

Editorial Snap Shots.

That was a right and proper protest Senator Bourne made to Captain McIndoe's report.

Most visitors who came to the county this summer were highly pleased with Tillamook, especially Tillamook City, and they predict a great future for this section of Oregon whenever the railroad is finished.

At this season of the year there is more danger of fire sweeping through the timber, through the country, and through the city than any other time of the year, therefore the greatest precautions should be taken to prevent the fire from getting started.

The Barnard condemnation suit tried this week was another case where a client, instead of receiving good advice from his attorney, obtained exceedingly poor advice. There are too many attorneys who drag their clients into court. But then, probably, that is the only way that they can "soak" their clients.

By way of retaliation from the editors, wouldn't it be ungentlemanly, uncharitable and unchristian of them to make a public announcement that the "Skeleton head evangelist had left the city." One has just as much right to use that expression as the other. But it is wrong to do so.

Tillamook County has purchased a rock crusher and will spend $10,000 for the betterment of the public highway.—Polk County Observer.

How things do get mixed up. We would like to inform the Observer that Tillamook county has spent over $10,000 on modern road equipment and is spending $90,000 a year building good roads and bridges.

My! My! My! What a time the "knockers" are having—complaining and fault finding—and the members of the county court appear to be coming in for a large share of the "knocking," since they could make no impression "knocking" the co-operative creamery associations and the Argo. What a blessing it would be if they could get into the boozing habit.

Tillamook Opera House! What a misnomer. Wouldn't it be more appropriate to call it Tillamook City's Cow Barn, for there are many barns in the county which are more comfortable and kept in better shape than what is commonly called the opera house? The city is entitled to a modern, comfortable opera house, and it is safe to say that one will be built before long.

We would like to ask the mayor, city council and city marshal a question. It is this: Can anything be done to prohibit the habit of placing chairs on the sidewalk which occupied by loungers who chew and spit on the sidewalks, which not only cause obstructions on the public side walks, but the filth caused by expectorating is often disgusting, especially to ladies whose dresses may come in contact with the well—most people know what it is like. Why allow this to go on?

So it seems that some of the attorneys say that they can knock out the Port of Tillamook election, as they claim that it was illegal. Well, what if someone was foolish enough to bring suit another petition could be circulated and another election could be immediately called. So what's the good? As to whether the law is constitutional, there is a case now pending in the supreme court from Coos County, the lower court having given a favorable decision as to the law being constitutional.

The beauty medicine doctor has gone and it seems that she "switched" a good many dollars out of the fair sex, whom she worked to a nicety. Women who use dope, paint and powders on their faces soon become homely-looking creatures, anyway. But what about those who consented to have their hair cut off—to adorn the heads of other women. Men are not the only suckers, for the women—heaven bless them—bit awfully hard at the beauty dope unbeknown to their husbands. But—hush!

If there is any criterion to go on in the verdicts rendered by the juries in the condemnation suits, then the people of Tillamook county have shown that they are willing to give the railroad company a square deal. This is right and proper, for there is no sense in trying to hold up the railroad for ridiculously large and exorbitant amounts for rights of way. The railroad company should offer fair amounts for damages, which they have done, the verdicts of the juries proving this, in fact, in a number of cases the railroad company paid owners of property more for rights of way than they would have received had they gone into court.

The P. R. & N. Co. will ask for a franchise at the city council meeting on Monday evening to lay a track along Water street. The building of a spur from the depot to the water front in this city was a matter which was recommended by the railroad committee, and which the railroad company agreed to do as soon as this end of the main line was finished, but it was stipulated that the company should have a free right of way. The company is now ready to build the spur and is wanting a franchise to use Water street for its track. The rights of way from property owners along the slough have not been obtained, and should any trouble arise in adjusting the damages, condemnation suits will be commenced at once. To say nothing of the great advantage a spur would be to manufacturers along the water front, it would also be an advantage to the business men to have their freight unloaded in the heart of the city, thus saving the long haul from the depot.

Death has claimed Mrs. Gertrude M. Hare, wife of Assessor A. M. Hare, who, after many long years of suffering, fell a victim of that dread disease—consumption. Those who were acquainted with the deceased lady had a tender love and sympathy for her in her long years of suffering, which she bore with patience and great fortitude. She was a good woman, and a good wife and mother, and loving hearts and willing hands ministered to her wants which, in a measure, helped to alleviate her sufferings. A person who enjoys robust health can hardly imagine what it is to be stricken down with consumption and having to suffer for eighteen years with that dread and incurable disease. Yet it is hard to part with loved ones. The bereaved husband and relatives did their part well through these many years of cheer and comfort for the sufferer, and the tender heartfelt sympathy for them is general all over the county.

