Don't be a knocker! Boost the city and the county!

The four jokers at Hemlock on Sunday seemed to cause considerable surprise to a bevy of settlers.

The treats are on the deputy game and fish warden for swearing out complaints before the new fish law went into effect.

"Someone ought to get a club and club the whole outfit," was the remark made by an indignant person a few days ago about those who are trying to rob people of their property in this city.

When a person swears to a complaint that he is the owner of another person's property and is not, it looks to us, Mr. District Attorney, that that is false swearing and perjury of the rankiest kind.

If any of the road supervisors still continue the old theory of building hump back roads and allow the wind to catch up and carry off the road bed on the sides of the hump back gravel, as a matter of economy it would be a good thing if the county court would supercede any road supervisors with hump back road building ideas.

We predict that the parties who have been attempting to bamboozle people out of their property will land where they belong one of these days—in the penitentiary. That is if some wronged and enraged person does not beat the life out of them before that time. And then they would only be getting what they long deserved, for it is time that the dirty, rotten outfit was dealt with in a summary manner.

The cut rates on the Sheridan stage is liable to cause a cut rate on other stage lines, which means that none of them are liable to make any money this summer. It will, probably, cause more travel, but it takes so much to pack passengers in and out of this county, and if anyone is wanting to know how easy it is to go broke, carrying passengers at starvation rates will soon demonstrate this. Those who carry passengers every day in the year and in all kinds of weather are the parties who are most injured by those who cut rates and put on stages for the summer months, and for that reason it seems to us that those who charge the same rates in winter and summer are deserving of the patronage.

Supervisor Farmer is doing some good work on the road in the neighborhood of Hemlock, but whether the road, with so little rock foundation will stand up under heavy travel, remains to be seen. One thing is certainly noticeable, that is the improvement in the grades. Before the rock crusher and road roller is removed to another part of the county the road between this city and Beaver should be put in good condition, for there is now more travel over that road than any road in the county. The big rocks in the road in the vicinity of South Prairie and the abominable summer roads on the sides of the hump back gravel roads, will have to be taken off and remodeled before they can be made good roads, and longer the change is delay, more expensive will it be to fix them, for in some place the travel and the wind carry the dust off, have cut down the summer road several feet, leaving a hump of gravel in the middle of the road.

Still the Herald is knocking the Argo, and as a cure for knocking one of the best things that ever happened to the city and county the people should retaliate by patronizing only business men who ship by the Argo. This steamer has saved the business men and the people of this county thousands of dollars already and the exorbitant freight rates under the monopoly system is not causing any trouble these days and we do not want to refer to them if we can avoid it, but if we are to be forced into a boat fight to protect the business and county's interests, then the snap shot man is ready for the fight right now. This silly little, little sily methods of knocking the cooperative associations and the Argo should be answered by the dairymen throwing their patronage to the business men who ship by the Argo, for it is the producers and the consumers who are reaping the benefit of having competition in the transportation business.

We give in another page the petition that will be presented at the July term of the county court for a special election to create a new Port of Tillamook under the new law. The territory to be embraced is Tillamook, Hoquarten, South Prairie and Fairview precincts. This is a matter of vital importance to the center part of the county, for the improvement of the harbor and the straightening of Hoquarten slough will have a great deal to do in making this a manufacturing city. It is to be hoped that no serious opposition will arise, and even if it does the large preponderance of voters who are in favor of these improvements, on a straight vote, will carry with a large majority. The Headlight has so often pointed out the benefits that will be derived by having a deep, straight channel from this city to the bay, so it is not necessary for us to repeat what we have already published, other than to say that we hope the voters will take a broad, business view of the situation, for all property and business interests will be benefited by the city becoming a

THE OLD FLINTLOCKS.

They Seem to Have Done Some Rather Tolerable Shooting.

"These old shooting irons," said a man from Virginia, who was examining an old flintlock rifle, "always have my profound respect. Our grandfathers and great-grandfathers did their hunting with them and used them in our two victorious wars with England. They were always good weapons and are now, if they are equipped with a good stock and a good lock. They could do fine service. Any man who was any sort of a marksman could do effective work with them in their day. This fact was well illustrated in an incident that happened several years ago near Richmond. The story was printed in some of the leading newspapers in Virginia and was the cause of much interest.

"There was an old farmer residing in one of the peninsular counties who was coming on the cars to Richmond and had with him one of those old fashioned weapons. In the train he got into conversation with a small party of gentlemen, who expressed much interest in his old rifle, and the farmer told of some rather extraordinary feats of marksmanship that he had performed with it.

"Finally he was persuaded to give an exhibition of his skill with the old rifle, and a trial came off at Rocketts in the presence of a few gentlemen. The old flintlock was fired seven times and only missed the mark once. At first the old man fired it at some small objects—to get his hand steady, so he said. Then the old fellow handed to his son, who had every faith in his father's skill, a large potato and stationed him at fifty yards distance, holding the potato between his thumb and forefinger.

