

Tillamook Jottings.

Win Stephens while having a fight with Will Rogers, a fisherman, Thursday evening over a jug of whiskey, got his face and neck badly cut up. It seems that in the scuffle the fisherman drew a knife and was using it to good advantage to free himself. This is the third whiskey fight in town this week.

Steps are being taken by the owners of the stranded gasoline schooner Oakkosh to rescue her from the jetty sands where she drifted ashore a week ago last Monday. A force of men is at work on the craft, with a large donkey engine to haul the hull further up on the beach. As nearly as can be learned, the hull is still intact and the engines practically uninjured except from the contact with the water. Another body, supposed to be that of Captain Latham, washed up on the beach, making four out of the six bodies which have been recovered.

F. R. Beals closed the deal whereby he became owner of the Lommen place and the eighty acre tract of upland on the Max Fischer place. Mr. Lommen received in the neighborhood of $25,000 for the land only for which he paid $7,000 including stock and farming implements about six years ago. According to the general opinion of the matter it had been the intention of Mr. Beals to lay out a townsite at this point, but nothing definite has been announced as yet. In any event this may become known in due time, but the land included in this tract is fully worth the price paid for farming purposes when compared to other deals which have been closed during the last year. The bridge at Zaddach, a place crossing over to the property has made a difference of several thousand dollars in its value and this fact was no doubt fully understood by Mr. Beals when the transaction was finally closed. - Nehalem Enterprise.

TUG OWNERS NOT LIABLE FOR WRECK.

Judge Bean Terminates Case Involving the Schooner Merchant's Loss.

Because the old schooner Merchant went to pieces on the Nehalem bar in 1900, while towed by the tug George R. Vosburg, owners of the tug are not liable for the value of the lost craft. Judge Bean handed down a decision terminating the case and declaring that the five owning interest which had sued for loss of the Merchant were not entitled to recover the value of the craft.

The Vosburg had been engaged to tow the Merchant from the mill of the Wheeler Lumber Company. Before starting for the bar, the master of the schooner announced to his tow that, owing to the age of the schooner and her shaky condition, she could stand no pounding on the bar, and that she must not be permitted to strike while going out. When the towmaster reached the bar he found it lumpy, and concluded he could not pass out without permitting the schooner to bump on the sands, and he started to turn around and return into Nehalem Bay. While making this effort the Merchant went ashore and became a complete wreck. Her owners, J. C. Eschen, Robert Minor, Peter F. W. Mathiesen, the Golden Gate Ship Company and Henry Smith, libeled the tug for the value of the lost craft.

Suit was not begun until 1902. Evidence was taken before Judge Bellinger in 1904. Briefs were not filed until 1908, after Judge Bellinger's death. By agreement of the parties, the case was submitted to Judge Bean in February of this year, and he at once rendered a decision, holding that the tug was not an insurer, and where using reasonable caution in handling a tow should not be held liable for loss.

Cold-storage men object to publicity. How different is the public-spirited hen. Its loudest advertising is at the moment the strictly fresh egg is available.

The process of making powdered milk has been greatly improved in recent years, so that it is now more favorably regarded and is even recommended by physicians for invalids and convalescents on long voyages because of its keeping qualities under all climatic conditions and the convenience of carriage. An American process has been introduced into Norway recently where a company has undertaken the contract of supplying 300 tons of powdered milk each year for three years to an English firm.

APPROPRIATION FOR TILLAMOOK COUNTY FAIR.

Representative A. G. Beals Succeeds In Getting $1500 From the State.

Representative A. G. Beals succeeded in getting his bill through the state legislature which provides for $1500 toward the Tillamook County Fair. The bill is as follows with a number of provisions:

A BILL
For an Act to provide for the establishment and organization of the Tillamook County Fair Association; to define its duties and powers, and to appropriate money therefor.

Be it enacted by the People of the State of Oregon:

Be it enacted by the Legislative Assembly of the State of Oregon:

Section 1. Tillamook County Fair Association Constituted. Within thirty (30) days after this Act becomes operative and every two years thereafter, the Governor of the State of Oregon shall appoint three residents of Tillamook County, Oregon, who together with six citizens elected by the stockholders of the association shall constitute the board of directors to be known and designated as the Tillamook County Fair Association, for the purpose of this Act.

Section 2. Organization and meetings of Board. Within forty (40) days after this Act becomes operative the board of directors hereby created shall qualify as required by the constitution of the State, and shall elect from their own number a president of the board, a vice president and a treasurer, who shall hold office for the period of one year, or until their successors are elected and qualified, and shall elect a secretary not of their number, who shall hold office for one year, or until his successor is elected.

The time of the annual meeting of the board shall be fixed by the directors herein provided for.

