The Tillamook Headlight.

Editorial Snap Shots.

From our view point it would be far better to raise a purse to fight the Tillamook City saloon monopoly for violating the interstate commerce law than to fight the Port of Tillamook.

What a contrast. The curfew whistle blows at nine o'clock, for the purpose of keeping the young people off the streets at night, but a red light district is allowed to be started on one of the main streets.

Attorney R. R. Duniway is to be paid $500 to fight the Port of Tillamook on technical grounds and with the idea of knocking it out. He made himself conspicuous by fighting a bond sale in Portland, but all his bluster did not amount to anything, anyway, for he lost out.

Should anyone delay the U.S. mail they are liable to prosecution, but the unnecessary delay of making the postmasters count every piece of mail passing through their offices during this month does not appear to be considered delay when looked at through the goggles of the postal authorities. But it is a delay, nevertheless.

Some "strings" are being pulled for the purpose of reducing Thomas Holman's sentence, who was fined $1,000 for contributing to the delinquency of a minor child. Holman was let down too easy, considering the way he perjured him self and attempted to drag others into a nasty scrape. Let him remain where he is or pay the fine.

The person who dictated a letter, and which was written by a child of tender years, and which stated that three of the Christian ministers ought to be run out of town, is probably gloating over the departure of some of them. But "Christian devils" in Christian churches are doing a lot of harm to the Christian religion.

We believe in patronizing home industry. Instead of paying $500.00 to a Portland attorney to fight the Port of Tillamook, that amount of money given to one of the local attorneys would have been appreciated, for it is like throwing money into the gutter. However, if some of our citizens have money to fool away in that manner that is their business.

Because it happened to be a bit breezy, with the spray from the juvenile combbers going over the launch, while going down to the bay on Sunday, one young lady, who wasn't a very good Jack Tar, for fear of going to Davey Jones' locker, wanted to get out and walk, little thinking that Captain O'Neal was causing the spray to fly for the purpose of giving the ladies a good complexion and a good appetite.

Welcome to Tillamook County! Enter without knocking and remain on the same terms. That is the inscription which the Publicity Committee of the Tillamook Commercial Club decided on Saturday to place on a structure at the county line at Dolph. On the reverse side will be "Call again." One of the committee, B. C. Lamb, is the person who succeeded, after several attempts to compose something novel and original, who hit on the above, which was agreed to by the committee.

We have been wondering why the county is in need of a water wagon now that the county is wet. It is well enough to buy all necessary appliances for road building, yet in this wet section of the country we are inclined to think that it will not prove very successful and a cause of additional expense as well. The question of economizing, with a view of reducing taxation, should not be lost sight of, for that is becoming a burning question of much importance, and will become more so every year, for taxes are too high.

We do not resume to know, but we will gamble that it will be a mistake and that the Port of Tillamook will not sanction any of the Port's money being expended on a north jetty. It seems, however, that some selfish motives and interests are at the back of the movement to create a sentiment in favor of a north jetty. Sentiment and private interests must cut no figure in the matter of bar and harbor improvements, nor costly experiments. The Port has obtained the services of a reliable engineer, J. B. C. Lockwood, consulting engineer for the Port of Portland, and he will furnish the Port of Tillamook with valuable and reliable information, which will guide the members in what is best to be done. For the reason that the government has already made improvements and completed its project, it will be hard to obtain the consent of the government engineer to change any of the work, and here is where Mr. Lockwood may be handicapped in planning out what is best for the entire bay.

The large number of additional copies of the Headlight of the 4th May which we mailed for the purpose of helping boost the county appear to be appreciated by those seeking reliable information. This is one out of several letters we have received: Nashville, Chattanooga & St. Louis Railway, Coalmoat, Tenn., May 17, 1911. Editor Tillamook Headlight.

DEAR SIR,—I received a copy of your paper date May 4th, for which please accept my thanks. I have shown it to several of my friends, who have become very much interested in Tillamook County. Some are expecting to come to Oregon this fall. I am coming and expect to make your town a visit first thing, to look into the timber situation. Please send me a few copies along when you have anything especially to say of your county and I will handle them to advantage with friends. C. R. DANIEL, Frigate and Passenger Agent.

