

FOOTBALL IS DANGEROUS.

If You Don't Think So Try to Start a Game in Turkey.

It is, or was until recently, a difficult matter to be a sportsman in Turkey. One Rehad Bey tried it, with a result weird enough to serve as a basis for a detective story or a comic opera.

The young Turk had organized a football team among his friends, together with some Greeks and Armenians, and began practicing. Not very long after, in the middle of the night, police came to his house and carried him off to Scutari. There he was submitted to a long interrogation as to the club and the game of football.

The authorities were convinced that they had found a great plot and that the club must be a secret society. A special messenger was sent for the jail, and that was duly examined and found to be an infernal machine. The rules of the game were considered to be another piece of damning evidence, and still worse were the sweaters and colors of the club.

After long deliberation the culprit was sent to the higher police authorities in Stamboul, who went through a second long examination and came to the conclusion that the empire had been saved from disintegration by the early discovery of a great plot. They dispatched the whole matter to be inquired into at the sultan's palace at Yildiz, and a special commission took the matter in hand.

After much careful thought and examination of the evidence of the crime it was decided that there might not be nothing in it, but that it must not be committed again.—Harper's Weekly.

UNWRITTEN BOOKS.

Stories Planned and Promised That Never Saw the Light.

The Bookman republishes a paper by Professor Brauder Matthews entitled "Unwritten Books" that was first printed many years ago. Professor Matthews speaks of the projected books and plays that never saw the light and have been read, like bills in congress, by title only.

Moliere planned a comedy under the title "L'Homme de Cour," which was to be his masterpiece. Nothing is known of it today. Richard Brinsley Sheridan intended to write a follow-up to "The School for Scandal" and "The Rivals." The subject was "Affectation." It never went beyond a few random notes.

For years the paper covers of every new book that Victor Hugo issued continued to announce as soon to be published a romance entitled "La Quanguergroge." Many posthumous volumes of the French poet's writing in prose and verse have been sent forth by his literary executors, but of this oddly entitled fiction nothing has been heard. In 1862 Alphonse Daudet announced as in press a volume of short stories to be called "La Pentameron." The book remained unpublished and apparently unwritten. The younger Dumas has left on record more than one reference to a comedy to be called "Francillon," but never given to the public.

Roasting an Egg.

Every boy and girl down on the farm in times gone by used to roast eggs, pieces of meat and potatoes in embers in the old wood cook stove or in the big open fireplace. Barns were searched for hens' nests, and the fine, fresh eggs were wrapped in heavy paper. The paper was dampened, and several thicknesses of it protected the eggs from scorching. You know, wet paper in a hall is hard to burn. Well, the wrapped up eggs were put on the live coals and partially covered by them. In from five to fifteen minutes the egg was roasting hot and ready to eat with salt, pepper and butter. A pin hole was made in the big end of the egg so as to let the steam escape to keep it from bursting the shell and the meats from running out. If you have never as a small boy roasted such eggs you have missed one of child's hood's greatest joys.—New York Press.

How It Got There.

A gamekeeper was going over his master's estate one morning, when he encountered a gentleman of the poaching class. The gamekeeper noticed that the other's hat was bulging in a curious manner. After subjecting the hat to an examination he found a fine young pheasant.

"How did this get here?" the gamekeeper asked, glaring at the culprit.

"Howed if I know," growled the poacher, gazing at the pheasant with an appawful look of great perplexity.

THE ROAD TO BALTIMORE.

It Was Over Floating Bridges in the Old, Old Days.

The road to Baltimore is over the owest of three floating bridges which have been thrown across the Schuylkill river in the neighborhood of Philadelphia. The view on passing this river, which is about 250 yards wide, is beautiful. The banks on each side are high and for many miles above afford the most delightful situations of villas. A very elegant one, laid out in English taste, is seen on passing the river just above the bridge. Adjoining to it are public gardens and a house of entertainment with several good rooms, to which the citizens of Philadelphia resort in great numbers during the summer seasons.

The floating bridges are formed of large trees, which are placed in the water transversely and are chained together. Beams are then laid lengthways upon these and the whole boarded over to render the way convenient for passengers. On each side there is a railing. When very heavy carriages go across these bridges they sink a few inches below the surface of the water, but the passage is by no means dangerous. They are kept in an even direction across the river by means of chains and anchors in different parts and are also strongly secured on both shores. Over that part of the river where the channel lies they are so contrived that a piece can be removed to allow vessels to pass through.—From "Travels Through the States of North America," by Isaac Weld, Jr., 1795.

