[illegible] ON THE ROAD

[illegible] a Collision Means to the Man at the Throttle.

[illegible] OF THE ENGINEER.

[illegible] Chances He Has to Take and His Fate Should He Become Crippled In a Smashup—There Are Some Things Worse Than Physical Pain.

"I just dropped in to tell you that a coroner's jury has exonerated you [illegible] all blame for the wreck. They [illegible] going to hold the block tower [illegible]."

The old engineer turned his pain [illegible] face toward me. A white capped nurse gently brushed back the [illegible] hairs from his forehead.

"Thank you, miss," he said, "and you, [illegible] sir, for the good news. I knew [illegible] wouldn't blame it on me, because [illegible] white at Mentor. Poor Denny, [illegible] tell you so, too, if he was alive. [illegible] white!' he shouted when we came [illegible] the curve, and I gave him the [illegible], 'All white!' and pulled her [illegible] open. Then we struck the empties on the siding, and—well, you know [illegible]." He wiped a trembling hand [illegible] his eyes as if trying to blot out [illegible] horrible vision.

[illegible] eyes began to sparkle, and a bit [illegible] color flashed into his pale cheeks. "[illegible] suppose you fellows think I opened [illegible] up and went into those boxes just [illegible] fun." A smile flitted over his lips. [illegible] then he grew serious. "Say, did it [illegible] come to your mind that an engineer might be as anxious about his [illegible] life as he is about the lives of [illegible] who are riding behind him? My [illegible] and little one—don't you suppose [illegible] life counts for something with [illegible]?

"Did you ever stop to think what a [illegible] like that at Mentor means to [illegible] engineer? Just try to figure yourself in his place. He rides in four [illegible] feet of cab room, surrounded [illegible] mass of levers, rods and the like. [illegible] of him is about three miles of [illegible] pipe, carrying 200 pounds of [illegible] pressure and enough hot water [illegible] cook the meat off his bones in a [illegible]. Clattering at his back is 6,000 [illegible] of water and 20,000 pounds of [illegible]. Under him is 200,000 pounds [illegible], and behind there is [illegible] pounds of train. Altogether he [illegible] running along ahead of 800,000 [illegible] of steel, hardwood and brass [illegible] an eighty pound rail by three-[illegible] of an inch of wheel flange.

"[illegible], when one of those big Russian battleships fired a broadside at [illegible] Japanese the whole thing [illegible] only 24,000 pounds, so the [illegible]. And that 24,000 pounds [illegible] eight miles a minute would [illegible] a Japanese ship eight miles [illegible] with an impact only one-tenth [illegible] the force we hit the empties at [illegible].

"Of course I was the engineer and [illegible] depended on me. There is always a lot of fine talk about engineers [illegible] the lives of several hundred [illegible] in their hands. That's all [illegible] true, but you don't want to overlook the fact that the engineer's life [illegible] there along with the others. [illegible] all take chances, the train crew [illegible] the passengers, only our [illegible] slimmer. I had one [illegible] of being killed, or one in [illegible] of getting right where I [illegible] a passenger on the train [illegible] chance in about 3,000,000 of [illegible] and one in 130,000 of [illegible].

"I see that a lot of people were killed [illegible] more hurt. I don't [illegible] to be a grumbler, but it appears [illegible] you fellows have kinder [illegible] the fact that both of my [illegible] gone. Of course that might [illegible] much to you, but if you [illegible] that for the rest of [illegible] is going to be my job to [illegible] out into the middle of some [illegible] wave a white flag as [illegible]—if you could realize [illegible] means to an engineer—[illegible] toot of the whistle [illegible] up to the crossing and [illegible] sympathetic salute of the [illegible] as they go flying [illegible], my boy, there are some [illegible] than physical pain."

[illegible] filled with tears. The nurse [illegible] wiped them away and softly [illegible] back the hair.

"[illegible] wouldn't talk any more now," she [illegible].

"All right, miss," he replied, putting [illegible] his hand to me. "I always obey [illegible]."—H. S. Winslow in New York [illegible].

A Free Translation.

"And you say the idiot of a teacher [illegible] you that you had an extravagant [illegible] of a father?"

"That's what he meant."

"But what did he say?"

"He said it was criminal folly to waste money on the education of such a chump as I am."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Nothing Left.

"[illegible]," asked the judge of a [illegible] convicted man, "anything to say to the court before sentence is passed?"

