

ARTILLERYMEN.

They Were Once Regarded as Mechanics, Not Soldiers.

Until the time of Charles XII. of Sweden the artillery was not considered a part of the army. The men serving in it were not soldiers, but regarded as mechanics. The officers had no army rank and regularly organized the artillery into companies. The battle of Pavia demonstrated the superiority of the gun in the hands of the Spanish infantry. The musket carried a two ounce ball and sometimes brought down at one fire two or three mailed knights. The French sent a few of their men to remonstrate against the use of such barbarous weapons.

Alexander had four kinds of cavalry—the estaphraet, or heavy armed horse; the light cavalry, carrying spears and very light armor; the acrobats, or mounted archers, used for outposts, patrols and reconnoitering duty; and the dimachoe, or troops expected to act either as cavalry or infantry. Alexander the Great reorganized his father's army. The file or arches of sixteen men was the unit; two files made a diolochy; two diolochies made a tetraorchy; two tetraorchies made a tetraorchy; two tetraorchies made a tetraorchy; four of these a tetra-phalangarchy; otherwise known as a large phalanx.

The Greeks attacked in a phalanx, the spears interlocked and shields overlapping. After the first onset the spears were dropped, and the day was decided with the sword. The cavalry attacked the enemy in the rear if possible and in case of victory undertook the pursuit.—Pearson's Weekly.

SOFT SHELLED CRABS.

The Way They Get Rid of Their Hard Outer Coats.

Many persons believe that the hard shelled crab and the soft shelled crab are two different species. This is not so. The shellfish thus distinguished are merely two conditions of the same species.

Once a year the crab sheds its hard outer coat, much as does a snake, in order to give itself room for greater growth. When it gets ready to make the transformation it sidles in close to shore, where the water at low tide will just cover it, and where it is comparatively safe from its maritime enemies. Then, when it is half buried in the sand, its shell splits open behind, and it painfully crawls out. The new coat, as soft as skin, is already well started. But until it shall have become fairly hard the crab stays almost motionless in the shoals. While it is in this condition its pinchers are useless, and it falls an easy prey to the most insignificant enemy which happens upon it.

There is no particular time of year chosen by the crab for the metamorphosis. All through the twelve months of the year the fishermen wading with their baskets along the shore at low tide gather the helpless crabs, which fetch a high price in the markets. In their soft state they are worth from four to five times their price when in their natural hard condition.—Chicago News.

The "King of Rome."

What became of Napoleon's son is a question often asked, as little mention is made in history of the young prince, the desire of his father's life, who was born March 20, 1811, amid great rejoicing in Paris and hailed as the "king of Rome." In January, 1814, Napoleon embraced his wife and child for the last time, and this really ended the reign of the little king "who never saw his kingdom." He was reared in the Austrian court under the name of the Duke of Reichstadt and grew to be a handsome young fellow and quite a brilliant scholar. He had one short year of military life and then contracted pulmonary disease, from which he died in his twenty-second year. He was buried in the Carthusian monastery of Vienna, which is the Austrian Westminster abbey.

Crowded New York.

New York always was crowded. In 1857 it had about thirty first class hotels. Most of them were below City Hall park. The capacity of these houses was about 6,000. The average number of visitors to the city at that time was estimated to be 20,000. It is stated by an early historian that it was not an unusual sight to see strangers in the city wandering from house to house, carrying their baggage with them, seeking lodging for the night. At that time there were only three hotels conducted on the European plan. Lodging at the latter was from $2.50 to $3.50 a week.—New York Press.

Only an Amateur Now.

"No, sir," said the man who had been asked for alms; "I can give you nothing. You are a professional beggar, aren't you?" "Used to think so," replied the beggar, as he sadly pulled two cents and a collar button from his pocket, "but I have come to the conclusion that I am only an amateur."

Classified.

"She is a clergyman's daughter, you said, didn't you?" inquired a young man of a friend who had introduced him.

One Request.