Section 3. Duties and Powers of Board—Annual Fair. The board of directors shall have exclusive management and control of the ground and all property owned, used or controlled by the Tillamook County Fair Association, not only during the time of the annual meeting of said association, but at all times, and shall be entrusted with all its business and financial affairs.

The association shall have power at its annual meeting, to make rules and regulations governing the conduct of the board of directors as to its management and time of meeting, and adopt a constitution and by-laws to conform with this Act, to define the powers and duties of the officers, and fix their bonds and compensation. They shall provide for an annual fair or exhibition by the association, of all industries and industrial products in the county and adjoining counties, and determine the amount of premiums; provided however, that in no event shall the State be held liable for any premiums awarded or debts contracted or created by said board of directors under their control, beyond the amount annually appropriated by this Act.

Section 4. Board to Appoint Marshals and Police—Their Authority. The board of directors shall have power to appoint all necessary marshals and police to keep order and preserve peace at the annual fair of said association, and the officers so appointed shall be vested with the same authority for the preservation of order and peace on the grounds and in the buildings of the association that executive peace officers are vested with by the law of the State of Oregon.

Section 5. Board to Collect and Disseminate Information—To make Reports and Suggestions. The board shall use all suitable means to collect and disseminate all kinds of information calculated to educate and benefit the interests of the State, collect and distribute reliable information, to encourage immigration, and shall on or before the first day of December of each year, report to the Governor a full and detailed account of their transactions, information gained, and also a full financial statement of all funds received and disbursed. They shall also make such suggestions and recommendations as experience and good policy may dictate, for the improvement of the agricultural and kindred industries of the State.

Section 6. Secretary to Report Organization to Governor. When the board of directors shall be organized as herein provided, the secretary shall report such organization to the Governor.

Section 7. Appropriation—Use of Money. To carry out the provisions of this Act there is hereby appropriated for the fiscal year 1911 and 1912, out of the moneys of the State treasury, not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $1,500.00 for the fiscal years 1911 and 1912, to the president of the Tillamook County Fair Association, who shall, before he receives the same, give a bond in double the amount appropriated, to the State of Oregon, to be approved by the Governor and Secretary, conditioned that said money shall only be used in the payment of premiums awarded by said association at its annual fair, and for no other purpose, provided, that only so much of the moneys herein appropriated shall be available in any year for the purpose of this Act as shall be equal to an amount raised, secured, or provided by said association, either by appropriation by the county court of Tillamook County, or donations from the citizens thereof, or otherwise, and shall the board in any year fail to offer and award premiums for agricultural and other purposes equal to the amount claimed from the State under this Act, then the benefit of this section shall not be available for that year; and it is further provided, that no part of the money, therein appropriated shall be offered as a premium for a trial of speed.

FOUGHT IN THE TREES.

Curious Duel Between a Pair of Fire Eating Frenchmen.

In the swashbuckling days of the early part of the nineteenth century the dueling hero in France was the Marquis Merle de Sainte-Marie, whose affairs of honor were almost incessant. One of these he said to have been so ridiculous that it helped to set in motion the current of feeling that has since made dueling so much less honorable than it once was.

It appears that one day there called upon the marquis one Pierrot d'Issac, himself a famous duelist. Now, in French Pierrot means sparrow and merle means blackbird.

D'Issac struck himself on the chest with emphatic dignity. "Marquis," said he, "I am a Bonapartist and you are a royalist. Moreover, I am the sparrow and you are the blackbird. It seems to me that there is one bird of us too many."

"I quite agree with you, monsieur," politely replied the marquis, "and my choice is pistols, and, as is appropriate for birds of our species, let us fight in the trees."

Pierrot d'Issac was agreeable to this unique suggestion, and as if it were not a sufficiently ridiculous thing that one man should challenge another because his name was Sparrow and the other Blackbird the duel was actually fought from trees. The seconds stood on the ground below.

At a given signal the pistols were fired, and there was a rustling among the leaves of one of the chestnut trees. Pierrot d'Issac came tumbling to the ground "like a ripe chestnut," as one of Sainte-Marie's seconds expressed it, whereupon Merle de Sainte-Marie in a facetious mood began to chirp triumphantly in imitation of the song of the blackbird. D'Issac waited till he had recovered from his wound and then challenged Sainte-Marie for the chirp.

This time there was nothing amusing about the encounter. It was fought with swords, and Sainte-Marie was badly wounded. The sparrow had avenged himself on the blackbird.—New York Herald.

FORBES' GREAT FEAT.

His Newspaper Story of the Last Days of the Commune.

