In the basement under the hai! there was a large exhibit of butter and cheese, and all sorts of dairy equipments and machinery, from the great cheese vat to the separator, from antiseptic boots to a germproof thermometer.

The butter and cheese was scored by judges, for many valuable prizes are to be distributed for the best of these products, and the competition was keen, these' prizes meaning a great deal to those who capture them. Just how butter is scored, I do not know; but I can remember of occasionally during my life going against butter that ought not only to have been scored, but exoriated. Did you ever eat any of the choice Tillamook cheese? Well, it is as fine as can be made anywhere, and brings the top price wherever offered, just as the Tillamook butter does. Perhaps some of my readers will remember the old "walking delegate" cheese, cheese that could not only walk alone, but haul the owner along with it, real cheesey cheese, real live cheese, cheese that you did not dare talk back to in fear of a blow in the solar plexus.

Such cheese is made-well, not in Tillamook. You can buy a pound of Tillamook cheese-and that is all you need say to the grocer, just say give me the Tillamook-and you will know you have the best that can be made from the purest and richest milk and cream.

Every Oregonian ought to blush when he remembers that we have in the entire state only about 800,-000 acres of our land given over to the dairy interests-and there are 9,000,000 acres of equally good land awaiting the coming of the cow. As it is, we produce less than $18,-000,000 worth of dairy products a year, when we have the resources 000,000 worth.