It is not often that we publish this class of letters, but we do so on this occasion simply to show what the county newspapers are doing to boost the county. There is a large call for sample copies of the Headlight of late. It is a well known fact that persons who want reliable information regarding a place where they expect to locate send for or subscribe for the newspaper published there, and in this respect the home newspapers are doing a lot of good work.

The most ingratitude persons in Tillamook City are saloon keepers. They induced voters to make the county "wet," and succeeding in their efforts, and now they are fleeing those who patronize their places of business 10c. for a glass of beer and 15c. for a drink of whiskey, which is certainly base ingratitude and rubbing it into those who voted for saloons. If this city expects to retain saloons it must break up the saloon monopoly confining the city to five saloons, so as to create competition, or loose license money from saloons altogether, for the men who imbibe feel that it is next to robbery to be fleeced by the saloon monopoly and will vote for local option the next time they have an opportunity. From a business point of view the saloons have caused a stagnation, taking $400 to $500 a day from the legitimate channels of business. As the city authorities are responsible for the ordinance which confined the city to five saloons, and now they can see for themselves the monopoly it created in making people pay exorbitant charges for drink, it is up to them to make a change or shoulder the responsibility. When the city authorities confined the city to five saloons we believe they did so in good faith. They, like the voters at the last election, have been imposed upon, and those who drink in saloons in this city are having to pay some of the enormous expenses which were entailed in the Home Rule election.

It was freely predicted the primary election law would turn out to be a failure and a fizzle, whereby the peanut politicians would be able to secure public office. This proved correct, and instead of healing the factional strife in the Republican party, the reverse is the case. It will always be so until the primary election law is amended making it imperative that before a person can become a nominee of any party he must first obtain a majority vote of his party he is affiliated with. Those who have repeatedly advocated this have been accused of wanting to interfere with the sovereign will of the people. We will point out the muss the Republican party finds itself in in the City of Portland on account of depriving that party of representative government. Three Republicans placed themselves in nomination for mayor, and with an exceedingly small vote cast at the primary election, a man with a rushlight caliber and name obtained a small plurality and is supposed to be the nominee of the Republican party. No sooner was the result of the primary election declared when a loud protest was raised and a call was made for an independent candidate. But the peculiar feature of the whole affair is the peculiar mix up that the primary election law is responsible for. Ex-Senator J. Simon, now the mayor of that city, always a strict party man and successful leader of the Republican party in Portland for a number of years, has consented to run in opposition to the so-called Republican nominee as an independent on request of a large number of voters. Will anyone explain to us where and what is the sovereign will of people in this peculiar mix up?

We predict that those who have started the legal fight on the Port of Tillamook will meet with failure, and that they err in judgment. The Headlight will be candid and outspoken, and concede the right of those who want to oppose the Port law their right to do so. But we want to point out the equity and justice of the situation. It is dairymen who are opposed to the Port. For a long number of years they have paid only from 20 to 30 per cent of the taxes, the timber and other interests paying 70 to 80 per cent. The tax money have gone to build roads, bridges and school houses and educate the children of those who reside here, while, on the other hand, the timber owners have received no benefit whatever from the burdensome taxation the people of this county have imposed upon them, with no road or other facilities of getting their timber to market. Most every farm in the county have comparatively a good road leading to them that have cost many hundreds of thousands to construct, and the farmers themselves have been paid an enormous amount of money for work on the roads. No one ever heard a word of complaint on account of this from the timber owners who pay 75 per cent of the taxes, but directly the timber men want money for bar and harbor improvements so that they can manufacture and get their timber to market, the first to oppose it is the farmers who have derived so much money and benefits from the timber owners paying so large a proportion of the taxes. Did the farmers of this county ever stop to figure it out what their taxes would amount to with the necessary public improvements going on if they had to foot the bills themselves? Where they pay $1.00 for taxes they would have to pay $4.00 if it were not for the timber. We consider, looking at the matter from an equity and justice stand point, that as the farmers have received so many benefits, and for so many years, from taxation, they ought to show a magnanimous spirit towards the timber owners now they justly demand a water way to benefit them and get their products to market. This matter of harbor improvements should not be looked at selfishly or in a dog in the manger light, and because the farmers have succeeded in obtaining the public improvements first they should be willing to concede that the timber owners are now entitled to some improvements that will now benefit them. We hope that the farmers will soon take this broad view of the situation, for the matter of harbor improvements will not only benefit the timber owners, but will be of benefit to the farmers and the whole community, for it will help to open up this bottled-up county and set the wheels of industry moving.

