The Tramp.

By CARL DAWSON.

A tramp is usually a bewiskered gentleman with an empty stomach and a strong aversion to hard work. His long suit is walking. Whenever he rides, which is seldom, it is on a brake beam, which accounts for his being always broke. When in the country his chief haunts are the kitchen door and the haystack. He lives on pie—when he can get it—and other things in season. You will know a tramp by his trademarks, which are a red nose and a tin can. When a tramp dies, he is sometimes buried and forgotten. Sometimes he is not buried, but is always forgotten. This does not make much difference to him, however, as he is usually much warmer than when in this cold, cruel world.

One of the next bills that should be brought before the House is a bill to provide a lock and key for the House of Representatives, to keep the boys from leaving when the Senate is out.

Mr. Carl Dawson, of the Bugle Call staff, has retired on account of poor health. His brother, known as "Dutchy," is going to take his place, and we guess he will make a good one, for Dutchy is a rustler.

Work on the play has begun, and teachers and players are working hard.

A number of young people gave Elsie Lamb a nice little surprise last Saturday evening, it being her fifteenth birthday, and all present said they had a fine time.

"Oscar, wake up! You are getting slow." For further information ask Oscar Aschim, or remind him of Saturday.

Horace's mother told him to come home as soon as the Senate was out, you know, and of course he minds well. As he was leaving the House last meeting, he met a lot of girls, who gave him quite a scare, and tried to go back to the House, but, of course, he had to mind his mother.

Mr. Peters, the ball player, Swence got hit on the ear with a small round sphere.

We know by the hammering over our heads on Thursday that new shingles were being put on the roof.

The big boys don't seem to take so much interest in "shinney" as they did, but the small ones go at it as hard as ever. The best part of the game is to see them hide their sticks when the bell rings.

George had a painful mishap of dropping his razor on his toe while shaving the other day. It did not cut his foot, but it mashed it badly.

Wanted—By Bill Burdick. One old battery and a piece of copper wire.

For sale—one horse twenty-seven years old, perfectly safe when asleep. Apply to the Edgar sisters.

Wanted by Miss Lister, a good chore boy.

Any one who happens to be much troubled by mice should apply to W. Westinghouse Burdick and Prof. Rutherford. These two gentlemen have so perfected the art of catching mice that they make the assertion that they will catch them while you wait. The school building offers a fine field for experiment along this line just now.

Don't pick up all the pairs you find on the street, these days, or you may get two peaches, instead.

'Was Burdick from Wheeler. Who great fame has won, For defending Bob's bill, For a little mon.

At the meeting of the Senate on Thursday evening, the minutes of the preceding meeting were read and approved. The report of the committee on eligibility was accepted. House Bill No. 8, for the extermination of coyotes and wild-cats, was passed. The resolution from the House to commend Pres. Roosevelt for trying to name his successor, was passed after considerable discussion.

When Prof. Rutherford calls Blanche, Elmer comes, too, which fact leaves us guessing whether it is the Professor or Blanche that Elmer likes so well.

NOTICE.—All names appearing in this paper are names of good natured people, and we hope no one will get a wrong impression about them.

The following conversation was heard by one of the editors. What is the meaning of the word "feller"? It means "sheep thief." Then would Clarence be a "feller"? He only got a Lamb.

The proceedings of the House of Representatives.

Mr. Peters, of Curry, called for the reading of House Bill No. 11, which was for an act to levy a tax upon all income which exceeded one thousand dollars per year. Mr. Peters then made a short speech for his bill, after which, in the short discussion that followed, there was little opposition. This excellent bill was then put to a vote and passed by a large majority.

Mr. Burdick, that noted Representative from Wheeler, called for the reading of House Bill No. 10, which was to enact a law for the purpose of straightening and deepening Hoquarton Slough, Tillamook, Oregon. In a speech made by Representative Stillwell, of Tillamook, he said: "All cities must have their beginning. Tillamook has begun and before many years will be one of the great cities of the west." The bill was then voted on but lost.

The motion concerning the eligibility of Mr. Dawson was left upon the table on account of his absence.

Mr. Rutherford brought a charge against Mr. Hansen, of not being old enough to sit in the House of Representatives. After a short discussion, in which Mr. Hansen gave his age as 23, the motion to expel carried. There was a misunderstanding among members of the House, so the motion to reconsider the matter carried. The matter was then laid on the table.

Mr. Burdick made a motion to impeach the Sergeant at Arms for not doing his duty, but before action was taken a motion to adjourn carried.

Wanted by Claude Edgar, spoons for the purpose of spooning.

Wanted by Wilbur Burdick, a rest from publicity in the paper.

Wanted by Clarence Stanley, a lamb.

We hear the House is going to impeach the Senate for adjourning earlier than they do and taking away part of their members, but we hope the boys will reconsider the matter.

Clarence does not seem to be getting along very well with flowers. He seems to be very much interested in a Lamb at present.

Wilbur: Why is May Oscar's favorite month?

Theo.: I don't know. Why?

Wilbur: Because he likes a May bell (Maybel).

