

THE HARBOR LIGHTS REFUSED.
Tillamook Bay Thinks Federal Heads Prejudiced.

Tillamook Bay has been denied aids to navigation in the way of seven post lights, according to advices received from the Federal authorities yesterday. These lights it has been estimated, could be installed and maintained the first year for $2000. Now prime movers in commercial circles there declare that the Tillamook territory seems to be in disfavor at Washington since it was only this week that the Port of Tillamook was turned down on the plan to improve the harbor, even after an agreement had been made whereby Tillamook Bay capital was to meet one-fourth of the improvements.

Additional word has been received this week that a plan outlined for the betterment of the channel marks, which was investigated by Commander J. M. Ellicott, inspector of the Seventeenth Lighthouse District, who in turn made recommendations that the lights be deemed necessary be authorized, had been unfavorably considered at Washington. Coming almost on the heels of the news that the project recommended by Colonel John Biddle, Major Morrow and Major Kutz, for the improvement of Tillamook bay and bay, was adversely acted on, the action regarding the navigation aids is taken there to mean that Tillamook is not in good standing.

Business men there declare no locality in the United States has made the same liberal offer to participate in the expense of harbor improvements as Tillamook Bay, and even after it was announced that the engineers favored the channel being deepened only to Bay City, the Port of Tillamook came forward with a proposal that it would contribute sufficient to be added to the Bay City fund so that the bay's proportion would leave the Government but three-fourths to pay.

Regardless of the future development of the harbor through the increase in water traffic and the completion of its first rail line connecting it with the Harriaman system, there is a regular fleet plying from Tillamook consisting of the steamers Anvil, Sue H. Elmore, and George R. Vosburg and the gasoline tug Anvil, all but the Vosburg carrying passengers and the four being engaged in the transportation of general cargo. It was principally to assist the masters of those vessels that the additional lights were requested, while there are other carriers that visit the harbor as their business warrants.—Oregonian.

3-SCREW VESSEL TO BE BUILT.
T. B. Potter Orders $50,000 Craft to Ply From Portland to Tillamook.

Portland's first triple-screw vessel, of yacht design and to carry passengers between that city and Tillamook during the summer season, is to be built by Joseph Supple, from plans drawn by Fred Ballin, marine architect. The craft will be owned by T. B. Potter and its estimated cost is $50,000. Under the building agreement with Mr. Supple the vessel is to be ready for service June 1.

Three six-cylinder Seaburg gasoline engines, counted on to develop a combined strength of 500 horsepower and drive the vessel at 18 miles an hour, were ordered by Mr. Supple Tuesday through the Rober Machinery Company, and stock types were selected, so there will be no delay in arrival. It was at first considered to contract for a single engine to drive the three propellers but on ascertaining that time would be lost in special construction the stock engines were accepted.

The vessel is planned after types of steam yachts numerous in the East, but Mr. Ballin said yesterday that it would be the first of triple-screw construction on the Coast. The vessel will be 150 feet long, with a beam of 20 feet and 8 feet moulded depth. It will have a clipper bow and a yacht stern, with two stacks to give it the appearance of a steamer, besides a foremast and mizzenmast.

Stateroom accommodations will be arranged for forty passengers, though it is expected that the craft's daylight certificate will provide for carrying 100 persons. The deckhouse will contain washrooms, dining saloon, galley, pantry, special staterooms and general quarters.

"She will be a fine vessel of her kind and we will turn her out on time," said Mr. Supple. "The machinery being ordered in advance will assist materially with the work as we can proceed with the hull and get everything ready for its installation on arrival. The fact that she will be under way at the yards will not interfere with other work in view and as soon as some of the space is regained now used for constructing oil barges and pontoons for the new North Bank dredge the new vessel will have a clear field."

As the vessel is planned for a special purpose and will not carry freight, its operation on the Portland-Tillamook run will not interfere with the regular carriers, the Golden Gate, the Sue H. Elmore, the Anvil and the George R. Vosburg.

MODERN METHODS OF BUYING ON THE FARM.

Average Farmer Prefers to Buy His Goods Direct and Have Them Delivered at His Door.

The average farmer of today feels that he has as much right to have his goods delivered at his door as the party who lives in town, and as time goes on the tendency in the farming communities is more and more towards buying their supplies direct and having them delivered right at their door. As a result of these conditions in all the enterprising farming communities you will find the grocer's wagon, tea and coffee wagons, meat wagons, modern medicine wagons, etc. There is no getting around the fact that these institutions for the convenience of the farmers are here to stay.

One thing that is particularly noticeable is, that the sale of domestic medicines, stock remedies, flavoring extracts, spices, toilet articles, etc., thought the medium of the modern medicine wagons driven by up-to-date salesmen of today has grown to an enormous proportion in the 10 to 15 years. Of course, all manufacturers are right after the farmer's trade and as a result of this competition there has been a great improvement in the quality of the goods handled by these wagons, and our farmer friends tell us that it is a recognized fact in the farming communities that a superior line of goods is handled by these wagons, compared with similar lines of goods usually sold over the counter in town.

