Campaign Funds Publicity.

It is hard on Mr. Bryan that when he expected to make the publicity of campaign funds one of his issues, he suddenly finds himself on the defensive in the matter. The Democrats in the House voted against the campaign publicity bill that was passed by the Republican majority in that branch of Congress, and now Mr. Bryan's friends in Nebraska are in a panic over the disclosure that a large sum of money, said to be $20,000, was sent to that state in 1904 by the Parker Committee. It was represented that Bryan would canvass the state for the Senate, and that all the Democrats and Populists would be whopped out of the brush, giving Parker a good chance to carry the state. Nebraska's majority against Parker was 81,000; a slump of more than 60,000 compared with Bryan's recorded strength in the state. Chairman Sheehan of the Parker Committee, says the money was sent and it is admitted by Nebraska's national committeeman of 1904, Mr. Dahlman of Omaha.

Mr. Bryan knew in 1904 that, under the Parker candidacy, he could not carry the Legislature and that the Republican majority would be immense. What became of the $20,000? Let the publicity searchlight be turned upon the itemized distribution of this liberal sum of Eastern campaign cash in a forlorn hope spot. Mr. Bryan says he will return the money if it was tainted in any respect by facts with which he was not familiar at the time. Some of his Nebraska associates certainly worked the custodians of Parker campaign funds with a promise of goods that could not be delivered and Mr. Bryan's candidacy for the Senate was the chief inducement held out. Silver mining interests in 1896 are said to have raised a Bryan campaign fund of $288,000, a sum that would have been only a drop in the bucket, compared with their profits if free coinage had prevailed. The Bryan campaign publicity issue is another boomerang.—Globe Democrat.

Talking Over Troubles.

When we have a grievance it is so tempting to go and talk it over with friends or relative.

Tempting, yes; wise, no.

For, as a rule, we are so keen in the irritation of the moment of sympathy that the temptation to "paint with a big brush" is almost irresistible.

And, later—well—later probably we find that there were extenuating circumstances; the culprit was not so black as we had fancied, and in our penitence we would give a great deal to be able to recall the unjust things that we said. For, rest assured, we will always be reminded of them by the person in whom we confided.

If we "talk over" our friends' faults and failings with other people we forfeit the right to find fault with them direct. And to be on such a footing with the people near to you that you can find friendly fault with them, and they with you, is good for every one concerned.

There are times when you must speak, when you ought to speak, when it will clear the air and put things on a better footing if you do speak.

We can't go far wrong if, when we find fault, we remember that if the tables were turned hard things might quite truly be said about ourselves. We are all living in houses of glass—but we should never make any progress if we waited to be perfect before finding fault with other people who are not perfect, either.

When we have learned to give and to take criticism with entire good humor, "with malice toward none and charity toward all," we shall be several steps on the way toward being comfortable people to live with.

For bottled-up grievances make it exceedingly difficult to live in love and charity with our neighbors. They are irritated with us—we don't know why—and they don't know why we are cool to them. Obviously, it would be much better if they could speak out, too.

What happens generally is that in some moment of irritation they speak very plainly. And we retaliate in "roufer another" sort of way, trotted out a grievance of our own to show that certainly they have no reason to find fault.

Gold production in the Transvaal has lately reached over $12,000,000 a month. Mr. Bryan is careful not to refer to what he didn't know about gold twelve years ago.

Giggling Girls.

If half the girls knew how silly they looked and sounded when they constantly giggle, they would stop it. Learn to smile; not giggle.

Nothing is more infectious and charming than a good laugh; but very few people know how to laugh. It is as rare in life as it is on the stage.

A giggle usually comes from nervousness. A girl will giggle when she can not think of any thing to say or when she is trying to be at ease in company.

She will giggle when a boy meets her and says "Good morning." She is only nervous, but she appears silly.

It is no wonder that young men speak with utter scorn of the giggling girl. They seem to think her the least attractive maiden on earth; it is trying to attempt to hold any kind of conversation with a girl who will punctuate her every remark with giggles.

It is not always possible to know, at first thought, whether or not you are one of the girls who giggle. Stop and think about it—Watch yourself the next time you are with any one. See whether this senseless trick is a part of your social equipment. If it is, take any heroic means to strangle that giggle until it is dead.

Far better be silent; you may then get the credit for wisdom that you have not got. Better than all, if you don't know how to give a cheery, musical, spontaneous laugh, then try your best to learn now to smile.

Do not let yourself give a weary smile, for that is the result of effort and self-consciousness; but anything is better than a silly giggle.

The Husband Eats What He Can Get.

A woman, discussing how to feed a husband, said she soon cured her husband of fussiness and faddiness about his food. She said that he had to take what he could get.

Now, why should he? His work and money buy every scrap of food which enters the home. It is the husband's right that he should have the food he likes best, properly cooked and served on the table he bought, in the house whose rent he pays, by the wife to whom he gives a housekeeping allowance as a trust fund.

He strives his very best to support his family in comfort and some degree of luxury. His wife should strive her very best to lay out the money he entrusts her with so as to secure health, happiness and content in the home.

It is a very clear bargain between husband and wife. If a man is "grumpy" at meals there's usually something the matter with the meals. The sourest tempered male begins to smile when the savory scent of an appetizing dish rises like incense before the altar of his appetite.

Kisses and sentiment do not compensate a man for poor cooking and monotonous catering.

