

Editorial Snap Shots.

That was a strenuous and right kind of a grand jury.

My! How the you fellows are getting spiced up and swelling the baby buggy brigade.

It is reported that several parties are missing from the city this week. Were they scared away by the grand jury or guilty consciences?

It was crooked business spiriting away the State's witness in the Wolfe case and we want to tell the taxpayers that they have to pay for that kind of crooked business in taxation.

Some of the attorneys from the outside counties thought it was a most serious thing for Deputy District Attorney W. H. Cooper to accuse Attorney Nolan of spiriting away the State's witness in the Wolfe case.

No doubt, had the sheriff failed to locate and bring back Eva Wolfe the defence would have howled for a speedy trial. But what a contrast. They did everything they could on Wednesday to get the trial put off.

The Irishman who gave his reason for voting for Bryan that it insured four years of prosperity was certainly right about prosperity. Bryan was defeated for the third time last week and the third wave of prosperity began to set in the day after Bryan and the democratic party went down in defeat.

Joseph L. Murphy has gained some experience in coming to Tillamook. The special interests made him the big mogul of their mouth piece, to father their editorials. Finding they had no more use for him, all the props to the editorial chair suddenly gave way and Murphy fell, well off of it as quickly as he would have come down a greased pole. It was the same with the Murphy Grayson case on Monday, all the props to his case were knocked from under him by the defence. Moral: Bro. Murphy, get some "substantial" props to stand upon before you undertake to do anything.

Jim Hill knocked the pins from under the Tillamookers who for years have predicted that the first railroad to give this county connections would be by way of Seaside and Astoria. That idea may have looked logical to most of us and would still be the same to the railroad people if Tillamook county was debateably territory. It does not appear to be any longer, and the general supposition is that there is a "gentleman's" agreement between Hill and Harriman. There is a marked difference in the attitude of the railroads two years ago and now. Then they were scrapping for rights of way. Now the Astoria road is allowing the suits to go by default, for no one appeared in court on Monday for the Hill road.

Senator Fulton is by far the strongest and most able member of the Oregon delegation in Washington, consequently he is the best man for the Legislature to keep there from this state. Now that the republicans who flipped to Statement No. 1 see their error and begin to realize that that portion of the primary election law is unconstitutional, they can offer no good reason, in face of the overwhelming republican sentiment in this State as was expressed at the polls last week, why a democrat from Oregon should be sent to the United States senate, who would naturally oppose and attempt to pull down the administration. Senator Fulton being a tried and faithful friend of the people, we hope the next State legislature will re-elect him.

We are not going to criticize the Port of Tillamook for what it has neglected to do and doing nothing to improve the harbor conditions to and in Tillamook City. It was organized about eight years ago, so we are in a position to pass judgment upon it and write its epitaph. Here it is: "In sacred memory to the do-nothing Port of Tillamook Commission." As the people are intent upon making a change—and it was certainly needed—we hope that we will be able to say of the new organization before very long that it is a "Do something commission." It is not our intention to butt in and say who ought and who ought not to be on that commission, for that is a matter which is left to the voters of the four precincts. There appears to be a specific object already outlined, that of straightening and widening Hoquarton slough. If the new commission will take that in hand and carry it through to completion it will do a great thing for this section of the county.

At last the Robinson Cheese Company suits are erased from the circuit court docket. This will make a good many of the dairymen smile, for they foresaw that that combination would end up in the way that it did, viz., Mr. Robinson having to sue for his part of the contract. Alas, the Golden Cheddar combination has given up the ghost with a bad record, which followed the footprints of the Creamery Stock Combine, and which took the dairymen several years before they could throw the yoke off. They did so, and now by way of a change the olive branch is again thrown down for the benefit of the dairymen, for, don't you know, that the statement is made that they are losing—now don't laugh—$50,000 because the speculators and the middlemen can't get some blood money out of the dairy product of Tillamook county. The next scheme is now in order to induce the dear dairymen to hit, but the devil of it is they won't bite and appears to have become too wise to bite again.

SANDLAKE.

Will Galloway returned to Sandlake Saturday from Beaverton, his father accompanying him.

Ira Dimond and wife went to Tillamook Thursday after a load of provisions.

Arthur Kays left for home Monday. He is getting to be quite a railroad man, his only thoughts seem to be of Cars.

Will Galloway captured a deer Sunday and went to see about buying some potatoes Monday.

George Galloway started for Beaverton Friday after a load of furniture. Clyde Webb and Eugene Atkinson and son called on E. R. Hayes and wife Sunday evening, and the evening was spent listening to phonograph music.

GLENORA.

Mrs. J. F. Reher just returned from a weeks visit in Portland.

Mr. Chas. Atkinson's new home is nearing completion. Miss Christel Pratt, of Boston, has been hired to teach the school here. The directors are greatly pleased to be able to secure a lady of Miss Pratt's standing and attainments, she having taught for three years in the Massachusetts schools.

A large cougar has devoured over a dozen goats belonging to Paul Hahl. Chas. Atkins took his hounds yesterday and killed the beast, which measured over seven feet from tip to tip.

Mr. Rutherford has been stopping at the White House for several days. Trout and salmon fishing is very good indeed.

McNamee's camp has just closed for the winter.

BOULDER CREEK.

No school this week after Monday, as our teacher is going to town.

