Those who do not believe that prosperity is coming are the ones who do not want it to come.

New York State has a total of $800,000,000 in her savings banks and is indifferent to the advent of rainy days or the wolf at the door.

Governor Hughes acts like a man who does not care whether he ever reaches the White House or not, while he his governor he proposes to be governor.

The New York race-track gamblers are learning to their sorrow that it does not pay to violate the law under an administration like that of Gov. Hughes.

The high prices which aviators are commanding these days are such as chauffeurs were commanding not so very long ago, relatively speaking. Demand exceeds supply at present, but in spite of the dangers, supply will equal or exceed demand ere long.

It has come at last. Smoking by men is to be allowed in a church at Dayton, Ohio. Efforts to popularize the church in these days are advancing so rapidly that the church may soon become the most formidable competitor of the club as a place to go to have a good time.

Commander Peary's deliberateness in coming down may mean either that he is preparing for a fight to the death or that he is afraid of having to face one. In either event, there is a growing public anxiety to have the polar dispute settled and out of the way before Thanksgiving. For just beyond that comes Congress again.

If the editor isn't tearing his shirt to boost your interests—take stock with yourself and find whether he is under obligations to you. Perhaps you have given him no occasion to endorse over your interests. Perhaps you are a dead one—a non advertiser—just walking around to save funeral expenses, or sort of barnacle, a hanger on, letting your neighbor boost the town by showing the public through the press that the town is up-to-date. But there is some consolation, some day you will die in reality.—The Rainer Review.

A Farce of Justice.

The Oregonian.
 A fair sample of the way in which technicality plays battledore and shuttlecock with justice in the courts of Oregon, is shown in the notorious Abe Hembree case. As long ago as December 28, 1905, this man, Hembree, was arrested in Tillamook County, charged with the murder of his wife and daughter, the latter 18 years old, and of the attempt to conceal the crime by burning the bodies in the shack which was their home and in which the murder was committed. The case had many revolting features. The poverty of the family was extreme, and a cause for the murder that was not brought out in evidence was darkly hinted. The man was duly indicted for murder of the daughter and the case was brought to trial in Tillamook, resulting in a verdict of manslaughter. Hembree was committed to the penitentiary, where he served one year of an indeterminate sentence. He was paroled last year by Governor Chamberlin and released. Soon afterward, however, he was rearrested, this time on a charge of murdering his wife. Tried this time in Dallas, Polk County, on charge of venue, he was convicted of murder in the first degree and sentenced to be executed as provided by law.

Again technicality has come to his rescue and the case has been remanded for yet another trial. In the interval covered between the death of these two women and the latest action of the Supreme Court, Hembree has either been grossly wronged by the continual stress which he has been under, or justice has been grossly violated in that he has gone all these years unchanged.

There has been absolutely no ground, either in justice or expediency, for the way in which the case has been handled. It would make of the courts, including the Supreme Court of the state, a laughing stock, except that the spectacle presented in dealing with it has been too humiliating to provoke or permit derision. It has involved large expenses to the taxpayers of Tillamook County, many of whom, at least, are constrained by well-known facts to believe the man guilty.

If this man killed his wife and daughter as charged, it was murder most foul. Parole! Think of the glaring injustice and menace to the community to allow a man convicted on so grave a charge and under sentence for manslaughter to go free. And now, after a second trial and conviction of the crime of murder, to see the Supreme Court remand him to another trial on a far-fetched rendering of the law! No wonder that criminals come up before Oregon courts smilingly and with full assurance that they will in the end win out.

Highest Score for Cheese at the State Fair.

TO EDITOR OF TILLAMOOK HEADLIGHT, Nehalem, Ore., Sept. 27th, 1909.
 DEAR SIR,—I intended to send an exhibit of cheese to the Oregon State Fair, at Salem, this month and I wrote to Paul V. Maris to that effect, but I did not receive particulars as to entering it, shipping directions, etc., until Sept. 8th, and the Vosburg (our only means of transportation), had sailed the 6th, so under the circumstances it was impossible to ship an exhibit, so I sent a sample by mail. It was scored, but was not eligible to entry. I am enclosing the letter which I received from Paul V. Maris, which I thought I might get you to print, and explain the reason I did not send an exhibit eligible to entry, in the next Headlight.

Yours truly,
 HUGH BARBER.

Portland, Ore., Sept. 22, 1909.
 Mr. Hugh Barber, Nehalem, Ore.

