

Editorial Snap Shots.

Vote her straight—we mean the Republican ticket—from top to bottom.

That short weight butter deal on the part of Kunze has been looked upon as a greasy transaction.

The snap shot man has not had much fun out of this election, for the reason that our Democratic friends did not have enough ginger left in them to put up a local ticket.

Bowerman! Bowerman!!! Bowerman!!! That's the man you ought to vote for for governor, for he was the choice of the people at the primary nominating election. All loyal, true blue Republicans, who are working for party success, are for Bowerman.

Republicans who took part in the primary election should support the ticket from top to bottom. Republicans who will not do this show conclusively that they will not abide by the result of the primary election if they cannot dictate who should be nominated.

If Henry Kunze could not resist the temptation to impose on his neighbors by selling short-weight butter, selling it at from 80c. to 90c. per roll, the highest price in the history of the country, could he be expected to frown upon the lobbyist with the long sack representing the special interests? That is the way voters size up a man running for office.

To Congressman Hawley belongs the honor of having the first rural mail route established in Tillamook county, for it was his influence at Washington which brought it about. We hope the congressman will be kept in his present position so that other parts of the county may participate in rural mail delivery. Let the whole farming community of the county show their appreciation next Tuesday by voting for Mr. Hawley, for having been successful in securing one route, it will not be long before other sections of the county will need Mr. Hawley's influence in getting other routes established.

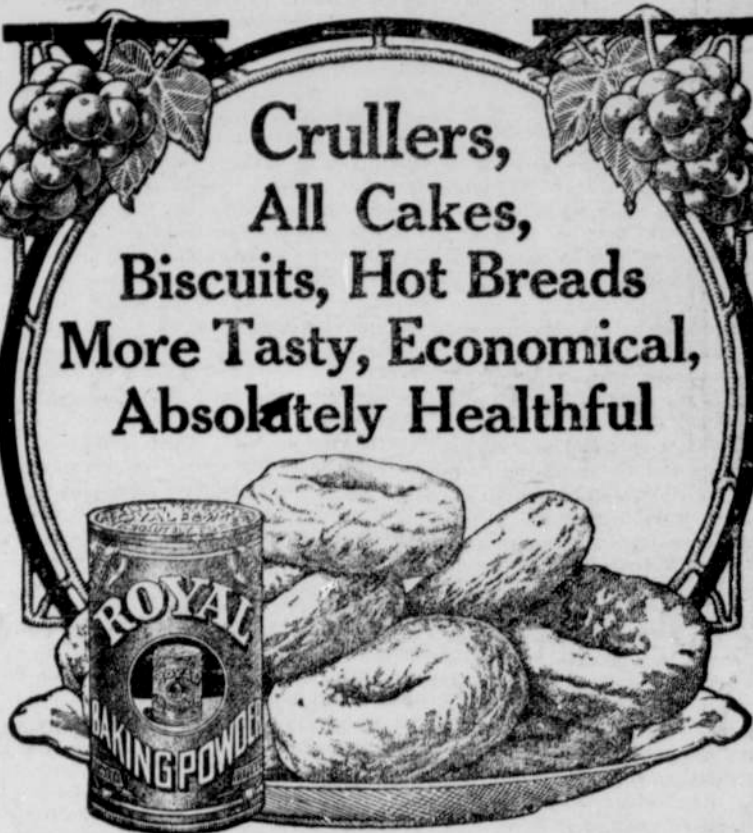

Henry Kunze, who is soliciting votes for joint representative for Tillamook and Yamhill counties, claimed on his election card that he was opposed to boss rule. That sounds fine, don't it, to fool the voters? But how did it work out in actual practice? Kunze was the boss of the short weight butter imposed on the people. Oh, yes; we, too, are opposed to bosses of the short weight butter class. After imposing short weight butter upon the people, and especially upon the working classes, who find it difficult to buy butter while living costs so much, surely they are not going to send Kunze to the legislature.

The Primary Law prescribes an honest, open method that an aspirant for office should be governed by in securing his nomination. This law was strictly observed by A. G. Beals. It was the privilege of any Republican in the district to have entered the race against him. None entered, therefore he had a right to consider himself the choice of his party and if the "square deal" is to be observed in this instance, and we are sure it will be, the voters of this district will rally to the support of Beals, whose legislative record, clean character and open methods entitle him to their support.

The trouble with the proposed new city charter is that it needs editing, not by a dozen or more persons, but by one person. There are some good features in the charter and there are some which should be amended. All seems to agree to that, yet it is going to be impossible, with so much difference of opinion, to please everyone. Turn the charter over to some level-headed, conservative person, and instruct him to edit it, having in view only the city's interest and that of a well governed, progressive business center. No matter, however, what charter is submitted to the people, the extremes on either side are sure to "knock."