Because the editor of the Herald fell into a mare's nest and made a fool of himself over the Shelton warrant there is no occasion for the editor of the Leaflet to make a jackass of himself also publishing false and libelous matter about county officials. One fool editor in the county is enough, anyway. It appears to us that the Herald and Leaflet have laid themselves liable to both criminal and civil libel. No, Bro. Turner, the Headlight does not go off half-cooked or go on a wild goose chase on every little imaginary report or street gossip. Ascertaining the facts, and knowing that the county court had only ordered a warrant drawn for work well performed and for value received, the editor is not in the habit of making a jackass of himself in writing sensational articles bristling with falsehood from top to bottom. Had the Headlight done so, Bro. Turner, the county court would now have the horse laugh on three, instead of two, jackass editors. Hey, haw! Hey, haw!

So Captain McIndoe has turned down the bar improvements, while a few years ago Captain Harts, after making a personal investigation of the resources of county, recommended the improvement. Of the two government engineers, which is right? The one that the resources of the country would justify the expenditure, or the other, that the present commerce does not justify the expenditure of so large amount? What, then, can or should be done to overcome the turning down of the bar improvement, for we do not believe in quitting or laying down? Probably the most effectual way is for the timber owners to get busy and obtain the co-operation of the congressmen of some of the Eastern or Middle States, where the timber owners reside. A little leverage in that direction would have wonderful power in overriding the old stereotype report, that the present commerce does not justify the expenditure. How, in the name of common sense, can any section of country that is bottled up increase its commerce? It is the resources of a country that should be considered, not the commerce.

The editor is beginning to think that he is a pretty bad kind of an individual. The gamblers a few years ago threatened him because he exposed how they were robbing poor deluded men and boys at the twenty-one games in the robbers' dens, the saloon men accuse him of putting them out of business and carrying the county three times for local option and that it was that darned Baker who made the county dry, the bunco men and the political grafter and small fry politician office seeker hate him, the blind pigs have no love for him, the lawbreakers detest him, the untrifled democrats think him a hard, tough case in a county political campaign or fight, and now the ministry from the rest room make a public denunciation that he is a "skeleton head." Putting all these things together we are bound to admit and even confess that the editor must be a pretty bad man and tough character—this being through whose goggles one looks at him. Now what are we to do and where are we to go for comfort and friendship? If we go to the devil the old adage will come true, "Pull devil, pull Baker," and then we would be accused by being either a pimp or a pup of Old Nick. However, little incidents like these are only passing events to an editor. We are still on deck and on top of the class of individuals we have mentioned, and have the ear and the attention of the people of the county, even if we are such a bad man.

Why Druggists Recommend Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. Mr. Frank C. Hanrahan, a prominent druggist of Portsmouth, Va., says: "For the past six years I have sold and recommended Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. It is a great remedy and one of the best patent medicines on the market. I handle some others for the same purposes that pay me a larger profit, but this remedy is so sure to effect a cure, and my customers so certain to appreciate my recommending it to him, that I give it the preference." Commissioner G. W. Bodyfelt took up the matter of the false and libelous articles which have been published about the county warrant issued to Carl Shelton with County Judge Goodspeed and Commissioner Alley on Tuesday, and after explaining the facts they were satisfied that the traducers who published such untruthful statements had simply fallen into a mare's nest. It is easily explained and these are the facts: Supervisor Imiah told Orley Kellow, who was acting in the capacity of deputy supervisor of district No. 6, when he made out Carl Shelton's time for work on the road to include the time for the team he had been driving, which the supervisor asked in his report to the county court. The usual procedure with road supervisors who have teams working on the road is to make separate items, which was not done in the above instance. Since writing the above we have received a letter from Orley Kellow giving a correct and truthful statement of the whole proceedings.

Tillamook Jottings. Fire completely destroyed the farm house on Sam Down's place at Fairview on Wednesday, which was occupied by Jas. Woodward. The fire originated in the room and a call for help was sent to the city, when a number of persons start out to fight fire. Eugene Jenkins, accompanied by Dr. Morris and Walter Baker, started in the auto and made quick time, reaching the scene of the fire in three minutes. Others started from the city as quickly as possible. Nearly all the furniture was removed from the house, but as the fire soon spread the whole house was in flames, completely destroying it. Some anxiety was caused by fear that burning embers would light on Henry Kunze's house and barn and set them on fire, but, fortunately, there was no wind, which saved the fire from spreading. The house cost about $1000 to build some years ago and was insured for $500 and $100 for some furniture Down's had stored there. Woodward's loss was about $200.

