A REAL MISER.

With Him the Ruling Passion Was Indeed Strong In Death.

The talk turned on misers, and a titled Italian in the party said:

"Let me tell you about Arpagnio, the famous Roman miser, and you will know what a real miser is.

"As Arpagnio lay dying in his cold, dark, bare palace of stone on the Corso his one thought was that, since he was too ill to eat, a full lira a day was being saved on the food bill.

"The doctor was announced. The doctor, after feeling Arpagnio's pulse, looked grave.

"'Well,' said the miser, 'how much longer have I to live?'

"'Only half an hour,' was the reply.

"Arpagnio's eyes flashed fire.

"'You scoundrel!' he cried. 'Why do you let things run on to the last minute like this? Do you want to ruin me? Send for the barber at once.'

"The barber arrived posthaste.

"'You charge,' said Arpagnio, '20 centisimi for shaving?'

"'Yes, signor.'

"'And for shaving a corpse 5 lire?'

"'Yes.'

"Arpagnio glanced at the clock. Seven of the thirty minutes left him still remained.

"'Then shave me quickly,' he gasped.

"As the operation finished Arpagnio died. But with his last breath, smiling happily, he murmured while the barber dried his cold, pale cheeks:

"'How splendid—4 lire and 80 centisimi saved!'"

PASSED THE VENISON.

One Member of the Council Had a Tender Conscience.

This quaint account of an old time Thanksgiving celebration in New England was found in the diary of a Connecticut minister, dated in the year 1714:

"When ye services at ye meeting house were ended, ye council and other dignitaries were entertained at the house of Mr. Epes on ye hill near by, where we had a bountiful Thanksgiving dinner, with bear's meat and venison, the last of which was a fine buck, shot in the woods near by.

"After ye blessing was craved word came that ye buck was shot on ye Lord's day by Pequot, an Indian, who came to Mr. Epes with a lye in his mouth, like Ananias of old. Ye council therefore refused to eat ye venison, but it was afterward decided that Pequot should receive forty stripes save one for lying and profaning on ye Lord's day and restore Mr. Epes ye price of ye deer, and, considering this a just and righteous sentence on ye sinful heathen and that a blessing had been craved on ye meat, ye council all partook of it but Mr. Shepard, whose conscience was tender on ye point of ye venison."

Butterfly Fakes.

The butterfly was a beautiful deep blue, as lustrous as satin; but, looking at it closely, the collector shook his head.

"Another fake," he said. "See here." And with his finger he brushed off the glistening blue dust from the insect's wings, and, lo, it was but a common brown field butterfly, after all.

"As the collecting of butterflies grows more popular," he explained, more and more butterfly fakirs turn up. These men, with various aniline dye powders, color up a ten cent insect into a good resemblance to a ten dollar one. Their work is hard to detect for the reason that when the dye rubs off and discolors your fingers you suspect nothing, since the genuine dust belonging to every butterfly's wings would do the same thing."—New York Press.

A ROTHSCHILD STORY.

The Reward That Came to a Student With a Heart.

Old Rothschild stories are popular now in Europe. "Some are true," says an English writer, "some are only clever, and many are simply inventions. But all are read with interest." Here is one from the Bystander, London:

"At a luncheon given by Empress Eugenie at the Tuileries the head of the Paris house of Rothschild was seated opposite a great painter. Rothschild was not blessed with good looks and had, moreover, an expression of distress and resignation combined. The painter could not take his eyes off him, and this worried Rothschild not a little. After the meal he asked the painter why he had taken so great an interest in him, and to his great amazement the painter informed him that he had studied him as a model for a beggar in a picture he was then evolving. Rothschild's face brightened, and he said, 'I will sit for you.' And he did. One day when he was posing a pupil of the painter's was so touched by the expression of woe on the face of the model that he slipped a five franc piece into the 'poor man's' hand and vanished before an explanation was possible. The next day the young man received £400 as interest on his well invested 5 francs."