"The rifle cracked, and the potato was split into several pieces. Another shot was made at the bowl of a pipe which the boy was smoking, and the bowl was smashed. Several other shots were made at various objects, but in trying to hit a copper cent that was tossed in the air the marksman made a miss. He was considerably mortified at this and laid the blame on the bystander who sneezed loudly at the critical moment, but made another attempt, which was successful.

"The old man then declined any further trials of his skill and when offered a sum of money to repeat his feat of shooting a potato from his son's hand refused, saying he didn't care to experiment any further unless his weapon was freshly cleaned. The boy was willing, but the old man was obdurate. The young man showed not the least anxiety during the dangerous experiment upon himself."—Washington Post.

A Necessity.

"Twenty dollars for retrimming your hat!" exclaimed Mr. Madison. "But we agreed to spend nothing except for things that were positively needed."

"Well, John, this is. You see, my best friend has just had hers retrimmed, and I have promised to go with her to the concert on Friday."

"Oh, all right. But I can't give you more than fifteen this morning, because I broke my meerschaum and must have it mended."

"Can't you smoke your old brierwood?"

"Certainly, dear. And you can wear your old hat."

"John, let's begin to economize next month after we get things all straightened out."

"All right."—New York Herald.

To Multiply by Division.

Everybody knows that learning the tens in the multiplication table is as easy as "pie" and that the fives are not much harder; but, slight as is the mental effort required in multiplying any number by five, it may be lessened still more by discarding the multiplier entirely and substituting a divisor instead. This may sound paradoxical, but by experimenting you will find that dividing by two will bring the same result as multiplying by five, provided you add a cipher to the quotient if the dividend be an even number or five if it be odd. For instance, if you multiply 2,734 by five the product is 13,670. What is still easier, divide 2,734 by two, which is done almost instantaneously; then tack on your 0 and you have 13,670.

Second Seaman—That's the saloon passengers' menu, of course.

"But wot does it mean?"

"Oh, it's a list of all the things they have for dinner—soup and fish and vegetables and meat. That's the difference between the saloon and the fore-castle; they get them all separately and call it a menu. In the fore-castle we get them altogether and call it Irish stew."—London Answers.

True Tale.

"My daughter gave us an awful scare the other day," said a caller last night. "She went away for a visit in New York. And she sent a telegram from Buffalo, her first stop. My wife was afraid to open it. We had visions of train wrecks, sudden illness and all sorts of things. And what do you think the message said? This: 'I forgot to tell you—don't eat up all the strawberry jam while I'm gone.'"—Cleveland Leader.

THE CHAMELEON.

This Curious Animal is Like the Creatures Joined.

The chameleon is not allied to any other animal. It stands genus by itself. The nervous system in one lateral half operates entirely of those in the other, seems outrageous, and it is true. The chameleon has two centers of perception—of sensation of motion. There exists also a center—that common one which abides the power of concentration means of which the two sides of a creature may be forced to harmony with each other. The center of concentration does ways dominate the situation, withstanding the strictly symmetrical structure of the animal's body the eyes move quite independently and they convey distinct impressions to their respective centers of perception. As of the eyes the other members—each eye and is controlled by its own center. The result is that when the center of concentration becomes everything is jumbled. Let the chameleon be much agitated and its movements grow erratic. They are of two creatures fastened together rather, of two half creatures. Each half exhibits its intelligence in its separate way. The inevitable confusion of movement is no concordance of action. An example of the chameleon's lessness when unduly excited is in the fact that it cannot avoid shock of being plunged into water. The chameleon is calm and its legs are extended. The chameleon is calm and its legs are extended. The chameleon is calm and its legs are extended.

FLINT AND Tinder.

Making Fire in the Days Had Matches. A friend of mine of just my own to laugh about his own boyhood tell the story of his mother and him in bed and bidding him to get up boots when he dressed and to coat and wade through the next neighbor's to get a pair of coals with which to make his flint. We kept our flint and called "the steel" in a round of berries now, and it was on a table in the kitchen. It is full of tinder. Half the boys of today do not know what or was.

Now, whoever was in the morning and found that hot coal of the wood fire had taken down the tinder box and the steel with the flint smothered until a red hot spark of tinder; then very carefully with her breath on any tinder which had lighted quite a little cove of tinder. Then she took what we called stone match and put that fully in the little hot hole things worked well, the lighted and the wood of the which made a part of the tinder. Oh, dear! There were tinder boxes in little Boston was born, and a few years ago to buy one as a curiosity, and not find one in any of the stores. In those days old women used at the door and ask you to bundles of matches. They were themselves of pine wood inches long, which they had hot brimstone at both ends. They were the only matches that ever heard of.—Woman's Era.