We regret to announce the death of Mrs. Gertrude M. Hare, wife of Assessor A. M. Hare, which occurred at her home on the Wilson river, north of this city, on Wednesday, Aug. 26th. The deceased for about 18 years had been afflicted with consumption, which was the cause of her death last week, after many years of patient suffering. Deceased was born on June 17th, 1863, in Niagara county, N. Y., and went to Michigan when she was nine years of age. She was married to A. M. Hare on August 23rd, 1888, and came to Tillamook county the same month, locating with her husband at Bay City, where they resided until her husband was elected county assessor, when they moved to this city and where they resided until they moved to the Wilson river. She leaves a husband, A. M. Hare, two children, Marion and C. L. Brown, of Michigan, and one sister, Mrs. J. H. Johnson, of Tillamook City. The remains were laid to rest on Saturday in the Oddfellows' cemetery, a large number of friends attending the funeral to show their last token of respect to the deceased.

Notice. Notice is hereby given that Mr. W. H. Cooper will, until Sept. 4th, 1909, at noon, receive bids for the purchase of the tabernacle, in which the union revival services were held. The right to reject any and all bids is reserved.

CIRCUIT COURT.

Burroughs Gets Three Years—Only $350 for Barnard.

A grand jury was drawn, with Gust Nelson, John Reese, E. W. Stanley, W. J. Plank, George P. Witt, W. S. Hays, and Wm. Maxwell as jurors, and the court appointed Gust Nelson foreman. The only indictment was that against A. E. Burroughs.

A. E. Burroughs, who broke into the Cloverdale Mercantile Store, was indicted by a grand jury which was drawn on Monday. He was arraigned the next day by Deputy Prosecuting Attorney W. H. Cooper before Judge Bronaugh. He pleaded guilty, and the deputy district attorney relating the nature of the burglary and in what manner the prisoner entered the premises, the judge sentenced him to serve three years in the penitentiary, where he was taken Wednesday.

The only condemnation suit that was fought at the adjourned term of the circuit court, over which Judge Bronaugh, of Portland, presided, was that of the Pacific Railway & Navigation Company against J. L. Barnard, involving the right of way across some mud flats at Nehalem belonging to the defendant. Prolonging tactics were resorted to by Attorney Adams, who represented the defendant, when the case was called. The attorney claimed that his client was not prepared to have the case tried, that it was a special term, and the case could not be called at that time, and that the judge had no jurisdiction to preside on the bench in a judicial district in which he was not elected. Attorney McCannan ably defended the railway company, and it did not take him long to knock the props from under Attorney Adams' contentions. Judge Bronaugh having overruled the different motions, the case went to trial. Barnard claimed $20,000 damages, and testified that the land was worth $16,000 and the railroad would damage it $4,000, as he wanted it for a mill site. A large number of witnesses were called by the railroad company, and when it came to testifying as to the value of the land, they all seemed to think that it had no value, but if it did have any value it was because of the railroad going through it. No evidence was given by these witnesses to enlighten the jury as to the worth of the damages. The jury brought in a verdict giving defendant $350 damages, which was the amount the company had agreed to settle for, but had previously offered $500, which was refused. The costs in the case will fall upon defendant, and after paying this and his attorney's fee and the cost of coming to Tillamook to fight the case, there will not be much left of the amount Barnard was awarded for damages.

Pacific Railway & Navigation Co. vs. Kenneth W. Kinney and Wm. S. Kinney, which was a condemnation suit and the jury allowed $40 damages which was a formal procedure.

Elisabeth Hasenbach, et al vs. Elisabeth Westenberg. Order to publish summons, as some of the parties were in Germany.

W. G. Dwight vs. W. G. Harris, on motion of plaintiff case dismissed.

W. G. Dwight vs. L. W. Brown. Order of default and judgment in foreclosure of tax lien.

W. G. Dwight vs. Theodore Kingsley. Judgment in foreclosure of tax lien and order of sale.

In the suits by the Pacific Railway & Navigation Co. against Clyde Miller, Samuel Elmore and Ella Himple, these were settled out of court.

May Start work in Tillamook on the United Railways

President Greenough, of Missoula, Mont., will be in Portland in the near future and at that time the matter of pushing the work from both ends will be considered as soon as the survey from Portland to Tillamook is made. The company is now working several hundred men and teams building toward Forest Grove and will commence work on a 3700 foot tunnel very soon. If Mr. Greenough's report is favorable, work will be begun building out of Tillamook eastward toward Forest Grove this season.

It is estimated by the Harriman engineers that the Pacific Railway & Navigation company's steam line into Tillamook will be running by next June. It will be impossible for the United Railways to be in operation that soon but it is said the survey which they are planning to build upon gives a much shorter route to Tillamook than that of the Harriman line, and will be able to cover the beach resorts more thoroughly than the steam road will be able to do.—Forest Grove Times.