SHOOTING WITH MORTARS.

Hitting the Target Is Simply a Matter of Mathematics.

How do we hit with the mortars? An observer near the shore who sees the target communicates the horizontal and vertical angle at which to lay the mortar and the instant of time at which to fire, and the gun does the rest. If you were standing at the center of a large clock dial laid flat on the ground and wanted to hit with a baseball a man walking around on the outside, you would notice how long it took the man to get from I to II and again from II to III. Then you would decide whether if the ball were thrown over a point halfway between IIII and V just as he arrived opposite IIII the man and the ball would reach the same spot at the same time, it being understood, of course, that he maintained uniform speed and direction and that the ball was thrown with proper force. Instruments give us the range and observations, and mechanical devices give us the range differences, increasing or decreasing by certain short intervals of time, too short for a ship of any size to escape by attempting to change direction or speed. Our observer's circle has 36,000 divisions.—Captain Howell in Scientific American

Carelessness of the Hens.

The Bridies had been in their new country house for scarcely a week before the girl who went out to hunt for strictly fresh eggs came back empty handed.

"Where are the eggs, Ellen?" asked Mrs. Bridie.

"Sure, mum, Oi couldn't foind a wan."

"Did you look in the henhouse?"

"Yis, mum."

"And in the haymow?"

"Oi wint all over the place."

"And the manger?"

"They warn't there, mum."

"Well, sometimes Henry collects the eggs in a basket and hangs it under the cow shed."

"Oi found the basket, but it wuz impty. Oi hunted all over the place and, high nor low, sorra a sign of thim eggs could Oi foind anywhere."

"Dear me," said Mrs. Bridie absently, "I hope they haven't been mislaid!"—London Scraps.

Willing to Help.

Young Mr. Sapley was making a protracted call upon the object of his affections, Miss Evans, who was a pianist of considerable ability.

She had just completed twenty-five minutes of Bach in the hope that he would get tired and go home. "Oh, Miss Evans," he exclaimed, "I could just die listening to your playing!"

"Would you like to have me play some more, Mr. Sapley?" asked Miss Evans innocently.

Making Good.

There is no way of making lasting friends like "Making Good:" and Doctor Pierce's medicines well exemplify this and their friends, after more than two decades of popularity, are numbered by the hundreds of thousands. They have "made good" and they have not made drunkards.

A good, honest, square-deal medicine of known composition is Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It still enjoys an immense sale, while most of the preparations that have come into prominence in the earlier period of its popularity have "gone by the board" and are never more heard of. There must be some reason for this long-time popularity and that is to be found in its superior merits. When once given a fair trial for weak stomach, or for liver and blood affections, its superior curative qualities are soon manifest; hence it has survived and grown in popular favor, while scores of less meritorious articles have suddenly flashed into favor for a brief period and then been as soon forgotten.

For a torpid liver with its attendant indigestion, dyspepsia, headache, perhaps dizziness, foul breath, nasty coated tongue, with bitter taste, loss of appetite, with distress after eating, nervousness and debility, nothing is so good as Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It's an honest, square-deal medicine with all its ingredients printed on bottle-wrapper—no secret, no hocus-pocus humbug, therefore don't accept a substitute that the dealer may possibly make a little bigger profit. Insist on your right to have what you call for.

Don't buy Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription expecting it to prove a "cure-all." It is only advised for woman's special ailments. It makes weak women strong and sick women well. Less advertised than some preparations sold for like purposes, its sterling curative virtues still maintain its position in the front ranks, where it stood over two decades ago. As an invigorating tonic and strengthening nervine it is unequaled. It won't satisfy those who want "booze," for there is not a drop of alcohol in it.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets, the original Little Liver Pills, although the first pill of their kind in the market, still lead, and when once tried are ever afterwards in favor. Easy to take as candy—one to three a dose. Much imitated but never equaled.