DEAR SIR,—Replying to yours of Sept. 10th, I beg to state that your entry on cheese did not comply with the rules laid down by the catalogue in regard to amount, the rules calling for not less than 20 lbs., and hence the cheese was not placed on competition for prize money and I am enclosing herewith the $1.00 entrance fee.

I requested the judge to score your cheese, however, and this he consented to do. From the result it is indeed unfortunate that you were unable to have a legal entry, as you received a higher score than any of the competing entries. Your score was as follows: Flavor, 37 out of 40; body, 30 out of 30; salt, 10 out of 10; color, 10 out of 10; finish, 10 out of 10. The judge pronounced it the best cheese scored. The highest score given aside from this was 95 per cent.

Trusting that you will have an exhibit on hand next year that will be eligible to entry, I am,

Very respectfully yours,
 PAUL V. MARIS.

TRADE AT HOME.

Some Good Advice for Tillamook People.

In the editorial entitled "Keep the Money at Home," Editor Geo. Putnam of the Medford Tribune presents some powerful arguments in favor of the "Trade at Home" movement, which is rapidly gaining ground in all of the interior cities and towns of the Northwest. By merely changing the name of the town, Editor Putnam's appeal to home loyalty will apply to Tillamook or any community in Oregon. It is worthy of republication in every country newspaper in the State. He says:

"Every resident of Medford should make it a point to buy all supplies in the city, to patronize local merchants and home industries, to keep the money in Medford.

"Practically everything needed in the line of merchandise can be secured in Medford. The local stores are equal to those in the larger cities and what is not in stock will be secured on short notice.

"Portland and San Francisco merchants pay no taxes and no rent here, buy no supplies here, support no pay-rolls here. Money spent with them is lost to circulation here. They never reinvest what they receive.

"People who buy clothes, furniture, or other necessities out of their home cities are helping detract from its prosperity. Those who spend their money at home help build up local institutions, support population and in other ways create prosperity. Everyone who makes it a point to spend money in Medford helps not only the business of the community but his own business as well.

"Everyone in a community is dependent upon the rest of the community, and as one prospers all prosper. There is no surer way to injure a town than by spending money outside of it that could be spent in it, for if your neighbor cannot make a living, he cannot buy from you and you cannot buy from others.

"To trade at home means greater trade for merchants who have invested their capital, energy and future in this city, and added prosperity for each individual no matter what his vocation may be. To a great many the benefits come in directly, of course, but none the less surely.

"Suppose that all the people of Medford sent to an outside point, say to a Portland mail order house, for all necessities and luxuries. They would supply be assisting in the upbuilding of the Rose City at the expense of their own.

"There is satisfaction in seeing what one is getting. You can do this when you buy from the local merchants. You can get satisfaction or your money back. It's different when you purchase abroad. Your money having been sent in advance—the mail order house takes no chances you have no reparation.

"Keep your money at home. If you must spend it at all, spend it with the home merchant. They are interested in improving the city and making it a more desirable place to live. The merchants of other towns are not. If you manage to save a portion of your earnings, invest it in the local banks. They are thoroughly reliable institutions. Your money will be perfectly safe and will be loaned out again on good security to assist in the development of Medford and its tributary districts, not some other far away portion of the country.

"A model city would be that in which every necessity of its inhabitants was manufactured. Everyone, absolutely everyone, would be prosperous and poverty a thing unknown. Of course present day conditions render such a city an impossibility, but you can buy everything needed from home merchants, and incidentally get your money's worth both in quality and quantity, and every bit of it counts. Your individual patronage may not amount to much, but many drops make a bucketful, and by keeping your small amount of money at home you can assist in filling that bucket.

"If you are a day laborer, the same applies. Doesn't prosperity, one of the direct results of buying at home, mean more work and better wages for you?

"Be a booster. The city of Medford has behind it a district teeming with wonderful resources. We need two things: Capital and people. The only way to get them is to advertise. We have to bring to their attention where the Rogue River valley is, what it is and what its resources are. Don't miss an opportunity to let your eastern friends learn about this district. Send them copies of this paper. Postage is cheap, and conscientious and truthful effort has been made to give a true account of things as they are, and future possibilities.

"Anyway, it is a great deal more pleasant to boost than to knock. One has more friends. One malignant knocker might offset the work of a dozen hard working boosters to his own disadvantage and theirs. It is not necessary to vary from the truth when talking or writing of the Rogue River valley. The bare truth is marvelous enough in itself."