Medium—Is there any question you would like to ask your first wife? Sitter—Yes, I would like to ask her to give my second wife her recipe for misbehavior.—Kansas City Journal.

His Knitting Work.

Aunt Alvira Fifer was what her neighbors called a "regular driver." Possessed of untiring energy and un-failing strength herself, she made little allowance for idleness on the part of any one, and she declared that she could "put up with a mean man easier than with a lazy one."

Aunt Alvira's husband, Uncle Ethan, was a small, wizened, weak looking man, whom Aunt Alvira declared to be "mighty wiry, if he did look so spindlin'."

"What an enormous quantity of wood you have!" he said to Aunt Fifer. "Yes, there is considerable," she replied. "I calculate on sellin' most o' it in the fall."

"Who cut it?" "Oh, Ethan did it as sort o' knittin' work. I think it's a good thing for a man to have some kind o' knittin' work to do when he's restin', and that wood pile has been Ethan's knittin' work."—Youth's Companion.

George I. and the Stage.

George I. was a lover of the stage and, as his predecessors had done, caused his "servants" to play before him at court. In 1718 his majesty ordered the great hall of Hampton Court to be converted for the time into a theater. There, under the direction of Steele, whose political services had been poorly recompensed by granting him some theatrical privileges, seven performances were given. Among the plays were "Hamlet," "Sir Courtly Nice," "The Constant Couple," "Love For Money," "Volpone" and "Rule a Wife and Have a Wife." Among the players were Colley Cibber, Plinkethman, Johnson, Thurmond, Booth, Mills, Mrs. Porter and Mrs. Younger. In former times the fee paid by the sovereign to his servants for a play acted at Whitehall had been £20. For these plays at Hampton Court King George, besides paying the actors their ordinary day's wage and traveling expenses, gave £350 and added £200 for the managers. The players were required to act at any time upon receiving a day's notice.

The Modest Scot.

Love of country is so fine a virtue that it seems difficult to carry it to excess. A resident of a small village in the north of Scotland paid a business visit to London the other day. He happened to call on a merchant who unknown to him had once made a stay in his native place. In the course of conversation the visitor made use of an expression that led the other to exclaim, "Surely you come from Glen McLuskie?" The assertion, however, was denied. Presently, to the merchant's surprise, another Glen McLuskie expression was heard. "My dear Mr. MacTavish, I feel convinced that you are a Glen McLuskie man after all," insisted the merchant.

"Weel," returned the other, "I'll no deny it any longer." "Then why didn't you say so at first?" demanded the Englishman. "Weel," was the calm response, "I didna like to boast o' it in London."—London Chronicle.

Her Souvenir.

"Why did you hurry so?" he asked her when he had finally caught up with her at the foot of the stairs of the cafe. "Do you remember how the waiter prepared to put a clean tablecloth on our table for fresh guests," she asked, "before we got through listening to the music?"

"Yes," said he. "Well, then, here," she said and showed him a large white tablecloth that had been hidden under her coat. "This is it. He laid it on the window sill. Serves him right."

He gazed upon it in amazement. "Why didn't you let me know," he queried, "and I might have taken the table and walked out with that?"—New York Press.

Halcyon Days.

The term "halcyon days" is derived from a pretty little fable of the Sicilians, who believed that during the seven days preceding and following the winter solstice, Dec. 21, the halcyon or kingfisher floated on the water in a nest in which her young were deposited and that during this time of her brooding the seas were calm. Our Indian summer corresponds to the halcyon of the Sicilians.—New York Telegram.

The Hidden Part.

"Oh, mamma," exclaimed four-year-old Flossie as she observed the moon in its second quarter, "come and look at the moon. Half of it is pushed into the sky, and the other half is sticking out."

Witty Dolly.

He—I say, Dolly, may I take your photograph? You look so pretty that I feel I could eat you. She—Oh, I see, that's why you want me on a plate, eh?

Precaution is better than repentance.—Greek Proverb.

The Dream of the Key.

