What a Traveling Man Saw.

We have been asked to publish the following letter:

TO THE EDITOR OF THE SUN—Sir: I say to you candidly as an Eastern man and one who held strong ideas adverse to prohibition, after reading Mr. Busch's letter on the regulation of the liquor traffic, that he has weakened me and has made me angry all over.

To show you the weakness of his argument, he uses Leavenworth's soldier riot against prohibition. Now, as a traveling man I have been "making" Leavenworth for twelve years and I know conditions there, and your own information is or should be that Leavenworth is the one county and city of Kansas where the citizens of all classes have steadfastly protested the authorities, State and Federal, for the last twenty years from enforcing the laws. By a regular monthly police fine the open saloons of that city have been in effect the highest of high licensed saloons.

The citizens of that county have also permitted from 200 to 250 women to live on certain streets and to operate resorts under a system of protecting fines. The spectacle of hundreds of old, gray and feeble veteran soldiers of the Civil War being dragged in and kicked out in the streets after being robbed on pension day can be seen there any pay day.

Now, on the day mentioned by Mr. Busch I saw on the train from Kansas City over twenty-five women, con men, dip workers on their way to Leavenworth from Kansas City, and a conductor laughingly remarked: "Oh, these horses are coming in on every train from K. C. and St. Joe to work the soldiers, all under protection."

Therefore Mr. Busch lays this all to prohibition, when the truth is that every man you meet in a business way in Leavenworth thinks it the proper thing to get the soldiers' money any old way, and to stop this would kill the town!

Mr. Busch holds prohibition to blame and blandly tells you he is opposed to this, when the very heart of his business depends on this sort of traffic, and he and others have tried for years to defeat, vilify and attempt to ruin every clean living man who would like to stop this by law. Dig Leavenworth up and show the world how the liquor traffic has been carried on there. It would startle the country.

Now the people of Leavenworth may have thought this good business policy, but their wide open town has gone back every year, and they now know this.

On the night after this trouble I was at Junction City, Fort Riley, where the last vestige of the traffic has been wiped out, and I fraternized with the boys in every branch of the army service. They were a fine, happy lot of young men. Five hundred or more attended the little open-air theatre, and they sat and applauded through the performance, hundreds more patronized the stores and restaurants, and were sending home presents, all sober.

About ten o'clock the post trolley cars were crowded with as lively, happy a crowd of men as I ever saw, and not a drink had been sold in the town that night, not an arrest, not an angry word anywhere.

Across the writing table from me a soldier with service stripes said that it was the only way to live and that it was only when the boys got full of bad whiskey that they got bad, and when they knew that it could not be got they "forgot it."

He said that representatives from every brewery and wholesale whiskey house on the Missouri and Nebraska border drummed, worked, explained how to get around the law, offered prizes, and tramped up and down the entire post, and at an expense far greater than the cost of that entire shipment. That one carload of liquor was assembled and shipped together, showing that the united effort was not for the business that could be obtained, but for the almost insane desire to break down the bars.

I tell you Mr. Busch cannot get this class of dealers to obey any law of either God or man. Now I saw these two instances and I have been impressed, I tell you. JOHN B. STEVENS.

A Fine Dairy Country, However.

The Humboldt Beacon, of April 2, had this to say of Tillamook county:

Charles Cross, of Rio Dell, was in town on Monday—his first visit to us since he came down from Oregon last Friday.

Mr. Cross has been north in Tillamook county for the past six months, having wintered there. And now he is home to stay.

His experience up north and his observations have convinced him that there are worse places under the sun than old Humboldt. For instance, the everybody knows that our county is not extra.

On the ranches for dairy work $30 a month and board is the going rate. In the woods and mills the pay is $2 a day with 80 cents charged for ten hours. After hearing our visitor's story we are not surprised that he has returned to the old county to stay.

Very like Humboldt in its situation is Tillamook being shut from the world and only approach by either a wearisome stage or a trying sea voyage. The little steamer Argo, so well known to our settlers, is making weekly trips between Tillamook harbor and Astoria and Portland.

As to living there it is high. That is natural when freight rates are considered. Wages on the other are not extra. On the ranches for dairy work $30 a month and board is the going rate. In the woods and mills the pay is $2 a day with 80 cents charged for ten hours.

If Mr. Cross had spent the summer and not the winter in Tillamook he, no doubt, would have been able to talk intelligently about this county. But this article only shows what a wrong impression a person can get of the county, yet for all that, if dairy farms are selling for such high prices, it is because of the fact that the dairymen can make more off one acre of land in Tillamook than ten in most other places.

Cured Hay Fever and Summer Cold.

A. S. Nushbaum, Batesville, Indiana, writes: "Last year I suffered for three months with a summer cold so distressing that it interfered with my business. I had many of the symptoms of hay fever, and a doctor's prescription did not reach my case, and I took several medicines which seemed only to aggravate it. Fortunately I insisted upon having Foley's Honey and Tar. It quickly cured me. My wife has since used Foley's Honey and Tar with the same success."—J. S. Lamar, Tillamook; Hawk & Miller, Bay City.

Take Notice. All persons are recommended to take Foley's Kidney Remedy for backache, rheumatism, and kidney and bladder trouble. It will quickly correct urinary irregularities, which, if neglected, may develop into a serious illness. Do not restore health and strength. Do not neglect signs of kidney or bladder trouble and risk Bright's disease or diabetes.—J. S. Lamar, Tillamook; Hawk & Miller, Bay City.