More Lies Nailed.

[TO THE EDITOR TILLAMOOK HEADLIGHT.]

DEAR SIR,—As the editor of the Herald has felt called upon to place myself in unenviable light before the people as regards my hiring and paying off men for county road work in District No. 6, and also states in his last issue that it is up to me to explain, I beg a little of your space to inform him of the transactions which governed the matter that has given him so much concern and which he could have ascertained for himself if he had continued his search as zealously as he had so far done.

In the first place, I put the bill for the work which my team did in with the bill of Carl Shelton, as Supervisor Imiah told me not to put the bill for my team's work in my own name, but to put the bill for the team's work in the bill of that of some man working for me. I put the bill for my team's work in with that of Carl Shelton but could just as well have put it in with some other man's bill so far as making any difference in the matter was concerned. Carl Shelton told me to get his county warrant, and I paid him in cash the portion of the bill due him for his work, which was $22.50. He thought there was $5 more due him, but that was due to his understanding that he got in a full day whether he went to work at 8 o'clock or 9 o'clock, but as I only had all the men for the number of hours that he put in, his time was somewhat less than he had expected. I sent for his county warrant and had it cashed, as I had already paid him his share of the warrant.

So far as I am able to learn it has become customary for people to have someone get their warrant and cash it for them. If the editor of the Herald does not think so, I believe, if he will just continue his zealous search he will become convinced that such is the case. This is due to a measure to the inconvenience that would be caused if everyone had to go to the county seat and get their warrants. It is also the fact that even if the county warrants were mailed to the owners they would meet with great difficulty in getting them cashed. So, to overcome this inconvenience, it is a common occurrence for one party to tell another to get their county warrant and get it cashed. This being the case, it could hardly be expected that I would think I was doing a wrong in getting Carl Shelton's warrant and giving him the cash due him out of it after deducting the amount due for the team.

I am not an expert accountant nor am I an expert judge as to how the affairs of the county should be run, but it seems to me that when the Herald editor takes the liberty of placing me before the public as having committed an act worthy of the consideration of the grand jury, in fact of the fact that that act is one that has been in common practice and sanctioned by the county officials who may have had the matter to deal with, he is doing me a gross injustice. The editor of the Herald may be ignorant of the common practices in the conduct of county affairs, owing to having cut his zealous search so short. It may be that I am ignorant as to the proper manner in which to handle checks and county warrants. But it would seem to me that ignorance in my case is just as justifiable as in that of his.

As to my being a non-lawyer if a county official, I must ask what is in that fact to make me ineligible to do county road work? I have paid taxes in the county for 18 years and do not understand that because I have a relative who is a county official my rights as a citizen can be taken from me.

I might call the Herald editor's attention to the paragraph in his article in which he says that I sent a letter asking that the warrants for Dave McKinley, Carl Shelton, Ward Sappington and myself be sent me. If I were doing anything that was not allowed by common practice and wished to do crooked work it is quite probable that I would have sent for Carl Shelton's warrant alone, not for all those who were working for me. The other parties for whom I obtained warrants have not seen fit to make any kick or objection to my doing so.

If the editor of the Herald wishes to be just and fair, a role which he has pretended to assume, he will acknowledge publicly in his paper that he has done me a very great injustice. I am doing my road work in a straight forward manner and more so than that in which he is conducting a paper, judging by his article in which he attempts to besmirch my character with out seeking the whole truth.

To correct another error made by the editor of the Herald in which he has seen fit to refer to and say that I am making a four mile change road to benefit my place, I beg to inform him that the change will only be a distance of one-half mile of road and will be on the west hill on the road.

It would seem to me that the editor of the Herald would in time learn that no genuine reforms can be made by falsifying the true condition of affairs.

A Narrow Escape

Edgar N. Bayless, a merchant of Robinsonville, Del., wrote: "About two years ago I was thin and sick, and coughed all the time and if I did not have consumption, it was near to it. I commenced using Foley's Honey and Tar, and it stopped my cough, and I am now entirely well, and have gained twenty-eight pounds, all due to the good results from taking Foley's Honey and Tar." J. S. Lamar, Tillamook; Hawk & Miller, Bay City.

Many people delude themselves by saying "It will wear away," when they notice symptoms of kidney and bladder trouble. This is a mistake. Take Foley's Kidney Remedy, and it cures backache, rheumatism, kidney and bladder trouble, and makes kidney and bladder weakness and urinary trouble disappear. J. S. Lamar, Tillamook; Hawk & Miller, Bay City.
