The Tillamook Headlight.

By direction of the president, the state department has mailed to the various state governments the documents testifying to the action of Congress in adopting the income tax amendment proposal.

It is almost superfluous to read that the St. Louisan who lost $9000 on a crooked roulette wheel in Colorado is named Bray. There is nothing easier to detect than a crooked roulette wheel.

Snow, the wheat statistician, says calmly: "If there can be ten days more without frost, Manitoba will have a full crop." The cautiousness of speaking of a possibility of frost within ten days, in any part of the world, is in itself reassuring.

Hot winds are now said to be threatening the consummation of a bumper corn crop in Western and Southwest Kansas. Hot air may yet come to the help of the Democratic party out there, but there is reason for hoping that it is now too late.

Ike Bowers has just been shot and killed at Newport, Ark. The old question of whether or not Joe Bowers really "had a brother Ike" seems now to be answered, at least to the extent of showing that such a thing might have been possible.

The Metropolitan Life Insurance Company has perfected elaborate plans for conducting a fight against tuberculosis not as a philanthropy, but as a cold business proposition. Permission has been asked of the New York State sanitarium to establish a large rural sanitarium for the benefit of their policyholders. The company will spend $100,000 a year on this project.

Everywhere in the South statements of the old school are crying out that the introduction of the straddle in female equestrianism and the abolition of the side saddle will be a death blow to Southern chivalry. After seeing the thing done a few times the men of the South may even conclude that women can stand in street cars and give them a chance to try.

The Ware-Kraemer Independent Tobacco Company has brought suit against the tobacco trust for $1,000,000 damages caused to its business through the trust's violation of the laws to prevent restraint of trade. Here is an idea which may find expansion after we begin to relearn our old lesson that self-reliance in the citizens of a free country is better than looking to a paternal government for everything.

Medical circles report that the new disease "pellagra," has greatly increased since its recent discovery. Which would be true if it had an entirely different name and an entirely different set of symptoms. Mind can make sick as readily as it can make well, and the discovery of a new complaint invariably sets to work a number of weak minds which have tried all of the old ones.

Weyler was not sent to Barcelona, but the wholesale executions which were done there, without the formality of even a drumhead court martial, shows that his methods are part of Spain's regular military formula. And the young king will never regain his former popularity or gayety. He has already realized, as did any monarchs in many lands, that uneasy lies the head that wears a crown.

As a presidential aspirant Mr. Bryan is wise in remaining in Nebraska. By moving to Texas he would take himself out of the list of nomination possibilities. In Nebraska he has won some prestige. He has made that state doubtful in national elections. While Nebraska has not as many electoral votes as Texas, it has a far better chance than Texas to name Democratic candidates. In Denver in 1908 nobody asked or cared who Texas favored for the nomination. Nebraska's voice was dominant, and it promises to be decisive in 1912 also.

Michael Kolanepka, a New Jersey farmer, recently discovered that his cows were being robbed of their milk at night. He hired a detective to watch for the thieves. Although he could discover no thieves during the first two nights, the cows came up in the morning minus their milk as usual. Finally it was discovered that a large flock of geese from a neighboring farm were in the habit of running with the cows at night, and when the cows lay down the geese helped themselves to their milk. The farmer impounded the geese and the owner had to get them back through the court.

We've got the men, we've got the brains, we've got the money, too. These words are only a slight paraphrasing of the triplet with which England used to bid defiance to the world. England was singing of the triumphs of war. The National Irrigation Congress in session at Seattle was singing of the triumphs of peace, but it was singing loud. It tried no lifting measure such as England used, and such as we have used in trying to express the spirit of the Seattle Convention. It just reached an arm across the continent and held up the thumb and four fingers of one hand to indicate that all it wanted was $5,000,000,000 (five billion, count them)—a billion for every digit. It adopted resolutions setting out its opinion that that much money is needed to properly conserve our national resources. And the temperature was not very high at Seattle either. There is no indication that the delegates were not voting in cool blood.