One morning after the siege of Paris, when the city was believed in London to be still in the hands of the commune, Sir John Robinson, manager of the Daily News of London, reached his office to find the late Archibald Forbes lying on the floor asleep, his head on a postoffice directory, while the printers were hard at work on his manuscript, the story of "Paris in Flames," a most vivid description of the last days of the commune.

"Forbes had telegraphed from Dover announcing his coming," said Sir John Robinson, "the printers had been waiting, and thus the country heard of those terrible days for the first time."

"London was ablaze with excitement. Boulevard street was impassable through the newsboys shrieking for copies, and in parliament Mr. Gladstone was questioned that afternoon and could only say he hoped the story was exaggerated."

"When Forbes awakened from his slumber amid all this turmoil what a spectacle he was! His face was black with powder, his eyes red and inflamed, his clothes matted with clay and dust. He was a dreadful picture. He had been compelled to assist the communists in defending a triangular space upon which three detachments of the Versailles troops were firing and had actually taught the citizens how to build a barricade."

By aid of dummy dispatches addressed to Lord Granville and the queen Forbes escaped from this threatening triangle and wrote all the way to England, being the solitary passenger on the mail boat.

Must Have Been a Storm Scene.

"As perhaps there may be some one who has not heard the story of the Dutch painter, I tell it," says Elhu Vedder in the Atlantic. "A person calling on this painter heard a most infernal uproar in his studio. Things seemed to be falling and brass plates flying about, and there were loud shouts."

"The servant came to the door in a state of great anxiety and told the visitor at once that the master could not be disturbed."

"I should think he couldn't be much more than he is," said the visitor. "But what under the sun is the matter?"

"He is painting a sky!"

RUSIE'S TERRIFIC SPEED.

His Thunderbolt Delivery Terrified the Batters.

A veteran ball player who has batted against nearly all of the major pitchers in the last twenty years named Amos Rusie as the universal standard of speed in shooting the ball across the rubber.

"There have been many fast pitchers in baseball, and all of them in the time when they cut loose for fair have baffled the best of hitters with the speed, but you will notice that the fast pitchers are spoken of in the remark 'as always made.' Has he the speed that Amos Rusie had? I think, it will be that way forever. As long as great names are remembered or baseball is the nation's game Rusie will remain the champion sportsman, the one pitcher who could send in the ball faster than any else that ever lived. When you are 'fast as Rusie' you don't mean it either; you only wish to show your favorite pitcher is a very speedy boy."

"Words fail really to describe the speed with which Rusie sent the ball. He was a man of great width, great strength and the ability to put enormous force into his ball. Coupled with this he had a set of dazzling curves which were manufactured with the same effort required to produce the speed. Some men can throw a straight ball with great force, but have to slow up in order to deliver curves, but Rusie drove in a curve ball with all of his tremendous power."

"Facing Rusie to a timid man who like going into battle must be an experienced soldier. The distance was shorter than Rusie had the whole box to move around in instead of being chained to a slab, and he simply drove the ball at you with the force of a cannon. I have stood up to all the great pitchers of nearly twenty years, I have seen scores of them come and go, and none of them inspired the terror in a batsman's heart that was put there by the mighty Rusie. The ball was like a white streak tearing past you without time to balance yourself, figure the course of the ball or take aim at it. The fellows with the wide curve might fool you into reaching out and missing them, but you weren't reaching out at Rusie—you simply swung at a white streak as it hurried past, and if you took a full arm swing the ball was gone and in the catcher's hands before you had half finished the swinging motion."

"The convincing proof of Rusie's terrific speed was this: If any other pitcher hit a man the man would limp a moment and went to the hospital. If Rusie hit a man the man retired from the game and sometimes went to the hospital. To be hit by Rusie was worse than to have an ordinary man smash you with a rock."—New York World.

He Didn't Know Them.

The late Rev. Horatio Stebbins of San Francisco was a man of large mind and noble powers, but more familiar with the world of intellect and scholastic interests than with the real and timely things. His household was blessed with a charming daughter who grew up tall and beautiful, commanding the admiration of all who saw her.

One day a visitor said to the doctor: "Doctor, your daughter grows more charming day by day. What is her regular Gibson girl?" "Ah, thank you, thank you," replied the doctor in his best manner. When the visitor had gone, turning to his wife the doctor asked, "My dear, what are the Gibsons?"—San Francisco Examiner.

A Change For the Better.

The nine-year-old boy of a Baltimore family who is compelled by his parents to practice daily upon the piano may not be a clever performer, but he has a pretty shrewd notion of the worth of an instrument, as well as a rather mature wit, as is evidenced by an incident in the household not long since.

His father upon returning home from a week's absence heard the lad plugging away at the piano. "When did you learn that new piece?" asked the parent. "It isn't a new piece, dad," answered the boy. "The piano has been tuned."—Lippincott's.