The members of the Ciceronian Literary Society were invited to attend a party that is to be given in their honor by the Emersonian Literary Society. The party is to be held on Saturday, March 28, at the opera house, and a good time is anticipated. This is the first thing of the kind in which both societies are to participate, but it goes to show that the societies are not on such enmical terms as some of our former articles would lead one to believe.

Treason of Benedict Arnold.

By FLOYD EBERMAN, of the 8th grade.

In early September, 1780, in the little village of Tarrytown, stood a neat little cottage. In this cottage might be seen a girl of the age of eighteen. She was sitting in a chair peeling apples. Her face had a sad, lonesome look. Her name was Mary Paulding.

She had just come in from the orchard where she had been gathering apples, and had commenced peeling them. Her father and two brothers, Lester and Philip, were fighting for the independence of the colonies, serving under General Lincoln. Her mother had died two years before and Mary was left to care for her little sister Molly.

She had scarcely seated herself when she heard somebody walk up to the door and knock. She went to the door and opened it. Startled, she exclaimed:

"Oh, Lester! How glad I am to see you! Are Philip and Father here? How did you happen to come?"

"Philip and Father are not here, but are well," he answered. "I am here on a furlough to see if you are getting along all right."

"Oh, I wish they had come, too." "Hello, Boyer," exclaimed little Molly, her face beaming with delight. "I fought 'oo 'ould come back long time ago."

After a pleasant week, the brother started to return to camp, but two hours later he returned, bringing with him a man whose hands were bound. Mary was frightened, and in an undertone asked her brother who the man was.

"His name is Andre, and he is a major in the British army acting as a spy. We caught him up the road about a mile. He has been acting as a messenger between a British general and Arnold. Arnold is a traitor!"

Arnold was one of the Paulding family's greatest friends, and the news of his treason was a great shock to Mary.

"It happened this way," Lester continued. "Arnold married a Tory lady at Philadelphia. While there he was reprimanded by Washington, and he felt the rebuke keenly. He was slighted by Congress and Gates, too, for they have never said a word about him, and he has won several battles by his bravery. He was given the command of West Point by Washington, and then held communication with the British general at New York. Andre was their agent. But Sidney, Horace Phelps and I caught him up the road a little way. We thought he was a spy and searched him. We found papers on him in the hand writing of Arnold. This Andre is a sly fox, and I will have to conduct him to headquarters as soon as we've had something to eat and I get Pet and Bell saddled."

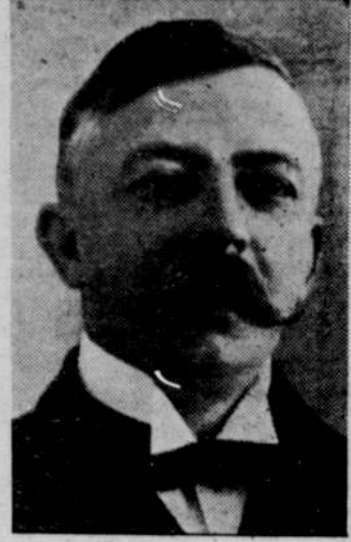

"I am awfully sorry for Arnold. Poor man! He was not liked by a few, and this is what it has led to," Mary exclaimed while going to the pantry for some eatables.

Mary got a lunch while Lester and Molly went to the barn and saddled the horses. After dinner Lester and his companions bound Andre on Bell. They started for headquarters, and without mishap, reached there for supper. About a week from the time Andre was captured he was hanged as a spy. Lester was promoted to mid-de-camp and filed his position well.

After the war Mary's brothers and father returned and lived in Tarrytown until 1785, when Mary was married to John Davis. She then moved to Kentucky, where she lived the rest of her life.

CAKE FOR U.S. SENATOR.

What the Telegram has to Say about his Candidacy.

PORTLAND, ORE., March 25, 1908.—In virtually conceding the nomination of H. M. Cake, the Telegram says, in part:

"Attracting crowds that numerically have been a great surprise to everyone, H. M. Cake is touring the state in behalf of his candidacy for the Republican nomination for United States Senator.

"Mr. Cake began his tour two weeks ago and has spoken practically every night since that time. Mr. Cake made many warm friends and a large following during his campaign two years ago, when he lost the nomination for senator by a very narrow margin. These friends and others who have rallied to his standard during the intervening period, are succeeding in creating real enthusiasm for the aspirant as he tours the state. At every town in which he has spoken he has been heartily received and his addresses have been heard by crowds greater by far than usually gather to hear a political address.

"Mr. Cake is an able speaker, forceful in delivery and wonderfully clear in expression. He assails no one, nor does he resort to crimination of any kind. He tells what he has to say in a clear logical way, a way that appeals strongly to the people.

"One feature of Mr. Cake's address that invariably appeals strongly to his hearers is his position with reference to the election of United States Senators.

Mr. Cake believes in the people and consequently believes in the election of senators by the people. He declares that if elected, he will support a federal amendment providing for the popular election of United States Senators. In this connection he recites the history of the people to achieve this end. For years and years various efforts have been made by the people to elect their own senators and he shows that there is a provision in the Constitution at this time for so doing.