West, the Democratic nominee for governor, is placed in the "grafter's" class by the Press of Oregon. It has been conclusively shown that West was summoned to Washington as a witness and he drew double pay and mileage, one from the government and the other from the taxpayers of Oregon. The federal authorities getting next to West's double play, squealed on him, when he returned the money he received from the federal government to the state, with the exception of $50. We hardly think that the voters and taxpayers of Tillamook county will vote for such a man to become the governor of this state. Don't do it, gentlemen, for it is tricks and schemes like this which help to make taxes come high.

An effort is being made to deprive Yamhill and Tillamook Counties of a Republican Joint Representative, but it is hoped that Republicans will not forget that A. G. Beals is the only candidate for that office who complied with the direct primary law. Considering that H. C. Kunze, the Democratic nominee, was so closely allied with the Socialist party, and in 1904 was that party's candidate for county clerk, one can hardly imagine that Republicans, or Democrats or Socialists for that matter, will vote for a candidate who has been flopping so often in recent years. And another thing against Mr. Kunze is the fact that he pleaded guilty and was fined $25 for selling short weight butter the first of the year. Acts of that character should deprive any person from filling public office, and as Mr. Kunze is alone to blame for the short weight butter foisted upon "the people," surely "the people" are not going to send him to the state legislature for doing that kind of business.

We have been asked why we are not making an aggressive fight in favor of local option in this election. We bore the brunt of the fight in three local option elections, and the Headlight was an important factor, but seeing that the extreme element amongst temperance people are not content to let well enough and allow the local option law to work out desirable reforms, they have forced state wide prohibition into the fight before there is a public sentiment in favor of it. When asked two years ago in Portland whether it would be wise to inject state wide prohibition into this election, we were frank to confess that we thought it would be unwise to do so, giving as our reason that it would injure the local option movement, which was then making many counties "dry." We have lived long enough to know that you cannot force prohibition on Oregon with so few registered prohibitionists. We still think that the principal fight should have been along local option lines, and better results would have been accomplished, instead of rushing headlong into defeat, for this is what will suddenly dawn upon them next Tuesday. The snap shot man when he gets into a political fight don't aim to come out the under dog, and that is the reason that he has been holding his whist, allowing the state wide prohibitionists to carry on their fight in their own way.

The people of Tillamook county are called upon to vote again for against the establishment of saloons. This is the fourth time that they have been called upon to vote upon this question, the three previous elections being in favor of keeping saloons out of the county. A large number voters, in taking a retrospective view of the situation, if they are unbiased, will have to agree with the Headlight that the saloon keepers openly defied the law when the county was "wet," and some of the same individuals, with others, notwithstanding that the sovereign will of the people have demanded that the county be "dry," have openly violated the local option law, and since the city licensed the pool rooms to sell near beer conditions have grown worse. With this state of affairs confronting the people, will the voters cast their ballots for the saloons or for a "dry" county? We do know this, that if a vote could be taken for a vigorous prosecution of the bootleggers and for the closing up of the near beer joints, it would be a surprise what a large vote it would get. But what is best to be done under the circumstance? Vote to make the county "wet," and allow those who violated the law under the saloon regime and the local option to get into the saloon business, for that is what they will do, or vote the county "dry" again and demand that it be kept dry and the will of the people respected. Other counties have made it too tropical for those who have openly violated the will of the people, and if this county remains in the "dry" column, then make it too tropical for bootleggers to remain here. It is now up to the people to decide.

The voters of this county should be careful to vote for two circuit judges at the election to be held next Tuesday. Percy K. Kelly and I. H. Van Winkle are the two Republican nominees, and their names appear on the ballot as the last two in the list of circuit judges. Both of these gentlemen are able lawyers and well qualified to discharge the duties of this important office. They are men of high standing and unimpeachable integrity, and every voter should make it a point to vote for both of them. It is important to every person that this office be properly filled, because no one knows when he may be compelled to be a party in a law suit, and he will then be interested in having his suit properly settled. If the judge is not qualified to fill the position, and is constantly blundering and making errors in the trial of a case, an appeal will frequently be taken to the Supreme Court, the case reversed and sent back for a new trial, thus adding greatly to the expense, not only of the parties to the suit, but to the taxpayers at large as well, where no appeal would be taken if the case was properly tried in the circuit court. This applies particularly to cases tried by jury, as the expense there is usually much greater for the taxpayers than in cases tried without a jury. Under the law the circuit judge who has held his position the longest tries the jury cases, so that if one of the present judges should be re-elected that part of the work of the court would fall to him. Neither Mr. Kelly or Mr. Van Winkle is a judge for re-election, but either one of them would be fully competent to handle in a proper manner either the jury business or the equity side of the court. This much cannot be said of some other candidates. Owing to the importance of this office we feel justified under the circumstances in specially urging the voters of this county to support Mr. Kelly and Mr. Van Winkle, as we believe that the interests of the public are so much at stake that a very serious mistake will be made if they should not both be elected. So vote for two judges, and we think the two named are the proper ones to be elected.

Obituary.