A TARIFF COMEDY.

Spain Finally Won in the "Case of the Screw Propeller."

Every British captain calling at Spanish ports is familiar with the "case of the screw propeller." The story is told for the benefit of landsmen in Mr. G. H. B. Ward's "The Truth About Spain." "The steel screw of a cargo steamer which traded with Bilbao and other northern ports was damaged beyond repair during a rough voyage. The vessel was beached pending the arrival of a new propeller from England.

"At last, when the steamer was about to sail, the captain was informed that he had to pay a duty for putting ashore a manufactured article—namely, the 'scrapped' or broken propeller. The captain protested and offered to drop it into the sea, but the officials were obdurate. They seized the ship and demanded payment. The captain declined to ease the tension by the customary bribe and complained to the British foreign office.

"The duty was returned, but the captain was warned to be very careful about contraband, and for several voyages nothing occurred. Several months later some slight inaccuracy in the ship's papers and the declaration of cargo gave the excisemen their chance, and the vessel was not allowed to leave until a heavy fine, corresponding to the original propeller duty, was paid."

Mount Etna.

Mount Etna is one of the great volcanoes of the earth. It is great in size, great in activity, great in beauty. In size it would cover the entire metropolitan district of New York and the surrounding counties. Its height is 11,000 feet above sea level. As to its power, one of these eruptions some centuries ago killed 80,000 people, which is probably more than Vesuvius has ever done in all its existence as a volcano, not excepting the great eruption of 79 A. D., which destroyed the city of Herculaneum and Pompeii. As to its beauty, this is also very difficult to describe. It is teeming with life, animal and vegetable, and is snow covered one-half the year. The other half it is bare to its very summit.—Christian Herald.

The Gate to Tibet.

Just outside Tachienlu is the stone bridge which is called "the gate to Tibet." Tachienlu is a narrow little city which had to conform its shape to the contour of the mountains which shut it in. There is hardly a foot of level ground within the walls. It is the great emporium of trade between China and Tibet, where the Chinese exchange tea for musk and gold dust. Many red frocked lamas are to be seen about the city, most of whom live in large lamaseries outside the walls. On the flat roofs of the houses flutter innumerable prayer flags, giving to the winds the universal Tibetan hymn of praise.

Imagine a restaurant costing $10,000,000. The Rheingold, in Berlin, accommodates more than 4,000 persons at one time, giving employment to 1,000 persons, of whom eighty-five are cooks. At this place it is possible to get a good dinner for 30 cents and at any price from that up.—Chicago Post.

BAYOCEAN SUIT OUSTED AS UNFAIR.

Attorneys for Both Sides Agree to Quash Request for Receiver.

By consent of attorneys for the plaintiffs and the defendants, Judge Gantenbein Saturday dismissed the suit to have a receiver appointed for Bayocean Park, a subdivision near Tillamook, put on the market by the Potter-Chapin Realty Company and later taken over by the T. B. Potter Realty Company.

The request for dismissal came as a result of a visit to Bayocean Park by a committee of the plaintiffs, all of whom are lot-purchasers and citizens of Salem. They came to the conclusion that the T. B. Potter Realty Company is performing and will perform all the improvements stipulated in the contracts with purchasers and that, therefore, a receiver is not necessary that their interests may be protected.

The suit was brought at the instance largely of A. M. Crawford, Attorney-General of Oregon, and O. C. Lauritzen, formerly sales manager of the property.

Conspiracy is Alleged.

It was planned to have Lauritzen selected as receiver. The plaintiffs of record were William Eastman, F. A. Paulson, F. J. Rice, Albert H. Gille, J. C. Griffith, J. W. Wilson, T. J. Cronise, W. F. Stanley and Dr. W. S. Mott.

In answering the suit, the Potter-Chapin Realty Company, the T. B. Potter Realty Company, T. B. Potter, T. Irving Potter and H. L. Chapin alleged that Mr. Crawford and Mr. Lauritzen had entered into a conspiracy to have a receiver appointed and that the plaintiffs of record had been promised that they would not have to bear any legal expense.

The suit was dismissed without prejudice and without costs to either party.