Mr. Bryan and Gov. Johnson of Minnesota are being billed close together in the Chautauqua days. Sometimes, when two circuses are running close together on the same lines, or parallel lines, there is a cut in prices, but no cut rates have yet been mentioned by Democratic showmen this year. Sunday, while Mr. Bryan was speaking in Pana, Ill., Gov. Johnson was speaking in Shelbyville, not many miles away as the crow flies, and as the Big Four Railroad runs. That is, or once was, a Democratic section of Illinois, and it would be interesting to know whether the Democrat who is never defeated or the one who is never elected drew the larger audience. In the absence of turnstile statistics, all we may do is speculate, and even this was not possible until lately. Not until after Mr. Bryan's third defeat and Gov. Johnson's third election in a Republican state, was it possible to inquire whether the winner could be a drawing card as against the loser in a Democratic part of the country where the Democrats have seemed to like losing better than winning, and where they flourish better out than in.

The United States' postal authorities are beginning to exercise a close supervision of the mails in the hope of holding up money which is sent from this country for the purchase of lottery tickets in Cuba. Naturally the Cubans looked to the United States for most of the support for their national lottery, which is just going into operation at Havana. The finance officials at that capital expect a revenue of from $2,000,000 to $5,000,000 a year from the drawings there, and the greater part of this money would be likely to come from the United States unless some sort of barriers are set up here. Postmaster General Hitchcock has just given orders to all the postal officials of the country to exercise particular care toward preventing the use of the mails for lottery purposes. By shutting the Louisiana lottery out from the Post Office the government overthrew it, and abolished that discredit to the country. There is no good reason why the United States Government should show favors to a lottery in Havana which were denied to one in New Orleans. Thus an effort will be made to hold up all remittances from this country to Cuba which are intended for lottery purposes.

Salvation.

[TO THE EDITOR TILLAMOOK HEADLIGHT.] There are two ideas of salvation, one is that we save ourselves and the other is that Christ saved us.

Christendom is based on the one idea that man fell through the first man Adam, and was redeemed by the second Adam, Jesus Christ. We had nothing to do with the fall, nor did we have anything to do with redemption. If Christ had failed on the cross there would be no hope for the human family.

A man does not stand in need of what he already has, therefore I have no need of salvation, for I was saved when Christ died on the cross, and have been saved ever since.

By listening to the popular preacher, I was led to believe I must do something to be saved. I lost all faith in the cross of Christ, the only means of salvation the world ever knew, and tried to comply with the requirements of the preacher. I imagined that he was sent of God and I relied on him for instructions. The more I tried the more I became bewildered. I was dazed in thinking that salvation depended on holding up my hand or trying to speak for Jesus, and vowing to live a better life. My whole mind was kept in one groove, that salvation was to be a reward for my personal appearance and goodness. I knew no peace or rest. There seemed to be a pending chance that could only be settled by the approving smiles of the preacher.

It is a delusion for a man to search for what he already has. Now if Christ saved the world, how was I left out? If he did not save the world there is no hope, nor is there any other way of salvation. The fact is, if I have senses enough to comprehend the cross of Christ, I have no need of a preacher, and if I have not, the preacher will never be able to make me understand it. I have never met the preacher yet who was pointing to the cross of Christ, invariably he is pointing to my self right eousness probably for lack of faith in the cross his own self.

One salvation is enough for me if Christ saved me. Well and good. If he did not it is too big an undertaking for me.

There are two things that seems to me to be a waste of expence. One is a dog, the other a preacher. J. C. GOVZ.

COURT MAY UPSET LOCAL OPTION LAW.

Appellant from Tillamook County Believes He Has Found New Loophole.

SALEM, Or., Aug. 21.—If the case of the State vs. W. Langworthy, now pending in the Supreme Court of this state, is decided in favor of the appellant, Langworthy, the local option law, the primary election law and some other measures passed under the initiative and referendum will be invalidated. The Langworthy case is an appeal from Tillamook County by a man convicted of the illegal sale of intoxicating liquors. The main contention of the appellant is that the local option law was never legally submitted to the people nor legally adopted by the voters because the Secretary of State did not require the County Clerks of the State to print the title of the initiative petition on the ballot, as required by the law of 1903.

Section 6 of the act of 1903, making effective the initiative and referendum provisions of the Constitution and regulating elections thereunder, says:

Title Must go on Ballot.

