

TRIBUTE TO SELLING PAID BY JOURNAL

Portland Newspaper Says He is a Friend of the People.

Stand for Statement No. One Which Many Republicans Refused to do so.

Proving that a long career of consistent fighting for measures that bring the state government closer to the people, and also sends the name of Oregon to the top of the column in advanced legislation, the following extract from the Portland Daily Journal of Friday, February 22, 1912, not only endorses the progressive policies of Ben Selling which are now laws on the statute books of Oregon, but it also shows beyond question the standing of this man among the people and press of the state:

MR. SELLING

Senator Ben Selling has announced his intention to contest for the Republican nomination for United States senator. For a number of years the political course of Mr. Selling and The Journal have run along much the same lines. Support of progressive methods of government in Oregon when they were badly in need of support, brought Mr. Selling and The Journal on common ground.

When there was need of Statement One candidates for the legislature, they were not always easy to find. There was a time when most of the higher-ups of the Republican party in Oregon were, and some of them still are, against Statement One. It was in such a time that Mr. Selling was a welcome addition to the forces that were striving for direct election of senator, and for elimination of disgraceful deadlocks at Salem.

Without at all entering into the support of Mr. Selling's present candidacy, it is as little as The Journal can do to thus acknowledge the aid Mr. Selling has been to the cause of popular government in Oregon, an acknowledgment that, in fairness, is also due to Senator Bourne.

SELLING IS THE PROPER MAN

"Naturally, Ben Selling would be my choice for the United States senate," said a prominent Portland German to a reporter for the Zeitung. "He knows the people of Oregon, and his interests are here in the state. He knows what the people of Oregon need, and I don't believe there is a man alive better able to supply those needs."

Right in line with that sentiment is another, very generally expressed, to the effect that while Mr. Selling has always been one of the most progressive of citizens, insistent upon the development of the state and the utilization of all its resources, he is the implacable foe of graft in all its forms. Recognizing the fact that all public business must be met from the pockets of the people, he stands firmly against the waste of public money.

BEN SELLING

Oregon has gone forward amazingly in the past twenty years; and in every step of its progress Ben Selling has been in the front rank of Oregon's citizens. He has done his part. He has borne his share of the burdens, and discharged his share of the duties. He has asked no man to perform his tasks.

Whoever who own homes, and the man who pay in industry for the good things of life, want to intrust their public interests to a man who has borne a good shoulder to shoulder with them, who knows them and their weaknesses, and whose citizenship is of the sturdy character which asks no special favors from any one.

Our people know Ben Selling. They know him for many years. He has been fair with them, and they can confidently trust him.—Northwestern, a Portland German Newspaper.

BOURNE'S TAX $2.44; NO REAL PROPERTY

Portland Journal Tells of Senator's Tax Contribution.

Reputed Millionaire Pays $2.44 to Help Defray Oregon's Upkeep.

It will be interesting in the extreme to every citizen of Oregon at this particular time to know to what extent the senior United States senator, Jonathan Bourne, pays in the way of taxes in Oregon. Here is a statement from the Portland Journal of March 3, 1912:

BOURNE'S TAXES $2.44; NO REAL PROPERTY

The tax rolls of Multnomah county show Jonathan Bourne, Jr., senior senator from Oregon, will pay $2.44 in taxes this year. This is on his personal property, which consists of office furniture in his office in the Chamber of Commerce building. This furniture is assessed at $100. No assessment of real property appears on the tax books. The registration books show the senator's home to be on the second floor of the Portland hotel, but the tax books do not show he has any personal property there.

—Portland Journal, March 3, 1912.
 Yet Senator Bourne is reputed to be worth fifteen millions of dollars ($15,000,000.00).

He owns extensive interests in a large cotton goods manufacturing plant on the Atlantic coast. Hence his vote in the senate for a high tariff on cotton goods.

Senator Bourne has been in Oregon, so far as known to the public, but three times since he was elected senator over five years ago and has spent in this state, so far as the public knows, less than three weeks in the state.

Does it seem reasonable that a man can be familiar with the needs of a state who gives it so little time, and does it seem possible that a senator can have the welfare of Oregon thoroughly at heart whose fortune is in the east and who contributes but $2.44 to taxes in the state from which he was elected?

BUSINESS MEN FOR SENATOR

Catholic Sentinel Says Time Has Come For Action.

The time is passing—or past—when oratory is the one essential for statesmanship. More and more the country recognizes the need of the business man in politics, and the value of business men in office.

The substantial advancement of the nation has been made very largely by business men. And it is safe to say that there would have been fewer haltings in the progress of the republic if the fervid policies of men who scorned commercial pursuits had been tempered more with the calm judgment and the shrewd foresight of business men.

Oregon needs business men in its councils. Oratory is a fine thing, and there is a joyous thrill in brilliant pictures of imaginative statesmen. But states and nations have to deal with conditions, and not altogether with theories.