Letters similar to the following have been sent to Bayocean Park lot-purchasers by Attorney-General Crawford:

Dear Sir—Since the circular letter of the 3rd instance to investors in Bayocean Park property, a committee of three of the plaintiffs in the complaint filed have made a thorough investigation, by personal examination, and have reported as follows:

"Since filing the complaint in the above entitled suit, the undersigned have visited Bayocean and made a thorough investigation of the work already done, that now is being done, and the realty company's plans as explained by its agent, as to future development, and we are of the opinion that the company is intending in good faith to carry out the terms of its contracts to purchasers, and that it had difficulties to overcome not foreseen and not known to investors, such as lack of transportation, etc., and that the preliminary work, such as engineering, dredging channel, securing tools and machinery and commissions on sale, etc., have cost large sums, but most of which were necessary. Therefore we are of the opinion that plaintiffs have been too hasty in bringing this suit and recommend that it be dismissed."

Retraction is Made.

Based upon the foregoing report, we join in the foregoing recommendation.

The suit has accordingly been dismissed, and I believe that the project will be successful; that the company is putting in the improvements as fast as possible under the circumstances; and that Bayocean has all the natural attractions for and that it will become one of the best beach resorts on the Pacific Coast, and I believe that investments in said property are safe and will produce good returns; that while transportation has been delayed, one railroad will be completed to the bay this Fall, and that the enterprise is worthy of earnest support.

Relative to the former letter, I wish to say that I find that it was sent without full knowledge of the facts. That while Mr. T. B. Potter is drawing the salary mentioned, I am informed he is putting into the proposition several thousand dollars monthly of his own money, and that the purchase of Mr. H. L. Chapin's interest was purchased by Mr. Potter personally, and the building of the yacht was to furnish present means of transportation, and is the property of the company. While the former letter might be construed to indicate a charge of wrongful application of money of investors, I do not find evidence thereof, and believe the company is acting in good faith.

Potter Centures Lauritzen.

"The announcement of the dismissal of this suit did not come as a surprise to me," said T. Irving Potter, vice-president of the T. B. Potter Realty Company. There were no grounds for such an action, in the first place. It resulted from the vindictive motives of C. O. Lauritzen, formerly one of the salesmen of this company. He has expressed himself freely, as intending, sooner or later, to put the company in an embarrassing position, with the idea of working himself into the position of receiver for the company. With that idea in mind he went to Salem, where he had disposed of a number of Bayocean lots. He went to several of his friends there, deliberately misinformed them about the improvement work that had been done on the property and urged them to follow his suggestion and ask for the appointment of a receiver.

"None of these Salem investors had seen Bayocean for over a year, and neither had Lauritzen, and he found it easy to put the company in an unfavorable light. By these methods, he was able to secure the consent of 10 residents of Salem to make application for a receiver.

"Knowing what we had been doing at Bayocean, and the vigorous manner in which the work has been carried on, I believed that the Salem people had been misled. A few days later I went to Salem and interviewed those who had joined in the suit, and soon found that my belief was correct. I called a meeting of the petitioners and asked them to appoint a committee upon whose report they could rely implicitly to visit Bayocean with me, investigate every part of the property and the work that has been and is being done.

Committee is Being Named.

"They fell in with my suggestion and appointed W. F. Stanley, T. J. Cronise and Dr. W. S. Mott. These gentlemen accompanied me to Bayocean on our boat a week ago Saturday morning. Upon our arrival, they were escorted to every nook and corner of Bayocean, shown the water plant, electric plant, street grading, cement walks that had been laid and other improvements that have been completed. They remained until Monday morning, returning to Salem that afternoon.

"On their return to Salem, these committeemen reported to their associates that they had been wonderfully surprised at what they had discovered at Bayocean, and that they were perfectly satisfied with what they had seen. This report was sufficient for the other seven who had brought the suit, and they immediately decided to withdraw from the suit, which resulted in its dismissal Saturday afternoon.

"In justice to Attorney-General Crawford, who was induced by Lauritzen to send a letter to property owners at Bayocean, to urge the action which was brought, and in equal justice to all of those who were unfairly solicited to become parties to the suit, I must say that it is my honest opinion, gathered from what these several parties have told me, that they were absolutely misled in commencing this action. The letter which Mr. Crawford is voluntarily sending out, in contradiction of a previous one, explains to what extent he was misinformed by Lauritzen better than I can."