One of the latest Socialist platforms demands the abolition of the Supreme Court, the Senate, and the president's veto power. Mr. Debs and Mr. Hearst will put in bids for these advanced thinkers as soon as the campaign warms up.

Perry says that after reaching the north pole he will be willing to advance on the south pole. What will explorers do after everything is discovered? Perhaps flying machines give a hint.

Georgia had a war governor named Joe Brown, and now his son, another and obscure Joe Brown, unexpectedly appeared in the arena and has been elected governor. There is much in a name politically.

The Temperance Committee of the Presbyterian General Assembly at Kansas City, estimated that 8,600,000 people had banished the saloon in the year past and that now 35 per cent of the population of the nation are free from the blighting effects of the saloon.

Mr. Debs was introduced at a New York meeting as "a sun-crowned man and one of the race of prophets." The Bryan party need not think to get away with all the tall metaphors.

A Grand Family Medicine.

"It gives me pleasure to speak a good word for Electric Bitters," writes Mr. Frank Conlan of No. 436 Houston St., New York. "It's a grand family medicine for dyspepsia and liver complications; while for lame back and weak kidneys it cannot be too highly recommended." Electric Bitters regulate the digestive functions, purify the blood, and impart renewed vigor and vitality to the weak and debilitated of both sexes. Sold under guarantee at Chas. I. Clough's drug store, 50c.

Born in Iowa.

Our family were all born and raised in Iowa, and have used Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy (made at Des Moines) for years. We know how good it is from long experience in the use of it. In fact, when in El Paso, Texas, the writer's life was saved by the prompt use of this remedy. We are now engaged in the mercantile business at Narcoossee, Fla., and have introduced the remedy here. It has proven very successful and is constantly growing in favor.—ENNIS BROS. This remedy is for sale by all druggists.

When Money Works Harm.

It is the desire for money that lures men and women on and on, and often to their undoing. You have seen young men brought to ruin and shame by following this lure.

The getting of money for laudable purposes is worthy and commendable, but getting it merely for the sake of possessing it, or for the purpose of gratifying whims and passing desires is one of the worst habits one can fall into, writes Erasmus Wilson, in the Pittsburg Gazette-Times.

What do boys and girls know about the value of money who have never known want?

Fond, but foolish, parents often think it is the proper thing, besides being a great privilege, to be able to bring their children up in the lap of luxury, and without having to experience lack of pleasure.

Such children rarely get any real pleasure out of life, are ever restless and live aimlessly and to no good purpose.

Girls thus reared think of little else than posing and being shown a good time, which is nothing more than some novel way of killing time. Life becomes a weariness and often a bore.

Boys thus raised take to sports in their younger days, and become old sports ere middle life is reached. This latter end is miserable.

The papers are full of stuff concerning the bad doings of men and women who have more dollars than sense.

Bad management always leads to trouble, if not to wreck and ruin. Bad management of matrimonial affairs is no exception to the rule, or, rather, to the law.

Bad condition in homes, or in society, are no less certain to come to the surface, and no amount of whitewashing, glossing, or veneering, can hide them. Money will render them endurable about as long as anything, but it will not suppress them.

The curse of riches is becoming so apparent that parents, unless they are rank fools, will endeavor to keep it away from their homes.

No doubt you may have known fond and foolish parents who once were proud of their bright sons and daughters, but now are ashamed, heart-broken, and in the depths of despair because of the blighting curse they put upon their children.

It is a foolish desire for money that makes anarchists of men who would otherwise be good citizens. The sight of rich do-nothing men and women cause young men and women to desire money so that they may become do-nothings. Young women sell themselves to worthless men who have money, while young men of manly parts sell themselves as slaves to women who sooner or later come to love them less than they do their puddles.

Isn't it about time that teachers and preachers should take up this matter and present the folly and the sin of it so that coming generations may avoid the misery of it all?

The present social conditions of the Anglo-Saxon element in this country are not as promising and hopeful as could be desired.

The size of the native American family is now two, when before the war it was five.

What means these figures?

The Goths and vandals of Europe have been invading this country for years, and with average families of six how long will it be until they have conquered us as completely as they conquered great Rome?

The gods first make rich the people whom they would destroy.—Detroit Free Press.

Taking advantage of the fact that Senator Gore could not see that Senator Stone was present to go on with the filibuster against the compromise currency bill before the Senate, Senator Aldrich moved the final vote and the bill passed the Senate, 43 to 22, five Republicans voting with seventeen Democrats against it and no Democrats for it. This made the adjournment of Congress possible May 30, and President Roosevelt promptly signed the bill. The total of the appropriations for the session was found to be exactly $1,008,804,894.

A revolution in the construction of automobiles is foreshadowed by the purchase of a French invention for the Panhard cars, by means of which the change of speed is effected direct from the fly-wheel, and the necessity for the gear box is absolutely removed. The details of the device are carefully guarded. Besides simplifying the operation, it is expected to reduce the cost of manufacture.

Thinks it Saved His Life.

Lester M. Nelson, of Naples, Maine, says in a recent letter: "I have used Dr. King's New Discovery many years, for coughs and colds, and I think it saved my life. I have found it a reliable remedy for throat and lung complaints, and would not be without a bottle than I would be without food." For nearly forty years New Discovery has stood at the head of throat and lung remedies. As a preventive of pneumonia, and a destroyer of weak lungs it has no equal. Sold under guarantee at Chas. I. Clough's drug store, 50c and $1.00. Trial bottle free.
