Tillamook City had a deserted appearance on the Fourth, for the excursion on the railroad to Garibaldi and the Life Saving Station on the beach attracted a great crowd from this city. The cars were literally packed on the first two trips down in the morning, carrying about a thousand passengers. It was an ideal day, and most everybody who could left town to enjoy a perfect day on the beach. Never before in the history of Garibaldi beach were there as many persons there at one time as were seen on Monday, and the crowd would have been much larger had the excursion on the railroad been decided upon earlier and the people in the country been advised. Everything went smoothly, with no mishaps, with the exception of one person falling off the train into the water at Bay City while it was at a stand still. All returned well pleased with the excursion and the beautiful day spent on the beach.