The idea is right here, that these medicine companies do not go to the expense of much newspaper advertising and as a result they are enabled to give a large package of superior goods at a less price than the manufacturers who marked their goods through other channels. To illustrate the high quality of these preparations it is only necessary to mention the fact that the most of these medicine salesmen practically leave their goods on trial with their customers and ask no money unless the goods are satisfactory. This plan of selling naturally appeals to the farmer and as a result most every farmer buys at least a part of his supplies from the medicine wagons.

There was a time before the enactment of the pure food laws over the country that there were a lot of old peddlers of fake nostrums traveling about the country marketing an entirely different line of stuff, but the enactment of the pure food laws seems to have driven this undesirable class of vendors out of the field and it is very doubtful if one of these old time fakirs could go into the average farming community and do enough business to keep a going. The farmer of today demands the best goods because he has the money to pay for them. Times are not what they were 25 years ago when grain and stock were selling at a low price and every farm had a mortgage upon it.

The farmer of today is the most independent person on earth. They are independent and they know it, and woe to the person who tries to dictate as to how and where they shall spend their money.—Duluth Telegraph Herald, May 28, 1909.

AFTER THE TEMPEST.

The Genial Calm That Settled Over the Pretty Schoolm'am.

A pretty schoolm'am once taught school in a Long Island village. All the young fellows for miles around were mad about her, but the schoolm'am was proud, and none of the boys seemed to stand the ghost of a chance.

Young Jim Brown, the judge's son, was the best looking chap in the town, and Jim probably loved the schoolm'am more than any of her other swains, but he never had the pluck to declare himself. He felt too small and mean before the beauty and learning of the schoolm'am. But one day, the schoolm'am being away on a visit in New York state, Jim asked advice of the editor. The editor said: "Take the bull by the horns and insert an announcement of your forthcoming marriage in my society column. It will cost you only 50 cents."

So Jim inserted an announcement to the effect that the schoolm'am and he would be married the next month and would spend their honeymoon at Atlantic City.

Well, a short time after this announcement appeared the schoolm'am came back home. Jim heard on all sides how furious she was. For several days he kept away from her. Then one afternoon as she was coming home from school he ran plump into her in the lane.

She let him know at once what she thought of him and his outrageous conduct. She stormed and raved, and her pretty eyes flashed fire. Jim stood first on one foot and then on the other, and finally he blurted out: "Well, if you don't like it I can have the announcement contradicted."

"Oh, bother it!" said the schoolm'am. "It's too late now."—Washington Star.

THEY LIKE PRISON LIFE.

A Class of Persons in Japan Who Try to Break Into Jail.

In Japan there are people who make sham confessions in order to obtain a period of the comparative warmth and comfort of a Japanese prison. The Japan Mail says: "The police slang of the capital has words to describe and distinguish these persons. 'Meshi kul,' or the rice criminal, will steal some small article from a shop front in such a way as to be seen doing it. He then makes a bolt of it, pursued by the master of the shop, or some faithful kozo, but presently allows himself to be caught and handed to the police. He has to 'do time' for his pretended theft, but when that period has elapsed he will allow himself to be caught again.

"The 'umandon,' or 'eel bowl' criminal, is wiler than the one just mentioned. He does not actually commit a crime, such as will put him into the convict side of the prison, but allows himself to be found looking in suspicious places, underneath the broad verandas of a temple, or in the garden of a private house. He gets into prison all right, but he secures the more generous treatment of the house of detention, which is to the fare of the convict jail what a dish of ois is to a bowl of plain rice.

"The 'kuruma' is a criminal who makes a sham confession in order to sneak a free railway ride. The Asahi tells of a case connected with a murderer, known as the 'decapitated corpse case,' which took place last year. A man gave himself up to the police in Sendai as the perpetrator of the crime. He was brought to Tokyo and his story investigated. It was found to be a pure fabrication."

A Strauss Story.
A French contemporary tells a quaint story of the composer of "Salome." He was dining one night with a party of musical friends when the conversation turned on the compositions of the Kaiser. Some of the guests had expressed their opinions pretty freely when Herr Strauss put his finger to his lips and said "Sh-sh. You should never run down the compositions of crowned heads in company. There is no telling who wrote them."

Some Letters.
An ingenious person has discovered that the three most forcible letters in our alphabet are X R G energies, that the two which contain nothing are M T empty, that four express great compulsion, O B C T obstinacy; that two are in a decline, D K ideality, that four indicate exalted station, X L N C excellency, and three excite our tears, yet when pronounced together are necessary to a good understanding.—I. E. G. telegy and legi.

Willing to Compromise.
"Didn't you promise never to do that again?"
"Yes, father."
"And didn't I promise to whale you good if you didn't?"
"Yes, but I broke me promise and won't hold you to yours."—Toledo Blade.

To the Point.
At a teacher's conference one of the school principals rose to propose the toast, "Long live the teachers."
And a meager, pallid assistant instructor in a hollow voice asked, "On what?"—Ladies' Home Journal.

Its Resemblance.
"Did the man whose auto was in collision last night give it a cursory examination?"
"It sounded that way, sir."—Baltimore American.

Advice is not disliked because it is advice, but because so few people know how to give it.—Leigh Hunt.
