The Tillamook Headlight,

Editorial Snap Shots.

The Nehalem Enterprise calls attention to the fact that F. L. Sappington had signed the Fairview petition and then circulated a petition himself for the Garibaldi road. This was another case where a person had signed the petition before he understood the exact situation.

Probably a local attorney would have done equally as well as the outside attorney in the Port of Tillamook case, and at half the fee. Yet, somehow, here in Tillamook, people like to pay double for "outside" advice and goods to what they could get it at home. We admit we are a peculiar people in this respect—but, oh, how green we must appear to those who "sting" us in that way.

Since the good roads agitation commenced our attention have often been called to the deplorable condition of the roads in Tillamook City. We admit that they are bad. But what is the reason? For a number of years a large proportion of the road tax collected within the corporate limit of the city went towards improving the county roads. That is one reason why they have not been kept up to the standard of the county roads.

Talk about high taxation, it looks to us that outside attorney's fees come high, and although it is an indirect tax, some individuals would rather pay an indirect tax of $10 to an attorney than a few cent direct tax to the county. When they have to pay both the indirect and direct tax, it comes high. Bro. Duniway's little speal to the farmers about high taxation loses its logic when it comes to high, big, exorbitant attorney's fees.

The snap shot man wish everybody in Tillamook County a Happy Christmas, and hope that 1913 will be one of the most progressive and prosperous years in the history of the county. It will be if we all boost and pull together, for the county is on the dawn of a bright future and many important improvements will follow one another in quick succession in permanent developments. This is what we have all been waiting for so patiently, so let us all vie with each other and put our shoulder to the wheel and help the good work along. That is what we feel our progressive citizens will do and strive for.

In the death of Mrs. J. S. Deihl last week Tillamook County has lost another of the good women who helped to make the world brighter, even though it was in a small sphere. She was a devoted, faithful wife; an affectionate, loving mother, and a true, constant friend, who cheerfully did her part in an effort to make others happy, for she was always ready to lend a helping hand to cheer and comfort. It is unselfish women like Mrs. Deihl who make homes happy, but when they are taken to their reward and there is a vacant chair around the family table, then we realize their true worth. The deceased lady did her part to make Tillamook County a place worth living in. She is worthy of our respect and admiration, for she was a good woman. We deplore her death and share with the bereaved their deep sorrow.

The Board of Engineers has decided that the Maine was blown up by two mines. We do not and never have thought that the Maine was destroyed by an external explosion. The fact that her two magazines exploded is sufficient proof in our mind that it was her own munitions of war which was the cause of the sad accident. This is a reasonable conclusion to arrive at, for those who have kept track of the many appalling accidents which have taken place with modern fighting ships, loaded with explosive and combustible material, have considered the explosion on the Maine another of those accidents which must be looked for once in a while. In more ways than one the battle ships of the present day are dangerous affairs, and it is a surprise to us that more are not blown up than there are. But when anything does happen to them, they are like so many big coffins, carrying hundreds of human lives down to a watery grave.

The Tillamook City saloon monopoly was badly scared on Monday. The council granted a saloon license to a person who was going to sell a glass of beer at 5c. a glass. He was the first to apply for a license and had deposited the money. On the advice of Mayor Talmage, who claimed that the present saloon keepers had a vested interest and only five could be allowed, the council reconsidered the matter and rescinded the license, after which five licenses were granted to the present saloon keepers. Then the city council, to break up the saloon monopoly, so that 5c. a glass beer could be obtained, introduced and passed an ordinance increasing the number of saloons. This had the unanimous support of the councilmen, and as Mayor Talmage vetoed it, it remains to be seen whether they will pass it over the mayor's head, on whether one or more of them will switch around and sustain the monopoly. We understand that proceedings are to be brought to compel the city council to allow the first man a license.

The discovery of the bulb clover, which we mentioned last week, and a product of Tillamook county, is of far more importance to the farmers than the good roads or bar improvements. If this new clover is what it is claimed to be, then every farmer in the county should be getting busy planting it, especially on the prairie land in the center of the county. Instead of going over the county and knocking improvements, this should prove far more interesting to the dairy interests. It looks almost too good a thing to be true to be told that one acre of land will produce from 30 to 50 tons of green feed, summer and winter, yet we have no right to dispute those who have grown it and make positive assertions to prove it. As it appears to be a native of this county, with no name for it, we think it should be called "The Wonderful Tillamook Clover." What a transformation it will make in the dairy business of this county if this clover proves to be what it is claimed to be. The Granges and the Creamery Associations should loose no time in making a thorough investigation.

It is reported that proceedings are to be brought against the county to stop the payment of all outstanding road warrants above the $5,000 limit. There may be a number of mean and vindictive persons in Tillamook county because they cannot have their own way and control county affairs, but we did not know that anyone would be guilty of depriving a person of his wages for honest toil on the public roads. The present agitation is reaching the climax for malice and spite. No honest person should side in with such a dishonest movement, for those who start in with the intention of forcing the county to repudiate its honest debts for road work are doing it for no good reason and to injure the reputation of Tillamook county, to say nothing about the discounting of county warrants. The agitators have surely gone the limit. But mark what the Headlight has to say. The people of Tillamook County will never sanction repudiating its debt for work, and as it can legislate to pay them by the sovereign will of the people, the only persons to derive any benefit from the agitation are the outside attorneys, who are paid great big fees.