"The Secretary of the State, at the same time that he furnishes to the County Clerks of the several counties certified copies of the names of the candidates for the state and district offices shall furnish to said county clerks his certified copy of his titles and numbers of the various measures to be voted upon at the ensuing general election, and he shall use for each measure a title designated for that purpose by the Legislative assembly committee, or organization presenting and filing with him the act, constitutional amendment, or petition for the initiative and referendum: Provided, that in no case shall such title exceed 20 words, and shall not resemble any such title previously filed for any measure to be submitted at that election, which shall be descriptive of said measure."

The brief of appellant's attorneys points out that when the Secretary of State certified to the County Clerks of the state the list of candidates to be placed upon the ballot, he failed to give the title of the local option petition as it had appeared on the petition, but gave it the title on the ballot of "for local option liquor law." Therefore, Langworthy's attorneys contend that the question was never legally submitted or adopted.

Title and Ballot Separate.

In their brief, counsel for the state call attention to the provision that title shall not exceed 20 words, and claim that that section of the law of 1903 requiring the Secretary to "use for each measure a title designated for that purpose by the Legislative assembly, committee or organization presenting or filing with him the act, etc.," plainly shows that the title of the act and the ballot title are different, or at least must be if the act is expressed in more than 20 words.

A quotation from the brief of Assistant Attorney-General Van Winkle says: "All ground for the contention of appellant that the title of the act and the title of the ballot are one and the same is swept from under his feet when we notice that the same provisions of the statute as to ballot title apply to measures referred by referendum petition, and measures proposed by initiative petition, and that any of these measures may be either amendments to the Constitution or any bills of laws."

Council for the state also contends that there was no possibility of voters having been misled and not knowing what they were voting upon, pamphlets giving this and other measures in full having been circulated shortly before election, ballot title and number being given with each measure so printed.

Law Since Amended.

The law of 1903 on this subject has since been amended, the amended law requiring the Attorney-General to designate a title which the Secretary of State shall certify to the various County Clerks.

The title of the initiative petition providing for primary elections and for that on the local option law are each several hundred words in length. The attorneys for the respondent are John H. McNary, District Attorney; W. H. Cooper, Deputy District Attorney, and H. T. Botts, Attorney General Crawford and Assistant Attorney General I. H. Van Winkle. For the appellant: Holmes & Handley and Talmage and Johns.

The case will be argued some time during the October term.

Cholera Infantum Cured. "Something like two years ago my baby, which was then about a year old, was taken seriously ill with cholera infantum, vomiting and purging profusely, writes J. F. Dempsey, of Dempsay, Ala. I did what I could to relieve her but did her no good, and being very much alarmed about her went for a physician but failed to find one, so came procured a bottle of it, went home as quickly as possible and gave the baby a dose of the remedy. It relieved her in fifteen minutes and soon cured her entirely." For sale by Lamar's Drug Store.

Intense Colicky Pains Relieved.

"From some years I suffered from intense colicky pains which would come on at times and from which I could find no relief," says I. S. Mason, of Bower Dam, Ky. "Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy was recommended to me by a friend. After taking a few doses of the remedy I was entirely relieved. That was four years ago and there has been no return of the symptoms since that time. This remedy is for sale by Lamar's Drug Store."

Granulated Sore Eyes Cured.

"For twenty years I suffered from a bad case of granulated sore eyes, says Martin Boyd of Henrietta, Ky. "In February, 1903, a gentleman asked me to try Chamberlain's Salve. I bought one box and used about two thirds of it and my eyes have not given me any trouble since. This salve is for sale by Lamar's Drug Store."

THE POET SAYS

"Beauty draws us by a single hair." This seems like something of an exaggeration on the part of the poet, if at least does not apply to men. The man with a single hair would not draw worth a cent, unless as a curiosity. People to look their best need hair, they need all they ever have. If the hair begins to go it is time to use

YOUR EYES!

Stop and think about your eyes. They often pain you a little. You simply give them a rest and you are relieved. But they ought not to pain you with ordinary use. There is something wrong. Let me test them. I make no charge for that and if you need glasses or if it comes from some other cause I will tell you.

Watch Repairing Tip.

It's astonishing how many fine watches are ruined each year by being placed in the hands of poor and inexperienced workmen for repairs. A slight oversight on their part often causes an unnoticeable grinding and clicking that will wear out the best movement in a short time. Why run these chances? Leave your repairing in our hands and you will get all long experience and honesty can give.
