

A POOR JUMP.

In Game Room Being the Death of Isabeau, the Painter. Napoleon Bonaparte, as is well known, was in the habit of walking with his arms crossed upon his chest and his head slightly bent forward. Isabeau, the painter, was at Malmoussin, and he and some of the first consul's aide-de-camp were having a game of leaping on the lawn. Isabeau had already jumped over the heads of most of them when at the turning of a path he espied the last player, who, in the requisite position, seemed to be waiting for the ordeal. Isabeau pursued his course without looking, but took his right so badly as only to reach the other's shoulders, and both rolled over and over in the sand. To Isabeau's consternation, his supposed fellow player turned out to be Bonaparte, who got up, frowning at the month with anger, and drawing his sword, pointed upon the unfortunate artist. Isabeau, luckily for himself, better at running than at leaping, took to his heels and, jumping the ditches dividing the property from the highroad, got over the wall and never stopped until, breathless, he reached the gates of the Tuilleries. Isabeau, it was added, went immediately to Mrs. Bonaparte's apartments, and she, after having laughed at the misadventure, advised him to lie low for a little while.

THE ADAM'S APPLE.

An Important Organ That Helps to Protect the Brain. One of the most remarkable pieces of mechanism in the human system, a device which anticipated several of our modern contrivances, is the Adam's apple, which for ages physicians considered a sort of freak of nature without any material use in the human economy. But how differently this little device is considered today! If we had no Adam's apple there would have been more deaths from apoplexy and brain disorder than ever chronicled in history. Instead of being a useless organ this article serves as an important storage system to protect the brain. For instance, when we are excited or too animated the heart pumps the blood up to the brain a little too fast, and if it could not be stopped by some automatic device death or brain disease would follow. The Adam's apple is the blood storage cistern which intercepts the rapid flow and holds the surplus blood. Again, if the supply from the heart runs short and the brain is likely to suffer from an insufficient supply the storage cistern gives up its surplus of blood. Thus this organ acts automatically to check and increase the flow of the blood to the brain, protecting that organ from damage through our temporary excesses. — Pearson's Weekly.

Sedan and Bath Chairs. The sedan chair, so called from having been made at Sedan, in France, was introduced into England in the time of King Charles I. Often this chair was most ornate without and luxurious within, for an ancient poet speaks of one— Covered with velvet red, and studded with gold about your head. Some sedans were white and some blue. They were used with hilly seats. In the sedan chairs in all the glory of paint, powder and patches, the best and best of fashion of the eighteenth century were carried from west to east by two stout lackeys in breeches, as all people who love their clothes are aware, these chairs were still in use in the days of the Pickwick club. The sedan of the bath chair is "rough in mystery." We are told that it was much used by the inhalants of India, probably for the purpose of getting to and from the pump room. It was chiefly the use of the bath chair in England chiefly to invalids. — London News.

An English Election. According to the London Chronicle: "The amount of election expenses is that the candidate can never be sure what sort of a poke he is in a bying. The parliament may run its full term or it may come to an end after a few months. Even if it lasts the game may be definitely not worth the candle. The Hon. Stuart Grant Duff gives a pertinent little incident of the wearisome struggle over the coercion bill in 1832. "When things were at their darkest and deadliest Stuart Rendel heard a man as he rolled off his seat in the extremity of weariness say, 'And he think that I should have paid £200 for this!'"

Her Proof. "Don't think of it! One person in every three-seven in England is a pauper," John," she returned. "It isn't more than thirty-seven people in London last summer myself, and I was a pauper in the lot." — Washington Bits.

He Was Right. "I told me I would have to do so much meat," he laughed. "But when he sent in the bill he was right." — Washington Bits.

His Style. "I never takes his meals at a hotel, but like your meals served in a wagon? Dick (who patronizes a wagon) says—No. I generally patronize a cart." — Baltimore American.

The "Long" Sizzes.

The Sizzes family was long in person, long drawn out in speech and eternally long about doing things. Over miles of pine hills they were known as the "long" Sizzes. Miss Lydia, the eldest, went to a crossroads store to buy Christmas presents. In the course of a half hour she became interested in some blue and scarlet petticoats. "I'll take one of these petticoats," she said, slowly counting out the price. The busy proprietor wrapped up the parcel and handed it over with a polite "Something else?" "I'll take another petticoat." He did up a second bundle, took her carefully counted money and was turning to the next impatient customer. "I'll take another petticoat," came the slow drawl. This went on to the seventh time. The man, being up to his ears in work, ventured a question: "Buying for the neighborhood, Miss Lydia?" "I'm buying two apiece for my sisters." "How many sisters have you?" "Nine." — Youth's Companion.

