THE BUGLE CALL.

EDITORS: CICERONIANS—ELIZA DAWSON AND ELSIE SCOVELL. EMERSONIANS—ELMER ALLEN AND CLOYD DAWSON.

Last Wednesday, school being closed, the majority of the students went to see Uncle Sam's big fleet. Some walked, some went horseback, or in rigs, or in boats—anyway, they were there. Those who walked went down the hill to the lighthouse, a muddy lot after their walk over the muddy road across Cape Meares. A party of boys, on returning home, struck through the salal brush down to a small stream, which they followed to its mouth. They were amazed to find the water at the mouth of the creek falling over a bank about twenty feet high into the ocean. So they toiled up the hill and went down the next creek which they followed to the beach. After spending two hours looking at the beautiful things on the beach, they started.

The people who went to the beach on Wednesday saw lots of genuine United States smoke, anyway. The school enjoyed a fine lecture on Tuesday by Mr. Knodell, the Secretary of the Anti-Saloon League. His subject was 'The Man With a Vision.' He pointed out the fact that most men who have become great were men with visions—visions of some kind of perfection which they wished to become or to accomplish. He urged the necessity of young people having a vision of what they wish to become in the future, that they may become men and women sound in mind, soul and body.

The seniors were busy on Tuesday, getting their invitations ready to be sent away. They have a very pretty invitation this year and they say that the beauty of it is that they got them themselves.

A farewell party will be given at the Opera House by the students, so that all of them can get together for one more good time before separating for the year. In many ways this has been an enjoyable year, and we regret to see its end.

The state eighth grade examination in grammar this year proved a stumbling block for nearly half the applicants in the county. Until next examination, two weeks from now, we suppose there will be some mighty digging in that subject. One question this time is not found till up in the tenth grade rhetoric work, so we would advise ambitious eighth graders to look ahead about four years in getting ready next time.

The baccalaureate sermon last Sunday was perhaps the best ever heard in Tillamook. It was preached by Rev. D. H. Hare in the Methodist church which was completely filled. It was a strong, scholarly address, and will no doubt be remembered by the people of the graduating class long after many other features of their commencement are forgotten. The church had been beautifully decorated by our energetic juniors. The music was by the Methodist choir, assisted by Mr. Wiley and Mr. Finley.

There was a very interesting debate last Thursday as to whether the fleet could be seen to the best advantage from Garibaldi or from the lighthouse. It was surprising what wonderful eyesight some of the people concerned in the argument had. Finally, after much argument the matter was decided satisfactorily—everybody who had been at Garibaldi decided that they had the best view and all who had been at the lighthouse decided that was the only good place to see it.

Mr. Burdick, the well known inventor, and Mr. Finney his junior partner, are perfecting a theory of the graphophone, which they think will be of great service to the public (Mr. Edison's theory being too hard to understand). They say that the phonograph works upon the same principle as the human brain. As a man becomes wise the creases on his brain become deeper and more plentiful, till all he has to do is to scratch his head and the thoughts come tumbling out. On the same principle, say these inventive geniuses, the graphophone needle is placed upon the proper crease, and the right tone is received, after the proper amount of scratching has been done.

Many preparations are being made to give the seniors a good commencement. Perhaps a more popular class has never finished this school, and everybody feels that nothing is too good for them. One of the most pleasant features will be a reception given the class and teachers by the juniors.

The Hero. (By Viola Mapes, 1911). There was once a girl who from her early youth had been loved by every one who knew her. Her name was Ruth Miller. Tall and stately was she, and very jolly, pretty and good natured, which three virtues made her so popular. She had fine blue eyes and brown hair, and always as bright as a fresh rose.

At the time when this story opens, she was at the beach, and as usual was the centre of attraction. She, however, preferred her old playmates as companions, because they could talk of the good old times they had when they were school children together. Today she and four of her young men friends were at the beach, sitting on the sand, talking.

'Jack, do you remember the day you thrashed Joe Lember for saying that I thought I was smart?' asked Ruth. Jack blushed and said that he remembered something of the kind, but the other three boys had not been in the school at that memorable time and begged to hear the story. So Ruth told the story as follows:

'Well, one day when we were in the second grade, we were surprised to see a new boy take his place in one of the little seats. He was a very neat, well dressed little fellow (there Jack blushed redder than ever) and as the boys in our room had very little respect for good clothes, they immediately dubbed him 'girl baby.'

'At recess they threw snow balls at him, but he did not cry or even get angry. I, for some unknown reason had taken a fancy to him. (There was a laugh, and it was Ruth's turn to blush, and I sympathized with him. So we went about the school grounds together and did not pay any attention to what the others said.)

'But the next day a boy named Joe Lember yelled out, 'Oh, Ruth thinks she is smart.' This Jack would not stand and said:

'Do you want to fight?' 'Then they snatched off their little coats and in a second were fighting hard. Joe was tumbled to the ground in disgrace, and the new boy immediately became a hero. Thus he who yesterday was friendless, today had friends to spare.'

She ended her story, and as it was getting late, they all started for their tents, Jack and Ruth lingering along together—for Jack was still the hero.

The Most Common Cause of Suffering. Rheumatism causes more pain and suffering than any other disease, for the reason that it is the most common of all ills, and it is certainly gratifying to sufferers to know that Chamberlain's Pain Balm will afford relief, and make rest and sleep possible. In many cases the relief from pain, which is at first temporary, has become permanent, while in old people subject to chronic rheumatism, often brought on by dampness or changes in the weather, a permanent cure cannot be expected; the relief from pain which this liniment affords is alone worth many times its cost. 25 and 50 cent sizes for sale at all druggists.

Valued Same as Gold. B. G. Stewart, a merchant of Cedar View, Miss., says: 'I tell my customers when they buy a box of Dr. King's New Life Pills they get the worth of that much gold in weight, if afflicted with constipation, malaria or biliousness.' Sold under guarantee at Chas. I. Clough, drug store.