"No, your honor," replied the prisoner. "My lawyer took my last farthing."—London Tit-Bits.

The Last Word.

Conductor—This here transfer expired [illegible] hour ago, lady. The Lady (digging [illegible] her purse angrily)—No wonder [illegible] not a single ventilator open in the [illegible] car!—Puck.

[illegible] you would relish your food, labor [illegible].—Danish Proverb.

YOUR OWN FACE.

Do You Think You Would Recognize It on Another Person?

"How strange it is," said the philosopher, "that the person for whom you care most on earth, the one you see oftenest and who receives your most constant attention is the one whose countenance is least familiar to you."

"Who is that?" asked the visitor.

"Yourself," said the philosopher. "It is a fact that if people could be duplicated and could meet themselves in the street very few would recognize themselves. We look at ourselves many times during the 365 days of the year. We say our eyes are blue or whatever color they may be, our hair brown, our chin peaked, our forehead high. We know every lineament of our face from constant study and attention, yet when we turn away from the mirror we cannot conjure up a picture of ourselves. We know just how our friends and even acquaintances look. In fancy we can see them sitting so or standing so and their varying expression under different circumstances is clear to us, even though we have not seen them for years. But when it comes to ourselves we cannot even fill in the outline of the picture. We may laugh, we may cry, we may frown, but we do not know how we look while we are doing it. Photographs do not help us. We have never seen ourselves in the flesh. Mirrors and pictures are poor aids when we sit down and try to see ourselves with the mind's eye. That is why people are so deeply interested in anybody who is said to resemble them. Just say to a man, 'I know somebody who looks for all the world like you,' and he will never rest until he sees that person. Then if the likeness is really true he will own that up to that time he had no conception of how he really looked."

The visitor smiled wanly. "I wish you wouldn't talk like that," she said "It makes me feel so uncanny. I am almost afraid of myself."

WHEN FIRE BREAKS OUT.

Keep Cool and Remember and Follow These Instructions.

In case of fire, if the burning articles are at once splashed and sprayed with a solution of salt and nitrate of ammonia an incombustible coating is formed. This is a preparation which can be made at home at a trifling cost and should be kept on hand. Dissolve twenty pounds of common salt and ten pounds of nitrate of ammonia in seven gallons of water. Pour this into quart bottles of thin glass and fire grenades are at hand ready for use. These bottles must be tightly corked and sealed to prevent evaporation, and in case of fire they must be thrown near the flames, so as to break and liberate the gas contained. At least two dozen of these bottles should be ready for an emergency.

In this connection it is well to remember that water on burning oil scatters the flames, but that flour will extinguish it. Salt thrown upon a fire if the chimney is burning will help to deaden the blaze. If a fire once gets under headway and prompt exit becomes a necessity, a silk handkerchief dipped in water and wrapped about the mouth and nostrils will prevent suffocation from smoke; failing this, a piece of wet flannel will answer.

Should smoke fill the room, recall your physics—remember that smoke goes first to the top of the room and last to the floor. Wrap a blanket or woolen garment about you, with the wet cloth over your face, drop on your hands and knees and crawl to the window. Bear in mind that there is no more danger in getting down from a three story window than from the first floor if you keep a firm hold of the rope or ladder. Do not slide, but go hand over hand.—New York Tribune.

Strictly Fresh Eggs.

There are summer resorts, remote from any agricultural communities, where fresh farm products are even harder to obtain than in the city. It was at such a place that the new boarder, who had eaten four or five breakfasts there, began to wonder why the eggs were invariably served fried.

"See here," he inquired one morning of the genial colored man who waited upon him, "why do you always fry eggs here? Don't you ever boil them?"

"Oh, oh, yes, sah!" responded the waiter pleasantly. "Of co'se yo' kin have 'em boiled if yo' wants 'em, but yo' know, sah, yo' takes de risk!"—New York Times.

The Plumber's Derby.

The compassionate citizen remarked to his plumber: "Gus, if I were a plumber and had to crawl into small nooks and corners, as you do, I'd wear a soft hat or cap. Why, your derby is full of dents." Gus replied: "I'd be a fool to wear a soft hat. This derby hat saved my head many a hard knock from pipes and beams. See, I have it packed with crumpled newspapers, which give me both inspiration and immunity."—New York Press.

A Haughty Reply.

