It is the same old methods. If anyone is successful and attempts to do anything for the city or county, there are always those who knock and want to pull down.

We feel like roasting the electric light company every morning at six o'clock when the whistle kicks up a darn'd nuisance, waking everybody in the neighborhood.

It is often remarked that the farming land in Tillamook county is held at too high a figure, but the owners raise no kick on that score.

Other counties, every once in a while, give the lawless element a touch of high life, especially in regard to bootlegging.

Deputy District Attorney Conner was called from McMinnville to Carlton to finish up in Justice Court a batch of prosecutions for violation of the county prohibition law.

James L. Fowler, a proprietor of a near beer joint, was convicted on three charges and for the several offenses was fined a total of $450 and 20 days in the county jail.

Wouldn't it surprise us all if the lawless element in this county were given a dose of that kind of medicine instead of letting them go when there is a clear case against them?

Two years ago, when the State legislature was in session, there was considerable discussion amongst dairymen as to the passage of a bill, introduced by Representative Beals, for a dairy inspector for Tillamook County.

ditions it begins to look that the long need of Tillamook cheese being graded will come about in a way which will result in much good to the cheese industry of this county.

THE DAIRY INDUSTRY. Tillamook Greatest Dairy Section in America.

Motto: "Onward—Upward."

TO EDITOR OF TILLAMOOK HEADLIGHT.

DEAR SIR.—In olden times when the luxuries of the table were less numerous than at present, milk and honey were highly esteemed, if we may judge from old writings.

If these same counts had been sent to Tillamook on a similar mission today, they would no doubt have given the same report, a land flowing with milk and honey.

Fighting there would be and plenty of it, not against the people, but against the wilderness—against rubbish, stumps and logs.

I will go back to the earlier days and describe some of the conditions at that time as told by the pioneer.

The country, then was nothing but a vast forest. By work of the lumberman these forests were greatly and rapidly reduced, taking out mostly the first class timber.

Let all editors, dairymen, cheese men, and cheese makers co-operate and make an effort to keep this great industrial ball rolling in the right direction.

With this wonderful fertile soil and climatic conditions which causes the great industrial ball to roll, are all dairymen alive to the situation.

Are you looking entirely to the cheese factory end of the proposition for your success or should you look to the cow as well?

Do you weigh and test the milk from each cow and keep a record of same?

Do you compute the value of food consumed and charge this up to the cow?

Do you know whether or not the cow pays for the food consumed?

Is the cow paying for the food consumed and leaving you a fair profit for your time and labor?

Do you culling out the poorer grades of cows and replacing them with better ones or do you make the good cows help keep the poorer ones?

Do you consider the dairy industry a business proposition and operating it in a good systematic manner?

Are you getting the full value of this fertile soil?

Could you raise more green forage during the year to help balance up the ration?

Is your barn warm, well lighted and ventilated?

Last, but not least, we come to the question of clean, wholesome milk. This is by no means a new question, but is the very one that confronts all dairy sections.

I am a firm believer in the saying if you can't boast don't knock. Now I wish to make a few friendly criticisms and say a few words in behalf of the Red Clover Creamery Co. also the Hazelwood Creamery Co.

A great deal of discussion has taken place the past year regarding the cheese industry. I am well aware of the fact that there are two sides to the fence in Tillamook and it is very unfortunate for any industry to have knockers and difficult to contend with.

These companies have been referred to as individuals and independents, also Red Clover (Hazelwood) and asking if they pay their patrons as much as the co-operatives.

If the Red Clover factory is not a co-operative and the Red Clover people are not operating it on the co-operative system, then I am from Missouri, "You show me."

It has been stated that we need less competition and more co-operation. This is very true, but it depends on what the co-operative is really is.

Hazelwood didn't come in here like a lion and go out like a lamb, like some companies have done, but they have come to stay.

Let all editors, dairymen, cheese men, and cheese makers co-operate and make an effort to keep this great industrial ball rolling in the right direction.

I remain, Very respectfully for a larger and greater Tillamook.

DEFENDS THE BEALS' TIMBER BILL.

Ridicules the Assertion that Farming Land is Heavily Timbered.

[TO THE EDITOR TILLAMOOK HEADLIGHT.]

Why Beals House Bill, No. 43, should not pass.

Under this title the Tillamook Herald quotes in part an article published in the Oregon Journal on the 28th ult.

The following is quoted from the Herald article: "Beals' law, although ingeniously worded, forces the timber owners to have their lands cruised within ninety days."

The following is quoted from the Herald article: "Beals' law, although ingeniously worded, forces the timber owners to have their lands cruised within ninety days."

So we see that the requirement that the land be cruised in ninety days only applies in cases where the owner of timber does not possess the requisite information or cruise, and then it is discretionary with the assessor.

But as was stated in last week's Headlight, at the instance of Mr. Beals, this feature of the bill is to be eliminated by amendment.

A little further on the Journal article the following appears: "All figures obtained by the enforcement of this act would be through the whim of the assessor teeming with prejudice, deception and perhaps perjury." Weigh and consider these words. No exceptions mind you: "All figures obtained by the enforcement of this act would be through the whim of the assessor teeming with prejudice, deception and perhaps perjury."

No other interpretation can be placed upon the language. Again he says: "There are in Tillamook County many settlers with quarter sections, 40 or 50 acres of which are utilized for dairying purposes while the balance of the land contains timber."

This inconsistent argument, shocking to our moral sensibilities, is illustrative of the extremes to which the enemies of this worthy measure are driven.

The measure does not attempt to force the owner of timber land to make a cruise. It merely prescribes a penalty in case he does not, when requested to do so, but assuming that he did, it is a well known fact that reliable cruises are being obtained at a cost of from $15 to $25 per 1/4 section.

In his article is a paragraph relating to the oil well south of town. This subject is too deep for me, as he says the well penetrates 2200 feet into the bowels of the earth, or words to that effect.

I am frank to confess my inability to cope with wireless telegraphy, or any thing deeper than the earth's surface, so will pass this paragraph up.

Under the head of "What will it accomplish?" Pentreath cries, "Will the bill accomplish any real good, will it reduce the tax to the timber owner?"

There are a great many prairie and tide land farms in this country on which there is hardly a twig to be found. In all the non-timbered farming lands aggregating thousands of acres.

Pause and think of the farms about you on which there is no heavy timber and then get the Herald of the 4th inst, read the editorial referred to and the other junk and be your own judge as to the honesty of purpose of this man.

I repeat what was said in last week's Headlight, namely: "The Beals timber measure is the most adequate solution of the taxation of timber yet proposed."

This, kind reader, is what the Beals bill seeks to do, nothing more, nothing less.

Do you think House Bill, No. 34, should not pass?

Respectfully yours, A HEAVY TAXPAYER.