Ben Selling is a successful business man. For fifty years he has been profitably engaged in commercial pursuits. Personal interests have not engrossed all his time, and he has devoted much of his life to activities which make for the betterment of his fellow citizens, the advancement of the community. Never once has public enterprise or private friend lost by following his advice. He has been safe and sane in everything.

Development costs money, and the price of public improvements must be paid in cash—whether it is the Panama canal, or the forestry preserves in Oregon. And every dollar of the mighty expenditure comes from the pockets of the people. The citizens provide the means, after all. Therefore, it is in the interests of the general public, of the average American, that the selection of a business man for the United States Senate is urged. Therefore, it is in the cause of every class that Ben Selling's election to the United States Senate is advocated by his friends.

His long residence in Oregon makes certain his acquaintance with the needs of the people of this state. His wide experience in commercial and social and business affairs makes sure that he is perfectly equipped to secure the measures that are needed for the general good. And every act of his life, both public and private, gives guaranty of good faith.

At no time, and in no conceivable circumstances could the public service of business men be so necessary, or prove so valuable.

Oregon's contribution to the history of the nation is glorious. The prosperity of the state and the permanence of her institutions can best be preserved by the counsel of Ben Selling, a practical man.—Catholic Sentinel.

BEN SELLING SAVED PEOPLE FROM PANIC

When Bank Failed He Promptly Offered Par for Pass Books.

Loan Sharks and Brokers Thwarted By Him—Saved People Large Sums.

"Help promptly is of double value," says the proverb.

Oregon people, and Portland people in particular, will remember the failure of the Title Guarantee and Trust company, of Portland, in October, 1907. The embarrassment of that institution was bad enough of itself. But it came at a time when the breaking of one bank came perilously near producing a panic in which many banks and business houses must go down—to the measureless damage of thousands.

It was a time for men to help each other; a time for business interests to stand together in order to save depositors from a heavy loss.

Disastrous as a settlement of material discount would have been, it was feared for a time that it was the best settlement that could be made. And if made, it certainly would have resulted in widespread and ruinous loss to thousands all over Oregon.

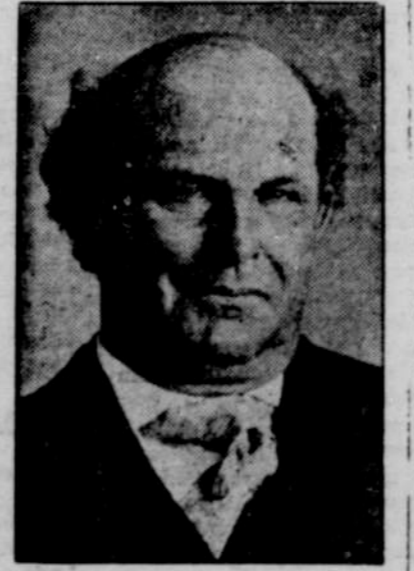

In that crisis Ben Selling promptly came forward with a better offer. He proposed to take over the claims of the depositors at seventy-five cents on the dollar in good, solid cash, and an additional twenty-five cents in merchandise. It was absolutely equivalent to a hundred cents on the dollar—every penny that was involved.

There was an instance of needed help promptly given. It averted a threatened and imminent panic. It restored the general confidence in banks and business houses. It absolutely insured depositors against loss. It did more than any other one thing to enable commercial Portland to ride the troubled seas of 1907—the most dangerous period since 1896.

And it was typical of Ben Selling. It required financial resources, splendid judgment of conditions, and a superb confidence in the essential stability of his city and his state, and the fairness of his fellow citizens.

WHAT BILL HANLEY THINKS OF BEN SELLING

"Oregon for Oregon" is the slogan of William Hanley, the picturesque representative of Central Oregon, who, because of his marked facial and physical resemblance to William Jennings Bryan, has many times been mistaken for the thrice-defeated candidate of the Democracy for the presidency. It is for the reason of "Oregon for Oregon" and because Hanley's views coincide closely with those of Ben Selling, candidate for the Republican nomination for United States senator, that Hanley feels very friendly toward the candidacy of Selling.

WILLIAM HANLEY

Hanley came out of the Selling headquarters yesterday looking cheerful. Reflecting that Mr. Selling in his platform had definitely committed himself to securing for Oregon its just share of the reclamation fund for promoting various irrigation projects in this state, Mr. Hanley said it would be advisable for the voters of this state to elect a senator who could be depended upon to do all in his power to secure for the state all that belonged to it in the way of money for originating and completing irrigating enterprises.

"Up to the present time the state of Oregon is short about $3,000,000 of its part of the reclamation fund, money that should have been used for the construction of irrigation projects in this state and which money was actually given to other states," said Mr. Hanley.

"Mr. Selling is pledged to the recovery of that money for use here, and if anybody can do it I am convinced that he will at least lend his best efforts in that direction. My acquaintance of several years with Mr. Selling has convinced me that he always has stood square-toed to the front for Oregon interests and it is about time we had such a representative at Washington."—From a Portland newspaper.