C. A. Smith visited at the Chopard home last Friday. He is suffering very much with a number of boils or carbuncles.

H. A. Chopard is improving the shifting hours, making shingles.

We were misinformed as to Mrs. Dunstan boarding with Mrs. Bays. She is boarding at Mrs. Blalock's. We help all concerned will kindly overlook the mistake.

As far as we have heard, election day passed off very quietly here, without any trouble.

W. N. Bays went to Tillamook Wednesday and returned Friday.

Several of our citizens, married men at that, will go "courting" this week.

H. L. Jensen, wife and three children spent last Saturday at Grandpa Jensen's at Helix.

Several loads of people from this neighborhood attended the Friday, Saturday and Sunday night services at Beaverton conducted by Rev. Sam Botris. Everyone seems united in his praise. He is certainly a talented and entertaining speaker.

Mrs. R. A. Hardin and granddaughter Rachel Smith are up from Clowdald this week, visiting their friends and former neighbors in this community. Mrs. Hardin expects to start soon for her Indiana home. She will stop in Portland with her daughter, Mrs. Holman, until after the holidays.

THE CIRCUIT COURT.

Grand Jury Makes it Interesting for the Law Breakers Here.

WOLFE CASE IN COURT

The Deputy District Attorney Accused Attorney Nolan of Spiriting Away Witness.

The November term of the Circuit Court convened on Monday, with Judge G. H. Burnett on the Bench and with Dep. District Attorney C. L. McNary, of Salem, taking the place of his brother, District Attorney J. H. McNary. The docket contained a large number of cases. After the jury had been called the Judge instructed the Clerk to draw a grand jury, which resulted as follows: J. W. Hellenbrand, J. G. Kennedy, John Harter Cyrus Randall, Lewis Johnson, M. Melchior and Carl Wallin. The judge appointed Mr. Hellenbrand foreman.

Moses McCrum, of Mount Scott, was indicted by the grand jury, charged with assault on a battery, which took place at Garibaldi beach while camped there with his wife. He pleaded guilty and told the judge that somebody gave him whiskey, and he remembered nothing of what took place after that. Judge Burnett said that was a poor excuse for abusing his wife and fined him $150 and costs, or 75 days in the county jail. McCrum looked rattled, for he seemed to have had an idea that the judge had given him a jail and fine sentence combined, until the judge explained to him that he would have to go to jail until the fine was paid. McCrum thought that he would get off with a small fine, for he only had $75 with him.

John Dav was indicted by the grand jury for assault and battery upon James Freaney, which came near killing the latter, who was unconscious for several days as a result of being struck in the head with a blunt instrument, but he eventually recovered. He pleaded guilty and Friday was the day set for the defendant to be sentenced.

Harry Mitchell was also indicted for assault and battery upon Alvin Juhrs at the saw mill at Hobsonville, when the defendant struck the complainant a most vicious blow on the back with a crowbar, which injured him. He pleaded guilty and Friday he was to be sentenced.

The grand jury returned a true bill against J. H. Beach on a charge of embezzlement.

Albert N. Stanton was accused by the grand jury of assault and battery upon his wife, the parties belonging in Portland.

Jesse Davis, indicted on a charge of assault and battery at Netarts, pleaded not guilty.

The Wolfe Rape Case.

The grand jury returned a true bill against W. C. Wolfe, which charged him with rape upon his daughter, Eva Wolfe. When arranged he was given until the next day to plead. Attorney Nolan made a statement that he had been denied permission to see his client, and asked the court for permission to do so. Deputy District Attorney Cooper did not appear to like this, for he told the court that not only had the attorney been allowed to see the defendant, but Nolan had spirited away the state's witness. This accusation aroused some curiosity, and the crowd in court expected that something sensational was going to happen. They were disappointed, for the judge told the attorney that the defendant was in the custody of the sheriff and that he could see him at all reasonable time.

Tuesday was the day set for Wolfe to plead, and when brought into court he pleaded not guilty. Thayer & Nolan appeared for Wolfe and in was apparent that they did not want to go to trial. They first moved for a change of venue, filing affidavits from a number of Socialists, who claimed that he could not get a fair trial in Tillamook county. This was opposed by Deputy District Attorney McNary, and the Judge ruled against a change of venue. The defence having lost on that point asked for time to file motion for the case to be continued, and this was made on the ground that one of their witnesses, Herman Gessner, was not present. This was opposed by the prosecution, and the Judge would not allow the case to go over. Then Attorney Thayer wanted the case put off a day or so to give the defendant time to procure an attorney. The Judge referred to the court docket and said that the records showed that Thayer & Nolan appeared for the defendant. But Mr. Thayer persisted in saying that he was not prepared to go to trial with so serious a case. Judge Burnett then cut off all further flimsy tactics. "Are you ready for trial?" was the question the Judge asked of Mr. McNary. "Yes, your Honor, the State is ready for trial." Before anyone could butt in "Draw a jury" was the mandate which came from the Bench. That evidently pleased the large crowd in court, for it was plain that the defence had planned on delay to win out in the case.

After obtaining eleven jurors, this exhausted the list and the Judge instructed that a special list of twelve be drawn and the court adjourned until this morning and failing to obtain another jurymen from this list the case was put off again until tomorrow (Friday) morning.
