 Editor J. S. Dellinger, of the Astorian, who was editor of the Tribune in the boom days of Bay City some twenty years ago, paid this city and county a visit this week. Speaking of harbor improvements, he said he pointed out to Representative Hawley the necessity of having one government engineer to look after the improvements on the Oregon Coast apart from the Columbia river. Mr. Dellinger was surprised when told that the government plans were to build a north jetty.

 The passing of the star routes have caused some inconvenience to the citizens who have been receiving their mail for a number of years on those routes and they will have to make other arrangements to procure it, either from the nearest point on the rural mail route. An effort is being made to secure a free rural delivery between here and Bay City, but owing to the fact that it takes a circuit of 20 miles with no back tracking and eight families to the miles before the inspectors will sanction a free rural route, and as this is almost impossible, owing to but one main road, it is not at all likely that the effort will succeed.
 The last mail stage over the Trask river came in on Monday, two stages bring in a large quantity of mail, and the same day the mail service on the railroad was inaugurated. The mail car came in on Saturday, with the passenger train, so as to be on hand to take the mail Monday morning. The railway mail service will supply the whole of the post offices in Tillamook county, with the exception of Wilson and Dolph, and Tillamook will become the distributing office for the whole of the mail for the south part of the county. It is expected that the Tillamook-Wil lamina star route will be discontinued and a new route established between this city and Cloverdale, which will leave here after the arrival of the mail.
 A delegation waited on the County Court to-day and presented the petition which was circulated over the county, which asks the court not to increase the road levy, to pay off the outstanding indebtedness and not to undertake any new work. The court listened to several while they expressed their grievances. It was stated that quite a number of the persons who had signed the petition were sorry they had done so. The court would not pledge itself as to what the road levy would be until it had carefully considered the needs of the county, and it was decided that the delegation would wait on the court again on the first Thursday in January when the court will decide what the levy will be.
 The cold storage plant has been broken into several times and several articles stolen. On Saturday the lock was pried off and about 30 bottles of beer were stolen. At first it was thought to be men who had broken in, but when it was discovered that it was a small space where they had entered on one occasion. Sheriff Crenshaw came to the conclusion that it was boys who had been doing the mischief, and obtaining a clue, secured a confession from one of the boys, who were Homer Baker, Erick Guldstrom, Pete Smith and Emil Stewart. It was Baker who pried off the lock on Saturday and on Sunday a number of school girls helped to drink the beer on the railroad track. Being under age they were brought before Judge Mason on Monday, who paroled them during good behavior.

FATAL AND DISTRESSING FIRE AT NEHALEM.
Heroism of Charles Eason in Attempting to Save Life of Little Girl.
 On Monday night at about twelve o'clock the home of Charles Eason caught fire and was destroyed, in which several persons narrowly escaped with their lives, but as it was four were seriously burned, one of whom died from the injuries on Wednesday. Albert Eason and his wife had spent Thanksgiving with their parents in Portland, and while there were notified that their two year old son was seriously sick with croup. They hurried home as quickly as possible, but the child died on Saturday, being sick one day, and before its parents reached home. The funeral took place on Monday, the burial being in the Bay View cemetery, which was conducted by Rev. J. T. Moore, of the M.E. Church.
 After the funeral services Albert Eason and his family returned to Charles Eason's home, where they remained for the night. They occupied the upstairs which was curtained off. They had all retired but Iva Eason, who is a girl of 15 years old, it seems, was preparing to do so, as she had her shoes off. She had been looking after one of boys, who was sick. She may have fell asleep on the bed, and it is supposed the curtains caught fire.
 The first intimation of the fire was when Warren Eason, one of the boys, jumped out of bed and cried out "Oh, papa." This woke Mrs. Albert Eason first, and then Mr. Eason. Mrs. Eason grabbed two of the boys and ran down stairs and Mr. Eason caught up a quilt with the object of smothering the fire, but could not do so after making a strong effort. When he awoke the curtains, which curtained off the room, were all ablaze and his daughter Eva's dress was also on fire. She had evidently fallen asleep on the bed, as she had not disrobed, but she had taken her shoes off. It is thought the curtains caught fire from the lamp. In the excitement the children woke up and made their escape while Mr. Eason was battling with the flames. He was baffled in this when the lamp exploded, throwing the room into one mass of flame. He turned round to the place where his wife had been, but was unable to find it. Mr. Eason managed to find his way to the stairs and escaped. There were nine in the room when the fire started and they all succeeded in getting down stair but one. When Albert Eason reached the bottom of the stairs his wife called out that Bertie was still in bed. It was at this time that Charles Eason showed his heroism. He rushed up stairs into the room, which was all ablaze and fought his way through the flames, although he could not see where he was going. He reached for the child on the bed, but could not find her. He heard her groaning and gasping for breath on the floor. Groping his way through the fire, he picked her up and rushed to the stairway. He fell and his oldest son helped him get up. Mrs. Albert Eason took her child from his arms, who was unconscious, but afterward came to and talked. She was so badly burned that she succumbed to the injuries on Wednesday.

 Charles Eason and Iva Eason were taken to the Sanatorium at Bay City. Charles is badly burned about the face, arms and hands, and Iva is also badly burned about the hands.
 Albert Eason and Bertie were brought to this city. Albert is also badly burned about the face and hands, while his daughter was burned so badly that no hopes were entertained for its recovery. She was six years old and died Wednesday.
 The house was entirely burned, and this leaves the families in bad shape. A subscription will be started in this city to relieve them in this sad and painful occurrence. The heroism of Charles Eason is highly commended for the risk he took in trying to save the life of the little girl, which will no doubt cripple him or life.