A story about William Pitt I read or heard somewhere many years ago represented a noble mediocrity as assuring the great statesman with some condescension that he might fairly expect an earldom for his magnificent services.

"I an earl!" was the haughty reply. "I make dukes."—St. James' Gazette.

Exceptional.

"Is he really a good violinist?"

"Yes, and an exceedingly remarkable one."

"In what respect?"

"His instrument is not 'a genuine Stradivarius.'"—Philadelphia Press.

SACKING THE TUILERIES.

An Incident of the Revolution of 1848 In France.

The sight that presented itself was the strangest I have ever seen and has remained in my memory almost as vividly as if it were yesterday. The magnificent apartments of the palace were soon filled with as strange a set of ruffians as you could meet anywhere. It seemed as if they were all mad or drunk, and yet they were as jolly as sand boys. They seemed positively to revel in destruction and to yell with delight as they smashed and tore everything to pieces that they came across. There was scarcely a picture that was not cut into ribbons, and ornaments, however costly, were thrown down and broken to atoms.

While I was standing in one of the grand apartments, looking on in wonder, a little man, with a sword almost as big as himself, stood in front of a magnificent mirror that reached from the floor to the ceiling. He surveyed it for a moment, and then, as though he were about to storm a town single handed, went deliberately up to it and with one blow of his great cavalry blade shivered it to pieces. As they fell at his feet he put on a grand air and said "La!" as if this was one of the greatest deeds he had ever accomplished and the proudest moment of his life.—"Sketches From Memory," G. A. Storey.

GREEN THE BEST COLOR.

Saves the Eyes and the Temper, Says a London Doctor.

"If the whole of London were painted green it would have a wonderful effect upon the health and spirits of us Londoners," said one of London's leading specialists. "Eyesight and health are most closely connected, and among town dwellers eyesight is steadily deteriorating. Green is one of nature's cures for worry and fatigue. Watch a man who is worried or tired out and see how often he will wander to a window from which he can gaze on a tree in leaf. Instinctively his eyes seek the restful green of the foliage. A great deal of the good obtained from a visit to the country is from the incessant environment of the green fields and green leaves.

"A green room, too, is a splendid thing. I know of a case of a popular actress who could never understand why it was that in a certain room in her house she could always rest so much better than in any other one. She mentioned the fact to me one day, and I pointed out to her that the paper and furniture were entirely green."—London Mirror.

Sounds Fish Make.

The horse mackerel, or scad, is said to grunt. Purring noises are heard from the cuckoo gurnard when it is being removed from the water. The herring, again, is said to emit a faint squeak when the net has been drawn over it, and there are other fishes which are credited with vocal powers.

Most certain of all is the case of the little creature known to many a shrimper and fisher boy as the hummer, or hard head (Cottus scorpius), the sea bullhead, which when held in the hand near to the ear produces so distinct a buzzing noise that it cannot only be heard, but felt, since the vibration caused by the sound is perceptible by the hand. It seems to be the result of fear and comes apparently from the inside of the huge head.—London News.

A Woman's Reason.

"Of all the foolish reasons girls give for wishing to marry, or rather not to remain single," said Miss Afternoon Tea, "I think 'because she wants Mrs. on her tombstone' is the most inane. Why should she want it there where she cannot see it? I would rather have Mrs. on my visiting cards than on my tombstone, wouldn't you, Clarice?"

"Yes, dear, and that reminds me. I asked Jane Smiley yesterday why she was marrying so much sooner than she intended when I last saw her. She said, 'Oh, my visiting cards are almost gone, and I do not care to order another hundred of these, so I am hurrying up getting my new name to have engraved on them."—St. Louis Times.

A Martyr.

The politician had been charged with perjury.

"What's that?" he asked languidly.

"Swearing to a falsehood."

"Why, any chump could swear to the truth," exclaimed the politician. "I'm the victim of professional jealousy, that's what," he added, with manifest indignation.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Consolation.

"Pa," boohooed the chastised son, "if I had let Willie Simmonds lick me instead of me licking him, would you've whipped me just the same?"

"Yes; but remember that in such a case you would be getting two lickings in place of one!"—Judge.

The Height of Hospitality.

Hewitt—I suppose that when your uncle comes to New York you will see that he is properly entertained? Jewett—Yes; he shall have everything that his money will buy.—Puck.

A Distinction of Terms.

