Editorial Snap Shots.

The slogan for this city is: All pull together for a seaport for the center of the county.

With the advent of another boat, it is safe to predict that a cold storage plant for salmon would be a money maker.

So it is as plain as the nose on a man's face that it is the individual cheese interests that are knocking the co-operative factori s

Another mayor and city council was elected on Monday, and it will soon be seen whether there is to be any improvement in the affairs of the city.

* * *

After a long tussel there is to be competition in the transportation business Well, a little healthy competition in that direction will be a good thing, won't it?

* * *

Several of the cow punchers went to the polls on Monday and voted to let the cows and chicken run at large. Wouldn't that kill you. It must have been democrats who haven't caught on to the Australian ballot system yet.

* * *

There were reports in circulation that Tyler was dealing in booze before he left town so suddenly and the barrel of Old Taylor now in the possession of Sheriff Crenshaw proves it. But it is rumored that certain other individuals should be closely watched.

* * *

With all due respect to the opinions of those who opposed annexation to the Port of Tillamook, we believe it will not be many years before those who opposed it will be frank enough to admit that they made a mistake when they voted against annexation.

* * *

We received a packet of pamphlets this week in which Senator Bourne gives his reason why W. H. Taft should be elected president. Does Jonathan know that an election has taken place or is he the first to get into the Taft band wagon for Taft's re election in 1912?

It used to be whenever there were prospects of opposition to the shipping business the monopoly company would offer a sugar coated pill in getting the business men to sign up. Wonder whether there are any sugar coated pill being manufactured for the present emergency?

* * *

A strong pull and a long pull and a pull altogether, and Tillamook City can be made a manufacturing center, a good deep water shipping port and as pretty and live city as any in the state. There is the get up, brains and ability right here to bring that about if the people would get together and stay together.

It would be a fitting thing to give the Argo a loyal welcome when she arrives in this city next week, so as to give the people an opportunity to shout for joy that the transportation monopoly is broken. Call the band out and every farmer in the surrounding country should come to town with a big megaphone.

* * *

We've often heard it said that a person has a smile that won't come off, and that appeared to be the expressions of the business men when told that the new boat could not be bought off if the people will patronize it. So with a smile that won't come off and a boat that cannot be bought off, things begin to look bright for the transportation monopoly coming to an end—and we hope forever.

It seems that there is to be an effort made to change the jury system at the next state legislature, so that the attorneys in each county would draw a jury list. The attorneys play enough havoc now in defeating the law without giving them the authority to select jurymen whom they could handle in trying cases. Wouldn't it be a good thing to abandon the jury system altogether, seeing that so many juries are bringing in compromise verdicts? But what assurance will there be of a person getting justice if the attorneys are to select the jurymen?

* * *

So the farmers have a majority vote on the new Port of Tillamook, and it is safe to say that no one is going to be taxed very much. The commissioners have got to get their hands into Uncle Sam's pockets and but slightly into the taxpayer's pockets. Give the new Port a chance to do something. Looking at the personal of the new body we are of the opinion that the taxpayers' interests will be safeguarded and no one need fear that they are going to be hurt very much, even if it is necessary to levy a small tax to help make the mare go.

It will be noticed that the Oregonian, in an editorial on the Port of Tillamook, says:

Tillamook is starting on right lines, and if the people in the territory that will be benefited by the improvements planned will only do their part, the city on Hoquarton slough may yet become a prominent seaport.

We consider, too, that those who are endeavoring to make a deep water harbor in the center of the county are doing so on right lines and with broad views, something which, when completed, the entire community will be pleased with.

The city election passed off quietly on Monday with no hard feelings and with friendly disposition to the new members of the city administration. No one expects impossibilities from them, nor can it be expected of them that they will blot out every abuse. One thing they can do, and that is to rigidly enforce the law, especially that where people sell intoxicating liquor without a license. The city ought to have added a large amount of money to its finances if a determined effort had been made to round up those who have been violating the liquor law But, alas, this has always been one of the weak points in the city's administration. Whether the present administration will be an improvement remains to be seen. They can be and should be masters of the situation.

The efforts of the Tillamook people to enlarge taxable territory affected by the proposed Port of Tillamook improvements, were successful, and at the election held on Monday, there were but fifteen opposing votes cast in Tillamook proper. The new precincts taken in displayed considerable sentiment favorable to continuation of the present plan by which Tillamook has been paying all the cost of improvements. The vote of these outside precincts was 136 for and 133 against the annexation. An attempt on the part of the Port of Portland to secure help from territory benefited by Port of Portland improvements, but not now included in the taxable district, would undoubtedly meet with similar opposition. It is easier to find beneficiaries than burden bearers in every community.—Oregonian.