No matter how hard part of our citizens may contend for a 6 mill road levy or how others may strive for a 10 mill levy, it is up to the County Court to consider every phase of the controversy. Nor must the needs of the county be overlooked and the question of excessive taxation must be taken into consideration. We believe the Court will carefully weigh these matters and do what it thinks is best for the county as a whole. It will not be able to please everybody, for that is out of the question. To put the whole controversy into a nutshell it amounts to this: There is a difference of opinion as to whether $90,000 or $150,000 shall be raised to pay off the outstanding road warrants and for road work next year, or, in other words, a difference of opinion as to raising an extra $60,000. Of that $60,000 the timber interests will pay $45,000, leaving only $15,000 to be raised locally. No one knows what the final decision of the court will be, but what ever it may be, we shall acquiesce in and continue to shout for good roads and more of them. The Headlight, in common with all fair minded persons have to admit that the County Court has done some good permanent work this year, and it should be given a free hand to carry out a great many improvements it proposes to do, but it will not be able to do so if money is not available.

A MISTAKE CORRECTED.

Editor Accused of Assuming Dictatorial Relations with Tillamook County.

TO THE EDITOR: In the last issue of the Tillamook Headlight there are two articles in the editorial snap shot column relating to the Johnson bridge which was built during the term of the undersigned as County Judge that are so unfair, unreasonable and untruthful that I am compelled to make reply, not with a view to champion the cause of the Fairview people, who I am sure do not need my services, but from a sense of duty to the people of the county and myself.

In the first item you state "when the Jenkins and Johnson bridges were built there were no roads at Nehalem, etc."

Please let me correct you in this matter. During the summer that the Johnson bridge was built and soon after its completion ex-Judge Scott and Mr. Alberts of Salem, Fred Zaddach, Geo. W. Bodyfelt, H. V. Alley and the undersigned were taken by Rollie Watson in his automobile to the Clatsop county line, going up on the north fork of the Nehalem river road and returning on the Coal Creek road. We then went to Nehalem city and back to Tillamook and on that trip Judge Scott and Mr. Alberts complimented Tillamook county many times upon the fact of having such good roads, which seemed to please Mr. Alley, and rightfully, since he had considerable to do in constructing the roads over which we traveled, so the statement that there was no roads at Nehalem when the Johnson bridge was built, cannot be true.

There was something being done in the South part of the county at the same time, the old trustle at Blum's was being replaced by a fill, a new grade was made through the green timber and a rock crushing plant was purchased and installed on Beaver creek, and the facts are that are that the North and South ends of the county was at the time the Johnson bridge was built receiving their full share and more of the county road fund (not including Foley, whose funds were always plundered), and continued so to do. Your statement that the bridge is a good thing now on account of the rural free delivery but you did not like it then, etc., cannot be taken for much when the rural delivery delivery question was made prominent in the argument for the bridge and the reason before the bridge was built a petition signed largely by the farmers and business men of this town was presented to the court praying for the construction of the Johnson bridge, and if your name is not there it is owing to the probable fact that you were not invited, and a delegation including A. W. Severance, P.M., made a personal appeal to the court for the bridge in order to get the free delivery established.

The statement "although it was a political pull some of the people had in that vicinity and the paying back of a political debt that the bridge was built," is wholly and absolutely untrue. The bridge was built because the requirements of the county demanded it, notwithstanding the Editor could not see until three years later what others could see at that time.

The Jenkins' bridge was built some years ago and I believe before the Editor assumed dictatorial relations with Tillamook County, and the writer had nothing to do with it. Respectfully,

H. F. GOODSPEED.

[We are glad the hon. gentleman has called our attention to and given us an opportunity to correct a paragraph which is misconstrued because we had failed to properly convey what we intended. We should have made it more clear and stated that it was under the Sappington administration that the Jenkins' bridge was built and the movement started to build the Johnson bridge, and it was under the political log rolling of that administration, not of Judge Goodspeed, that we had in mind's eye, when Nehalem did not obtain fair treatment and had no bridges or roads of any account north of the forde of the river. The editor is perfectly aware of the pull that was made during the Sappington and Conder administrations to have the Johnson bridge built, and one of the objects certain persons had in view when they induced our correspondent to run for office, which was all prior to the effort to secure a free rural delivery. Our correspondent will please accept this explanation, for we never had any intention whatever of conveying a wrong impression or criticizing him. But the ex-judge has also laid himself open to criticism in a parting shot when he says: "Before the editor assumed dictatorial relations with Tillamook county." We do not know whether to feel honored or laugh at such a remark. Because an editor is not afraid to express an opinion without fear or favor, is that "dictatorial relations with Tillamook county?" An editor may not be right in every particular, for no one is infallible, not even a county judge. But it is certainly comical to be called a dictator when we are not entitled to that honor. Our correspondent knows that we never on any occasion attempted to dictate to the county court when he was judge, nor have we done so before or after his term of office. Had we made a practice of attending the commissioner's court and butting into the deliberations of that body, the same as a certain gentleman used to do, then our correspondent would have been justified in saying that the Editor, and not the other fellow, had "assumed dictatorial relations with Tillamook county." Although there was considerable comment at the time the special plenipotentiary from Fairview was attending the meetings and butting into county affairs, we refrained from making any comment, for we realized, no matter who composed the court, with so many interests and conflicting opinions to contend with, that the county judge and commissioners are confronted with difficulties which are hard to decide and the best and the right course to pursue, and it was for that reason that the Headlight gave Judge Goodspeed's administration courteous treatment and brushed aside many of the little things which cropped up as beneath our notice, for it seems that no sooner are men elected to office than a lot of howling coyotes are always on their trail. In closing, we want to inform our correspondent that if the editor has "assumed dictatorial relations with Tillamook County," is because we have never allowed anyone to dictate, control or outline the policy of the Headlight, and we concede the same right to public officials and public bodies. Because the Headlight, as a newspaper, has a strong influence in the county, it is absurd for our correspondent to infer that the editor is a dictator, when it is the sovereign will of the people, or what is known as the Oregon system, that is and has been in full force for many years.—Ed.]