"Did you say he was a crafty politician?"

"No," answered Senator Sorghum, "not crafty, merely grafty."—Washington Star.

Some men earn money. Others make money. Others get money.—Galveston News.

Marie de' Medici.

The tastes of Marie de' Medici, wife of Henry IV. of France, were splendid, and she indulged them to the full. One of her collars of venetian point was alone "worth the eyes out of a man's head," and she had a fine store of them. Describing her as she arrayed herself on a typical occasion in a costume of carnation satin, M. Batiffol, in "The French Court In the Seventeenth Century," continues as follows:

"This arranged to her satisfaction, her jewels, of which she has quantities scattered in different cabinets, must not be forgotten nor yet her ring. Her gold bracelets, studded with seventy-two small diamonds, were purchased from Francois le Prestre, jeweler of Paris, for 1,050 livres. Her earrings, two great diamonds surrounded by lesser brilliants, were made by the jeweler, Jean Subtil. Her gold watch, valued at 2,100 livres, is 'oval in shape and ornamented with several diamonds,' and she must not forget to place in her pocket for use at mass the 'rosary of enameled gold, embellished with diamonds,' a trifle worth 9,600 livres. And, thus adorned, the queen must yet perfume herself."

Clearing It Up.

"To which is a man more closely related," said the genealogist, "his first divorced wife's second husband or his present wife's first divorced husband?"

"So far as I can see, one tie is about as close as the other," said a thoughtful friend.

"So I should say," said the genealogist, "but Billy Bowen must have figured out a difference. Anyhow, when his first wife's second husband died Billy went to a ball game, but when his present wife's first husband died he went into mourning. I can't understand that."

"I can," said the thoughtful friend. "Billy's present wife was on the point of divorcing him so she could remarry her first husband. Now that he is dead she has decided to stick to Billy."

"Ah!" said the genealogist.—New York Press.

Always Waning.

A Frenchman who apparently has a good deal of time on his hands has been amusing himself by reckoning up the number of kisses he has given his wife during the first twenty years of his married life.

He finds that in the first year he dispensed about 100 kisses a day, or, say, allowing for birthdays and legal and church holidays, about 36,700 in the year.

In the second year this number was reduced by half and in the third year to ten a day, while in the fifth year his better half had to be content with two a day, one in the morning and one in the evening.

What happened in the fifth year is "wrapped in mystery," but at the same rate of "progression" he probably arrived eventually at one kiss on the first of January every leap year.

Freedom of the Press.

The battle for a free press in the full modern sense was fought out between 1764 and 1771, beginning with the prosecution of Wilkes for attacking Bute in the North Briton and ending with the successful resistance to the proclamation by which the commons had forbidden the publication of their debates. Six printers who had infringed the proclamation were summoned to the bar of the house. Five obeyed, and the messenger of the house was sent to arrest the sixth. The lord mayor sent the messenger to prison. The house of commons sent the lord mayor to the Tower, but he was released at the next prorogation, and the day on which he left the Tower marked the end of the last attempt to silence the press.—New York American.

The Real Version.

Napoleon sat inadvertently upon a smoking cannon and scorched the seat of his white trousers.

"I cannot turn back now," he muttered to an aid as he hastily dismounted. "I have burned my britches behind me!"

This historic expression has been grossly corrupted by later writers.—Pathfinder.

The Supreme Test.

"You are all right," said the doctor after he had gone through with the regulation thumping and listening with his patient. "Not a trace of heart disease. Fifteen dollars, please!"

The patient drew a long breath and remarked: "I am sure now I have no heart disease. If I had, I should have dropped dead when you mentioned your fee."

Fun Missed In Air Traveling.

It may be a great achievement for a balloon to travel at the rate of seventy-five miles per hour, but what is the fun in skipping along at that rate when you cannot see the telegraph poles or constables whiz past? The pleasure in speed is in passing things that stand still or go slower.—Boston Advertiser.

Cured the Dryness.

Mother—How did papa's new book get in this condition? Bobby—Why, mamma, I heard papa say last night that the book was too dry for him. So I put it in the bathtub and let the water run.

Slow, but Not Sure.

"Your daughter is not engaged to young Johnson yet, then? I suppose it is a case of slow and sure?"

"Well, yes—he is slow, and she is not at all sure!"

I have often wondered how every man loves himself more than all the rest of men.—Antonius.