Didn't Cut the Ace.

The greatest delight of Pat Sheedy, according to a friend of the famous gambler, was to "double cross" the crooked card sharks. "Sheedy once strolled into a tough gambling resort in the west where he was not known and stood watching the games," the friend relates. "One of the dealers was 'spelling' to several countrymen and had about convinced them to take a chance at his game. 'I'll bet you 2 to 1 that I can shuffle the deck and cut the ace of hearts the first time,' he announced. 'I'll take $50 of that if you'll let me shuffle the cards,' Pat said. 'The dealer agreed, and the money was staked. The countrymen also made small bets. 'Are you satisfied?' the dealer asked when the cards were shuffled. 'The proposition is that I am to cut the ace of hearts the first cut.' 'Every one agreed. And the dealer — he was a tough one — whipped out a big hunting knife and slashed the deck in two. But he didn't take the money. Sheedy had palmed the ace of hearts while shuffling the cards.'"

Our Safety Valves.

The invention of the safety valve for steam engines has saved thousands of lives and millions of dollars in property. It is an invention that stands prominently to the front in this age of mechanical progress. But nature supplied us each with a safety valve which for effectiveness works better than any made by man. If we did not have this safety valve we could not live twenty-four hours. This safety valve is the perspirative, or sweat, gland, and to make sure that we should not run short of the supply she has furnished the body with some two and a half millions of them. If our temperature rose 7 or 8 degrees we should die within a few hours, and yet we could not run, row, indulge in any athletic exercises or even walk safely any distance without increasing our temperature to the danger point. If we had no safety valve provided so ingeniously by nature.

Paddy's Cat.

An Irishman fresh from the "old sod" secured a job with a lumbering crew in the Minnesota woods. While sound asleep in his bunk one night a lynx slipped in at the open window, espied Paddy's brindle whiskers and promptly pounced on its supposed enemy. A terrific contest ensued, during which Paddy's clothing was reduced to rags, but ending happily when the brawny son of Erin secured a half nelson on the beast and heaved it bodily through the window. He was instantly surrounded by a score of excited and admiring woodsmen. After examining himself critically Paddy straightened up slowly and remarked with distinct emphasis: "Bedad, if I knew th' dom mon that owned that cat I'd be after rammin' me fist down th' throat av 'im—I wud tho't!" — Judge's Library.

The Tail of a Fish.

A fish's tail is its wings. Owing to the machinery of muscle set along its spine and to its cleaving form a trout or salmon can dart through the water at a tremendous pace, though its rapid flights, unlike the bird's, are not long ones. It is soon tired. The water is not so friendly to flight as the air. The stroke of the fish's tail is one of great power, and by means of it and the writhing, snake-like flexion of the body a high speed is reached. The strength behind this speed is shown in the way a fish or sea mammal out of the water will raise its tail and strike the ground or boat.

Roundabout Dribery.

At one old time British election a candidate won by means of an umbrella. Sheer absence of mind caused him to leave the camp behind at every house at which he called to cautions, and of course when it was returned by the voter a sovereign was only a suitable reward for honesty.

Impatience.

"Impatience," said Uncle Eben, "is generally de fevlin' you has when you wants somebody else to bury an' make up fob de time you's been wastin'." — Washington Star.

Just the Other Way.

"Did you ever hear Godly say anything particular about me?" "No. He never was very particular what he said about you."

To pity distress is but b man; to relieve it is godlike. — Mena.

A Useful Reminder.

An M. P. who in his magisterial capacity periodically visited a private lunatic asylum told the story of a man of some position in the legal world who went to see a patient who had occasional lapses into sanity. The patient made a great impression on his visitor as a well informed, healthy minded gentleman and was assured that his case should be inquired into. "On leaving, the grateful patient courteously conducted his morning caller to the front door, affectionately pressing his hand at parting. "You won't forget what I've told you," he pleaded, with tears in his voice. "No," responded the visitor, turning round to descend the rather long flight of steps. "I don't think you will," said the patient dreamily, "but lest you should you know?" And, lifting up his foot, he gave the unsuspecting, defenseless visitor a kick behind that sent him spinning down the stairway and sprawling on the gravel. — Pearson's Weekly.

A Bird's White Feathers.

