but while a merchant was looking up his references he fled. On Thursday the 'Rev.' Mr. Peabody and his wife obtained employment at the State Asylum in Rome as nurses, and that evening they bought vast quantities of goods on the credit of the institution.

In the mean time a warrant was sworn out in this city for the arrest of the bogus preacher, and the Rome police arrested the couple. While Chief Barry was interrogating Peabody and the woman there last night the two pounced upon him and a free-for-all fight ensued, ending in the Chief knocking out both his prisoners, but not before the woman had stabbed him with a hat pin. The wound is not a severe one.

To-day in the City Court Peabody pleaded guilty and admitted he had employed the clerical garb for swindling purposes for three years. His wife was liberated.

Best Medicine in the World for Colic and Diarrhoea.

I find Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy to be the best remedy in the world. says Mr. C. L. Carter, of Skisum, Ala. "I am subject to colic and diarrhoea. Last spring it seemed as though I would die, and I think I would if I hadn't taken Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. I haven't been troubled with it since until this week, when I had a very severe attack and took half a bottle of the twenty-five cent size Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, and this morning I feel like a new man." Abraham Lincoln.

BY HELEN BEALS. Awarded Second Prize by the Nehalem School Officers' Association.

America has produced many great and noted men, but perhaps no name is more often quoted than that of Abraham Lincoln.

Abraham Lincoln was born in Hardin county, Kentucky, February 12th, 1809.

He was called Abe for short. When Abe was about 7 years old, the family moved to the south-western part of Indiana. The country was thickly wooded, and in order to get to their destination it was necessary to cut a road to get through.

When they reached the place for their new home they had to build a cabin to live in, so they built a half-face camp, this was a log hut with three sides to it. There were no doors, no windows and no floor but the earth.

They did their cooking on a fire in the front of the open side of the hut.

A buffalo skin was hung across the front for protection in the winter. The family lived in this half-faced camp about a year, when a better house was built.

Lincoln went to a rude a, b, c school when ever he got a chance, but he used to say in his later years that he was not at school more than a year altogether.

He was very eager to learn and at night he would throw a piece of spice wood on the fire to make a better light, then he would read and cipher.

He did his ciphering on a wooden shovel or smooth board with a charcoal stick, when the work was done he would plane it off and it was ready for work again.

Lincoln read every book he could get hold of. They did not have many books out there, so he had to take any he could get, among them were Aesop's Fables, Robinson Crusoe and Bunyon's Pilgrim's Progress.

When he could get paper he would copy long extracts of what he read, using a pen made from some wild fowl's feather and ink made from the roots and briers.

When Abe was plowing and the horses needed a rest, he would perch himself on top of a worm fence, pull out his little book that he had made and read.

He soon grew to know more than the rest of his companions, and he could write an excellent hand.

Lincoln's mother died when he was 9 years old, and he missed her very much.

In about a year his father married again.

Lincoln's step mother was an able, energetic woman. She encouraged Lincoln in all his efforts to read and study, and he became very fond of her.

She said of him afterwards, Abe was a good boy, he never gave me a cross word, or look, he was a dutiful son to me always.

Abraham dressed in roughly tanned trousers, linsley woolsey coat, a pair of moccasins on his feet and a coon skin cap.

Abraham was taught to plough, to thresh the wheat with a flail and to carry the grain to the mill.

Besides this his father taught him his trade as that of a carpenter.

He grew up to be an able bodied man. He was 6 feet 4 inches tall and very strong. He could out lift, out work and out wrestle any man he came in contact with.

When he was 19 years of age he went to New Orleans on a flat-boat as a bow hand. His business was to work at the front oars and for this work on the boat he received $8 a month and his passage through.

This trip took weeks and sometimes months to accomplish. His return from New Orleans his father moved to Illinois.

Lincoln drove the ox wagon in which the goods were carried. It was a two weeks' journey.

When they got there Lincoln helped to build the log cabin and helped split rails to fence in the 10 acres which were to be planted with corn for the first year's crop.

Seeing his father's family located, he struck out for himself. He was now 21.

Having little or no money, the first thing he did was to split rails and make enough to buy some brown jean to make him a pair of trousers.

He was always industrious and took advantage of every opportunity to make a few dollars. He did his work well and was honest in all his dealings.

Although his early life was full of trials and hardships, yet he conquered them all, and became a wise and able statesman.

He was twice elected president of the United States, and finally met his death in 1865 at the hands of an assassin.

We may still have many presidents and great men, but the name of Abraham Lincoln will be imprinted upon the hearts of the American people as long as the pages of her history continue to exist.

Since 1856, in twelve times at bat, the Democratic party has only made two scores, both of which were driven by Grover Cleveland. The best that Colonel Bryan could do was to fan the air.