Some small article had been lost—I forget now what; let us say a key—belonging to one of two sisters who were traveling together. It could nowhere be found. But one night one of the sisters dreamed that she saw the key in the pocket of her traveling bag. She told this dream on waking to the other. "And have you looked in the pocket?" the sister asked. "No, I have not," said she, "for the very good reason that there is no pocket in my traveling bag." "Well," said the other, "there is a pocket in the chance." And there the key was found. The inference is that the dreamer had seen with the eye of sense, though not with the eye of observation, the key put into the pocket. Even when the key was so found she had no recollection of seeing it placed there, but the brain had unconsciously recorded the sensation. In course of sleep it had stumbled on that record, and by good luck the sleeper on awaking chanced to remember the mental operation that had taken place during sleep. It is a singular and almost alarming reflection that our brains are stored with countless records of which we know nothing nor ever shall know unless the association of ideas or some peculiar mental state brings them to our notice.—Westminster Gazette.

There are many names of places in England that puzzle the stranger. Hapsburgh, in Norfolk, for instance, is pronounced Hazebo, Abergheny, and simply drops a syllable and becomes Abergheny, and it is alleged that St. Neots sounds more like Snoots than anything else. Cirencester seems to vary from Sister to Sizer. In Suffolk Waldringfield is "Wunnerful" and Chelmsford is "Chimston" while in the adjoining county of Norfolk Hunstanton is "Hunston" and in the west country Badgeworthy is "Badgery" and Cornwood "Kernood." Hunting-doushire claims the purest English but they call Papworth "Tarpnor." And not far away is another village of beauty. The motorist turned upon a rough road and asked the intelligent laborer where it would take him "That road," said the honest country man, wiping his brow, "will take you to 'Eli, sir.' The courageous motorist went on and found Elsworth, which is pronounced "Eliet."—Manchester Guardian.

Queer Pronunciations.

Don'ts. Don't attempt to punish all your enemies at once. You can't do a large business with a small capital. Don't say "I told you so." Two to one you never said a word about it. Don't worry about another man's business. A little selfishness is sometimes commendable. Don't imagine that you can correct all the evils in the world. A grain of sand is not prominent in a desert. Don't mourn over fancied grievances. Bide your time, and real sorrow will come. Don't throw dust in your teacher's eyes. It will only injure the pupil. Don't worry about the ice crop. Keep cool and you will have enough. Don't borrow a coach to please your wife. Better make her a little sulky. Don't imagine that every thing is weakening. Butter is strong in this market. Don't publish your acts of charity. The Lord will keep the account straight. Don't color meerschaum for a living. It is simply dyeing by inches.—Mark Twain.

Tired of Being In Print.

"Mr. Smithers," said his wife, "I remember rightly you have often said that you disliked to see a woman constantly getting herself into print?" "I do," said Smithers positively. "You considered it unwomanly and indelicate, I believe?" "Very."

"And you don't see how any man could allow his wife to do anything of the kind?" "Yes, I think so now."

"Well, Mr. Smithers, in view of all the facts in the case I feel justified in asking for a new silk dress."

"Yes, for the last eight years I have had nothing better than fourpenny calico, and I want something better. I'm tired of getting into print."—London Tit-Bits.

Standing Up For Him.

"Miriam, isn't that young Ferguson coming to our house pretty often now?" "I suppose he is, mamma."

"Do you know anything about him? What is he worth, for instance?" "Well, he's worth any dozen of the ordinary young men of my acquaintance."

All the Same.

The "horny handed" calls what he lives on "pay," the skilled mechanic "wages," the city clerk "salary," the banker "income," a landowner "rent roll," a lawyer "fees," a burglar "swag," but it all comes to the same in the end.—London Scraps.

In Doubt.

"Did you ever have appendicitis?" said the insurance man. "Well," answered the skeptic, "I was operated on. But I never felt sure whether it was a case of appendicitis or a case of professional curiosity."—Washington Star.

A Conundrum.

When is a piece of wood like a monarch? When it is converted into a ruler.

No weather is ill if the wind be still.—Spanish Proverb.
