

DAMES AND DAUGHTERS.

Jane Addams of Hull House is the first woman to be honored by election to membership in the Chicago Association of Commerce.

Miss Grumberg, a young woman lawyer of Paris, has announced her desire to become a magistrate. She calls on her opponents to cite any article of the code forbidding a woman to serve.

Miss Mary Agnes Cunningham is the first woman to be appointed a member of the school board of St. Paul, Minn. She has taught in the schools of St. Paul for twenty-five years and is the president of the Teachers' federation.

Potter Palmer has instituted a contest for a gold medal for the best article of the code forbidding a woman to serve. It makes no other award than that it may be awarded a prize or painting. Any subject treated, and there is no limit of time as to the execution of the article.

Ricke Kierschner, the prima donna of the Royal Opera at Berlin, tendered her resignation after an interrupted service of thirty years. She appeared for the last time in "Die Fledermaus" and to strains of a Strauss waltz danced goodby to a great audience.

Margaret Selenka, widow of the late scholar Dr. Emil Selenka, has been chosen to lead a scientific expedition which will soon start for the island of Java. The expedition is backed by the Dutch government and the Berlin Academy of Science. Its object is to continue the researches of Dr. Dubois.

The latest mountain railway projected in Switzerland is to connect Disentis with Andermatt, Furka and Gletsch and will have branches to Meltingen and Brigas.

The Fairies in Ireland.

There are many sorts of fairies in Ireland. The trooping clans, the friendliest, wear green jackets, and the solitary fairies wear red. According to McAnally, a peasant once witnessed a battle between them, and when the trooping fairies began to win he was so overjoyed "to see the green above the red" that he gave a loud hurrah. Immediately all vanished from view, and he found himself thrown headlong in the ditch. In Mr. Peats' classification the weird but not unkindly merrows, or sea fairies, come next, then the fairy doctors and witches, who inhabit puddings and pots, bewitch butter, steal milk and the like; the banshees, not always harbingers of death; the leprechaun, or fairy shoemakers; "the only industrious persons among them," for they dance their shoes away in a single night; the pookas, first cousins of the Scotch brownies, who for their sins are obliged to help the housewife with nightly elfin labors; the giants, the ghosts and the satanic race of demon cats, and last, the "kings, queens, princesses, earls and robbers."—Sarah H. Cleghorn in Atlantic.

Malay Weapons. The national Malay weapon, the creese, is said to have been invented by a Javanese monarch of the fourteenth century. Its varieties are said to exceed a hundred, and there are in Javanese no fewer than fifty names for them. It varies in size from the two foot wavy blade of Sulu down to a mere toothpick. But the peculiarity is that the weapon is never ground, but kept rough and sawlike in edge by scouring with lime juice or the juice of an urupe pineapple, sometimes mixed with arsenic, and it is on this account that creese wounds are so dangerous. Old specimens are so eaten away by this practice that the blade seems formed from a bunch of wires roughly welded up. Such creeses are highly valued, and some of the ancient ones, heirlooms of chiefs, with grotesquely carved and inlaid hilts and sheaths, are almost unpurchasable.

The Little Things That Tell. A south side mother was dressing for a tea the other afternoon when the front door bell rang. She instructed the maid that if the visitor appeared to be about to make a formal call to say she was not at home. But the mother had not counted on the five-year-old daughter playing in the front yard.

The maid, seeing a woman dressed as if for calling, obeyed instructions. "She is not at home," the maid said. "Why, she is, too, Minnie," came a sharp interruption from the child on the lawn. "I saw her lower the curtain just now."

"Perhaps she just came in," the maid responded weakly. "Oh see." The situation was solved by the fact that the visitor was the mother's sister, whom the maid did not know.—Kansas City Star.

The Antiquity of the Organ. The organ is the most magnificent and comprehensive of all musical instruments. While the pipes of Pan, aside from that mythical personage, indicate a very ancient use of pipes as a means of producing musical sounds, the "water organ of the ancients" furnishes to the student of organ history the first tangible clue regarding the remote evolution of the instrument. In the second century the magphira, an organ of ten pipes with a crude keyboard, is said to have existed, but accounts of this instrument are involved in much obscurity. It is accredited that an organ, the gift of Constantine, was in the possession of King Pepin of France in 757, but Adalbert, a monk, makes mention of an organ with "gilt pipes" as far back as the year 700.

Punning His Specialty. "So you have made up your mind to be a specialist—in what line?" was the question put to a struggling doctor by a friend.

"I don't know," was the answer. "I have been considering various advantages in different branches. A chiropractor can generally get a foothold, no matter how bad business is; a manicurist has usually something on hand, and an ear and eye specialist can often get a hearing when there is anything in sight. I haven't dwelt on the possibilities of throat or dental or hair experts because the two former always look down in the mouth and the latter may get but a bald living or be expected to dye for his patients!"

Siberian Camels. The native camels of Siberia are a source of constant wonder to travelers. On the Mongolian plateaus, for instance, the thermometer often registers a temperature of 40 degrees below zero, but the camels do not mind it at all, walking about as blithely as if the weather were as balmy as spring. On the other hand, the temperature on the Gold desert in summer is sometimes 140 degrees above zero, and the beasts mind that heat just as little as they do the extreme cold.

An Afterthought. Nervous and inexperienced host rising hurriedly at the conclusion of a song—Ladies and—gentlemen, before he started to—er—sing Mr. Haw-nall asked me to apologize for his—er—voice, but I—er—I omitted to do so—er—so I—er—apologize now.—London M. A. P.