The occurrence of white feathers in a bird's plumage is very common. It is, of course, due to lack of coloring matter and is liable to appear in both young and old birds. I have known of several old birds to exhibit this peculiarity (mostly in the wing feathers, however), and it may be due to imperfect nutrition and circulation as the bird ages. I have also noticed it in young birds in a number of instances. The phenomenon thus cannot be said to occur simply as a result of old age, but is rather one of those slight changes in the bird's system the causes of which we do not know. There is this much more to be said, however—when a young bird starts out with a few white feathers they are usually retained throughout life, molting each time in a similar manner. Old birds may exhibit this loss of coloring at any time. — St. Nicholas.

Patrick Henry's Fes.

It is said of Patrick Henry that during his practice of law in the Virginia courts and when he was familiarly addressed as "governor" a man who had been arrested for stealing a hog and who was out on bail went to the governor to have him defend him. "The governor said, 'Did you walk away with that shoat?' " "I don't like to say." "Out with it." "Yes, sir." "Have you got the carcass?" "Yes, sir." "You go home, you wretch, cut the pig lengthwise in half and hang as much of it in my smokehouse as you keep in yours."

At court the governor said, "Your honor, this man has no more of that stolen shoat than I have."

The man was cleared. — National Monthly.

A Lincoln Story.

When Lincoln, a struggling lawyer, was doing circuit duty in Ohio he once visited a country town where the general storekeeper had the reputation of adulterating, even to the danger point, his cider. In the midst of a general condemnation of this storekeeper Lincoln rose one night from his seat by the hotel stove. "Come on, boys," he said. "And he led a party of a half dozen lawyers and judges to the general store. "Let me have a quart of cider," he said to the storekeeper. "Yes, sir," was the cordial reply. "And which grade, sir—the ripe, at 3 cents; the mellow, at 2, or the new, at 1?" "It doesn't matter which grade, mister," Lincoln drawled. "I only want to poison a dog."

The Inventor of the Match.

The first match was the product of the ingenuity of John Frederick Komerer, who early in the nineteenth century was imprisoned in the penitentiary at Hohenasperg, in Germany. He invented the lucifer match while in his gloomy dungeon. The German government forbade the manufacture of matches on the ground of public policy because some children playing with them had caused a fire. Komerer was ruined by Viennese competition when he was released from prison and died a pauper. Up to 1862 the Vienna manufacturers controlled the match business of the entire world.

A Way Out.

"I have six doctors, and they can't agree on what ails me. Three think it's one thing and three think it's another. What would you advise me to do. Discharge them all?" "No. Hire one more and give him the deciding vote." — Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Time's Changes.

"In ancient days," said the pedantic person, "the greatest triumph at the Olympian games was won by means of a four horse chariot." "And now," said the thoroughly indignant athlete, "some of 'em are content to win with a one horse referee." — Washington Star.

He Got What He Needed.

"Nine years ago it looked as if my time had come," says Mr. C. Farthing, of Mill Creek, Ind. Ter. "I was so run down that I lie hung in a very slender thread. It was then my druggist recommended Electric Bitters. I bought a bottle and I got what I needed—strength. I had one foot in the grave, but Electric Bitters put it back on the turf again and I've been well ever since." Sold under guarantee at Chas. I. Clough drug store. 50c.

Death Was On His Heels.

Jesse P. Morris, of Skippers, Va., had a close call in the spring of 1906. He says: "An attack of pneumonia left me so weak and with such a fearful cough that my friends declared consumption had me, and death was on my heels. Then I was persuaded to try Dr. King's New Discovery. It helped me immediately, and after taking two and a half bottles I was a well man again. I found out that New Discovery is the best remedy for coughs and lung disease in all the world." Sold under guarantee at Chas. I. Clough drug store. 50c and $1.00. Trial bottle free.

Best Treatment For Colds.

"Most ordinary colds will yield to the simplest treatment," says the Chicago Tribune, "moderate laxatives, hot foot baths, a free perspiration and an avoidance of exposure to cold and wet after treatment." While this treatment is simple, it requires considerable trouble, and the one adopting it must remain in doors for a day or two, or a fresh cold is sure to be contracted and in many instances pneumonia follows. Is it not better to pin your faith to an old reliable preparation like Chamberlain's Cough Remedy that is famous for its cures of colds and always be depended upon. For sale by Lamar's Drug Store.

I used two bottles of Foley's Kidney Remedy with good effect, and the third bottle put me on my feet and I resumed work as conductor on the Lexington Ky. Street Railway. It gave me more relief than any medicine I had ever used, and it will do all you claim in cases of rheumatism."