"This subject, however, according to Mr. Cake, is not the overshadowing feature of the campaign. The election of United States senators by the people must prevail eventually, but the needs of Oregon and the maintenance of Republican principles, should be the topic, instead."

Yamhill Man for Senator.

C. C. Hammerly, publisher of the News Reporter, McMinnville, is a candidate for Senator for this district now represented by Dr. Wright and composed of Lincoln, Tillamook, Yamhill and (recently added) Washington counties. Mr. Hammerly was born and raised on a farm in Iowa, taught school a number of years in country high school and academy; but for the greater part of the time he has lived here in the west (over twelve years) has been an editor. He is a life long republican. If elected he will make a special effort to represent every portion of the district.

Editorial Snap Shots.

Who is the stumbling block in the way of the city council passing an ordinance to keep minors out of the pool rooms?

It is to be hoped that when work on the railroad starts up it will not be delayed, as it was last year, losing a lot of good weather.

It was said by some of the Main street merchants that "Wall Street" (meaning Second Ave. East) was turned into a Bowery on Saturday.

The matter of a road from this city to Bayocent park seems to have dropped, but it is a foregone conclusion that it will amount to very little until a road is constructed.

The business men of Portland have visited a number of towns and have gone on junketing trips to most parts of the State, but, somehow, they have failed to visit Tillamook, which is less than fifty miles directly west of Portland. They will not be able to get here in a palace car, and that may be the reason they have failed to see one of the best counties in the state for undeveloped resources.

It seems that the suggestion we made last week not to rebuild the bridge over the north fork of the Wilson river, but to build it across the main river, has met with approval by those who are familiar with the situation. This may delay the opening of the road for several months, but now that a new bridge will have to be put in it is just as well to wait patiently until the county court can make arrangements to erect a bridge and build a new road.

One of our subscribers in the south part of the county considers that the Headlight has taken a wrong position in remaining neutral in regard to the republican aspirants for nomination on that ticket, and he contends that "As a large number of the voters are not acquainted with the characters or the reputation of the individuals running for office, the newspapers should inform the voters on these matters." Now what is the right course for a newspaper to take? If the Headlight should happen to take part in the primary election and advocate this one for that office and that one for another office, the peanut politicians would immediately say that we were bossing the republican party. Although we do not see how we can consistently depart from the attitude we have taken, we must admit that some points our correspondent have raised are worthy of consideration. For instance, it is not generally known amongst the voters, but it is a fact, nevertheless, that a few well known gamblers are taking a lively interest in the primary election and that "special interest" candidates have been trotted out. And on these points the snap shot man will have some pointed remarks to make later.

BEAVER.

Wm. Thune surprised his many friends in and around Beaver, by bringing in from Sheridan a "brand new" bride. We have not been able to learn who the was, but, Billy, we wish you long life and much happiness. One by one the old bachelors are disappearing. Who next? Gilbert and sons seem to be having a good run of customers these days.

The Big Nestucca has gone down, so it can be fished at the Poland ford. It will be a good thing for these people beyond the river when the county builds a bridge at that place.

We noticed Henry Davidson on our streets this week with a load of spuds. We understand that Miss Ginn is on the sick list.

It is said that Rev. L. F. Smith will preach at Beaver next Sunday at 11 a.m. Come out and hear him.

We are wondering what has become of Ernest Hagg. Can it be that he has gone off to Sheridan or some where else on the same kind of a mission as Billy Thune?

Well, every body is busy and farmers are happy, and the milk maids are jolly, for we think spring has come.

We notice in looking around that the farmers are plowing up part of their meadows and reseeded them. Good idea that.

The slides on the road caused by the heavy rains have been removed, and travel has been renewed.

SANDLAKE.

Daniel Atkinson will start for Newberg Tuesday. We wish him a pleasant trip, but expect he will find some mud before he gets through to his destination.

Joel Atkinson and E. Hayes made a trip to Cape L. out last Sunday and spent a very enjoyable day taking pictures of the cape, shooting surf ducks and sea monsters. Any one coming along at the noon hour would have found the boys enjoying a meal on roasted mussels.

E. E. Webb and daughter Merle are visiting with friends and relatives at Cloverdale this week.

Dr. Hagey and B. Edwards started for Dundee last Tuesday, but the road being blocked by a slide on Bixby's grade they had to lay over until Friday.

The scholars of the Sandlake mute school are progressing nicely.

Mr. Owens started for the valley on horse back Sunday.

H. Miles was on the lake last Saturday registering voters.

Good for Everybody.

Mr. Norman R. Coulter, a prominent architect, in the Delbert Building, San Francisco, says: "I fully endorse all that has been said of Electric Bitters as a tonic medicine. It is good for everybody. It corrects stomach, liver and kidney disorders in a prompt and efficient manner and builds up the system." Electric Bitters is the best spring medicine ever sold over a druggist's counter, as a blood purifier it is unequalled. 50c. at Chas. I. Chough's drug store.