Plutocracy in the West.

Iowa folks own more automobiles in proportion to population than are owned by the people in New York. According to the official registration figures of the various states 70,000 automobiles are owned in New York and 24,000 in Iowa. On the basis of population, the ratio should be about one machine in Iowa to five in New York. The pictures painted by insurgent hands in Iowa have shown "the tariff plutocracy of the protected East" riding down the "unprotected yeomanry of the West" so often and so vividly that the Hawkeys have been wandering out of the straight but not narrow road they had long been wont to travel. They have, or had, caught the idea that prosperity is not being as fairly distributed under tariffs levied for the promotion of foreign industry. Taking the automobile as the visible sign and symbol of prosperity, and we believe it is generally so accepted, the Iowans are riding fast enough to break the speed limit. Iowa has more than her share of automobiles as compared with New York. As compared with Pennsylvania, said to be the most highly protected state in the Union, Iowa has a still greater advantage. Pennsylvania has more than four times the population of Iowa, but she owns only one automobile and two-thirds for every one owned in Iowa, the figures being, for Pennsylvania, 40,000 to the 24,000 registered in Iowa.

This is an interesting comparison and we will pursue it a little further. Kansas has 2000 more automobiles than she would have under an equal distribution of wealth with Massachusetts, registering 13,000 to the 22,000 the larger population of Massachusetts shows. Nebraska, home of Bryanism, insurgency and Congressman, Norris, has 4000 automobiles more than Connecticut, land of the tariff plutocracy (15,200 to 11,000) though the margin between the populations of the two states is not wide. The Wisconsin of the La Follette has about 1000 too many automobiles, as compared with Massachusetts, for that due regard to distribution of wealth for which her unflinching insurgent statesmanship stands. Nebraska, Kansas and Minnesota, all agricultural states, all distance Connecticut, home of the protected octopi, in automobiles more than they outdistance her in population, while Iowa, with less population than Massachusetts, has 2000 more machines on the road. It is very clear that Iowa has been getting too much, to quote her peerless Cummins, of "the spoils of ultraexclusive socialism."

The truth is, of course, that both industrial and agricultural states have prospered under tariff protection in such degree that the automobile, as the outward sign of their prosperity, has multiplied exceedingly in all of them. The total registration this year, to date, reaches the enormous figure of 780,000. Rhode Island, a state of which it is said that pluto in the person of Senator Aldrich has organized the most plutonic of plutocracies there, has less than 5000 machines against the 15,200 of Missouri, which may explain why other agricultural states of the West drew cards, which, as they now look them over, are moving them to deep and loud profanity. The manufacturing states which then discarded and drew, instead of standing pat, are also, of late, beginning to make faces behind their new cards, in a way to indicate that they have found nothing to bet on.—Globe-Democrat.

Do Ghosts Haunt Swamps. No, Never. Its foolish to fear a fancied evil, when there are real and deadly perils to guard against the swamps and marshes, bayous and lowlands. These are the malaria germs that cause ague, chills and fever, weakness, aches in the bones and muscles and may induce deadly typhoid. But Electric Bitters destroys and casts out these vicious germs from the blood. "Three bottles drove all the malaria from my system," wrote Wm. Fretwell, of Lucama, N. C. "and I've had fine health ever since." Use this safe, sure remedy only. 50c at Chas. I. Cough's.

Electric Bitters is a priceless blessing to women troubled with fainting and dizzy spells, headache, weakness, debility, constipation or kidney disorders.