The City Election.

The city election on Monday passed off quietly, there being but little interest taken in it apart from two wards, where opposition arose to the caucus nominees. B. C. Lamb tied F. W. Christensen with a vote of 19 to 19 in the third ward, and George Bennett polled 19 votes to 21 polled by W. S. Hays in the fifth ward. Only 153 votes were cast, and out of that number 77 voted to prohibit the running at large of live stock and poultry and 65 for.

Clouds and the Weather.

When two weather prophets disagree does it argue error or incompetence in either? No, says the author of "Storms and Storm Signals" in Yachting. The data upon which they base their predictions do not always bear one interpretation. Thus:

Because the clouds indicate weather in a different manner according to the geographical location of the observer, and also because they are in themselves but byproducts of the weather and are not causes, weather predictions from clouds at sea should be taken with plenty of reservation of judgment. To say, for instance, that at a "red sky at night sailors delight" is very tuneful and possibly truthful where knowledge is conspicuous by its absence, but a red sky at night may mean almost anything from a surplus of moisture in the air, meaning probably rains, to a volcanic eruption 2,000 miles away which has sent great clouds of dust into the air, causing the red color by reflection and refraction of the light rays.

The Eyes.

"Long, almond shaped eyes, with thick and creamy lids covering half the pupil and with a forehead that is full above the brows—there you have the eye of the man of genius." The speaker's own eyes answered that description strikingly, but he was far from being a man of genius, being, in fact, a magazine editor.

"Protruding eyes," he went on, "show mental and bodily weakness. Eyes close together denote cunning. Those far apart denote liberality. Thin lashes without any upward curve to them and thin brows poorly marked are signs of melancholy and indecision. The eyes of a voluptuary move slowly under heavy lids. Those of a miser are small, deep sunken and blue, set in a bony and perpendicular forehead. The most beautiful eyes—large, brilliant and clear, glancing and flashing with a rapid motion—the most beautiful eyes denote elegance of taste, gayety, some selfishness and a great interest in the opposite sex."—New York Press.

Like Father Like Son.

Four-year-old Clyde was a precocious youngster—very talkative and a close observer. He and his father were strolling through the meadows one morning when Clyde observed for the first time some tadpoles in a pond. He waded in and cried out, "Oh, father, what are they?"

"Tadpoles, son," the father replied.

"Please, father, let's take them all home with us, then come back and find the mamma and papa, and we'll have the whole family in our pond at home."

The father explained how impossible this would be, and as they walked on a few steps a large, ugly frog hopped across their path. Clyde's father said: "Look, son. Perhaps there is the papa."

Clyde was very thoughtful. He looked at the frog, then at his father, then at himself and exclaimed:

"Well, father, was there ever so much difference between me and you?" —Delineator.

Curious School Customs.

Mexican schoolmasters show their appreciation of a pupil's efforts in a curious manner. The diligent student is allowed to smoke a cigar during the lesson. When the whole class has given satisfaction, permission is given for a general smoke, and even the little Mexicans are allowed to light a cigarette for the occasion. Needless to say, the schoolmaster himself smokes a cigar of a size and quality proportionate to his superior position. But the scholars are not allowed to drink, this privilege being accorded to the master only. On his desk he always keeps a bottle of liquor, which, when empty, occasions much dispute among the parents of his scholars, as it is considered an honor to be able to fill the schoolmaster's bottle.—London Standard.

Cutting It Short.

A British lieutenant in the Second battalion, Lincolnshire regiment, who was called Leo Quintus Tollemache-Tollemache de Orellana Plantagenet Tollemache-Tollemache, gave notice by means of advertisement that he renounced the names of Quintus Tollemache-Tollemache Plantagenet Tollemache and should henceforth upon all occasions and at all times sign and use and be called and known by the name of Leo de Orellana Tollemache only.

Canada's Inland Sea.

People at home who have only seen Hudson bay on the map have mainly regarded it as a patch of polar desolation, forbidding and unexplored. In reality it is nothing of the kind. It is a huge inland sea as large as the Mediterranean reaching down into the center of the Canadian continent.—Milling.

Dumb Money.

Little Elmer—Mamma, this nickel you gave me this morning must be counterfeit. Mamma—Why do you think so, dear? Little Elmer—Well, I hear papa say that money talks, and I've had this money a whole day and it hasn't said a word.—Chicago News.

Modern Art.

Art in our time seems like an iridescent oil spread about on the surface of the muddy waters of our civilization; it and life don't mix.—London Saturday Review.

A Patient Sufferer.

Boy (to tramp)—Don't you get awful tired of doin' nothin', mister? Tramp—Terrible! But I never complains. Everybody has their troubles.—Philadelphia Inquirer.