Mrs. Mianda Tillotson was born in Courtland County, New York, November 29th, 1846. She was married to Charles Hewitt in 1863. To this union were born two sons, Arthur L., who resides in Portland, Oregon, and Charles C., who disappeared very mysteriously in New Zealand in 1904, and has never since been heard from. Mrs. Geo. Williams of this place is a step-daughter of deceased.

In 1887 Mrs. Hewitt was married to Stephen Tillotson. They came to Oregon in 1888, residing here six years, then removed to Florida, where they lived until June, 1900, returning at that time to Tillamook, here they continued to make their home until, four months prior to her death, owing to failing health, Mrs. Tillotson made her home with her son Arthur at Portland, where she died on October 20, 1910. The remains were brought to this city, and the service held here on October 28th, 1910, at the M. E. Church.

Deceased was a woman of deep culture and refinement, with a kind and loving disposition, which won many warm friends wherever she went. She was ever thoughtful and considerate of others, and many here mourn her loss, as she was held in high esteem by all who knew her.

Mr. Otto Paul, Milwaukee, Wis., says Foley's Honey and Tar is still more than the best. He writes us: "All those that bought it think it is the best for coughs and colds they ever had and I think it is still more than the best. Our baby had a bad cold and it cured him in one day. Please accept thanks. Sold by C. I. Clough."

HANDICAPPED

The boy or girl with any defect of vision is greatly handicapped in the pursuit of knowledge in the school room. If your boy or girl does not show a high percentage of average in the school report the probabilities are that there is something the matter with the eyes. To find out costs you nothing if you will bring them to me for examination. It doesn't pay to guess about the eyesight of your child—it is better to see that the eyes are right. Patted Her on the Back.

Tennyson on one occasion on the royal yacht, at the request of the then Princess of Wales, read "Grandmother." "I read it," said Tennyson, "in a cabin on deck. The princess sat close to me on one side and a young lady whom I didn't know on the other. The wind came through an open window, and the princess whispered, 'Put on your hat!' I said I ought, if possible, to make myself bolder than ever before as regards royalties. She said again, 'Oh, no!' so I did, and I heard afterwards that the king of Denmark's really kept a court fool, remarking, 'He may be laureate, but he has learned court manners.' When I had done the ladies praised me, and I told the unknown one on the left way of reply, and presently I found out she was the empress of Russia. 'Had you any talk with the empress?' 'Hardly any. He said he could speak English. Perhaps he was disgusted at my putting his wife on a back. His head was up in the ceiling as he walked about below.' London Gentlewoman.

Hydrocyanic Acid.

The distilled essential oil of almonds which when diluted supplies the peculiar flavoring for sweets and confections known as "almond," contains the strongest form a sufficient percentage of hydrocyanic acid to make it highly dangerous. A young man who was sent an order by pouring it from a large bottle to a smaller one so that he had not put the label straight on the smaller bottle and he it off again. Before replacing the label he licked it to make sure of sticking properly. But while he had inadvertently let a drop or two trickie on the outside of the bottle where he had affixed the label, when he touched the label with his tongue he felt as if something was along that member and also a funny heart. So he rushed to a doctor which was fortunately close at hand and put his tongue under the running water. Never as long as he lives, said, would he forget that poisonous sensation.—Chambers' Journal.

A Way Man Has.

A man who will sit up all night to display marvelous agility of the fingers in operating a pack of cards has that he has hands like an elephant's feet when he is asked to hook up a button on his wife's gown. This he is observed time and again and one of the popular bits of philosophy observed in connection with a dressmaker's convention desiring public attention. That it is a more difficult task taking to shuffle the deck and deal a poker hand—merely as a test of cleverness without taking into consideration the more important part of dealing a satisfactory hand—that to hook up a gown even when the eyes are hidden in the lace must be attended. That a man will undertake one cheerfully and the other reluctantly must be ascribed to the survival of the fittest in most male human beings. Chicago Tribune.

A Nice Distinction.

He was hurrying for the train, somewhat impeded by a clumsy coat containing a large live turkey. As he approached the gate the guard stopped him with a gesture. "You can't take that through here, or go by express."

"But I can't stop," declared the passenger. "I've got to get this train. And he tried to push through again. The guard held him back. "The baggage," he said firmly, "and it is in the baggage car."

"Oh, no," replied the other, with a charming and confident smile. "The luggage. Don't you see I'm holding it?" And he had slipped by before the astonished guard had caught his breath.—Youth's Companion.

Circumstantial Evidence.

Even the clearest and most positive circumstantial evidence is likely to be at fault, after all, and therefore ought to be received with great caution. Take the case of any pencil sharpened by any woman. If you have written you will find she did it with a knife, but if you take simply the appearance of the pencil you will say she did it with her teeth.—Mark Twain.

Ultra Practical.

"I notice," said a husband who was reading a lengthy letter which his wife had written and had handed to him for perusal, "that you have written a stupid mistake. You have written 'mirage' instead of 'marriage'."

"Either will do," replied the wife. "They both signify an illusion."
