

W.C.T.U. Meetings.

On Friday of last week, Mrs. Ada Wallace Unruh, State President and organizer of the W. C. T. U. arrived in the city from Portland, and on Friday evening gave her first address, subject, "Sowing and Reaping," which was a very fine effort, full of many ideas that everyone ought to have knowledge of.

Mrs. Unruh is a woman of great attainments and is so thoroughly consecrated to her great work that it is inspiring to hear her. The city is to be congratulated because of the fact that Mrs. Unruh was able to organize a real live W.C.T.U. organization here of 27 members.

The following officers were elected for the organization here: Mrs. E. F. Rogers, Pres; Daisy Allender, Corresponding Secretary; Ellen Bewley, Recording Secretary; Mrs. Ona Phillips, Treasurer.

The society will meet at the U. B. Church on Wednesday afternoon at 2:30. A large attendance is desired at this first meeting.

A TACTFUL VOTER.

How He Decided Upon His Ballot In an Alsatian Election.

The simple people of Alsace, who retain in their hearts a strong love for France at the same time that they are desirous not to offend their German rulers too much, frequently have a hard time of it when they go to the ballot to vote for representatives in the German parliament.

In one election in a certain Alsatian district the two candidates were Kable, an Alsatian of French sympathies, who had protested against the annexation after the war of 1870, and a German.

On election day a peasant went to the polling place, which was presided over by a German official. The peasant had in one hand a ticket on which was printed the name of Kable and in the other a ticket bearing the name of the German candidate.

"Mein herr," he said to the German election official, "will you tell me which of these tickets is the better one?"

The officer looked at him. "Why, this is much preferable," said he, indicating the German's ticket.

"Ah, I thank you," answered the peasant. "I will keep it next my heart." He folded it carefully and put it inside his coat.

"As for this other, then," said he, with an air of putting it away from him as an unworthy thing, "I will leave it here." And he put the Kable ticket in the ballot box.—New York Press.

ASTONISH THE SHARKS.

Aitutaki Islanders Pull Them Up by the Tail With Ropes.

The Island of Aitutaki, one of the Hervey group, in the Pacific, is surrounded by islets underneath which are submarine caverns, the homes of sharks. These sharks, which are about six feet long, are esteemed a delicacy, and the natives catch them with nooses.

Arrived over the entrance to the shark cave, the fisherman leaves his canoe to the care of his companion and dives to the bottom, carrying with him a strong cord tied into a slip knot. He expects to find two or three sharks at home well satisfied and drowsy after feeding in the lagoon, with their tails toward the entrance. Selecting the largest, the diver adroitly adjusts a noose over the tail, taking care that it hangs loosely. If he has another noose he secures a second shark.

The shark catcher now, with one bound on the white, sandy bottom, rises to the surface in order to assist his friends in hauling up the fish. The astonished shark suddenly finds itself astonished fall first to the surface, when a smart blow from an ax between the eyes or on the tail ends its career.—Exchange.

A Growsome Pun.

A foreigner who was at work shoveling ore in the bottom of a vessel which lay in the port of a city in northern Ohio jumped upon the bucket to ride out of the hold. The increased burden broke the hook by which the bucket was attached to the lifting cable. Mau and bucket fell back into the hold, and the man received injuries from which he died. An administrator was appointed, who sued the hoisting company for damages. The lawyer employed for the plaintiff was in conversation one day with a friend, who remarked:

"I should think that the company, after an accident like that, would lose no time in installing stronger hoisting apparatus. It ought to be sufficient warning."

"Sufficient!" exclaimed the lawyer. "Why, man, that was only a drop in the bucket."—Philadelphia North American.

History on Coins.

The knowledge of coins and medals through the inscriptions and devices thereon is to an extent a history of the world from the date in which metals were applied to such uses, says the New Era. Events engraved upon these remain hidden in tombs or buried in the bosom of the earth, deposited there in ages long past by careful and miserly hands, only awaiting the research of the patient investigator to tell the story of their origin. Numismatic treasures are scanned as evidence of facts to substantiate statements on papyrus or stone, and dates are often supplied to define the border line between asserted tradition and positive history. Gibbon remarks, "If there were no other record of Hadrian his career would be found written upon the coins of his reign."

Waste Paper in Paris.

Paris police give strict attention to the act against throwing waste papers and refuse upon the streets. An absent-minded old gentleman carelessly dropped a hundred franc note from his waistcoat pocket, whereupon a sharp-eyed policeman requested the old gentleman to give his name and address or submit to arrest. But when the offender reached into the gutter and picked up the waste paper and opened it before the policeman's eyes he was let off with an apology and a profound bow.

Sentiment.

"What is life without sentiment?" exclaimed the romantic person. "Yes," replied Mr. Growber, "but it doesn't always promote a square deal. Sentiment is what enables a girl to trade a lock of her hair for a $400 engagement ring."—Washington Star.

Rather Rough.

Mrs. Benham—Why do they give him such a awful name as "Bristles"? Benham—Because he is always "on the hog."—New York Press.

SPITTING VENOM.

Snakes That Can Eject a Stream of Poison From Their Fangs.

A writer in the National Geographic Magazine says that some of the African, not the East Indian, cobras spit poison at any one who disturbs them.

The ringhals, genus sepedon, of southern Africa is a pitch black, exceedingly vicious cobra that receives its name from one or two broad white bands that show on the neck when the snake is reared in fighting pose. When he arches his neck to glare at the intruder he is able to eject fine jets of poison to a distance of six or eight feet. These deadly streams are dangerously well aimed.

The poison is ejected by contracting the lower jaw in such a fashion that the permanently erect fangs overlap it. At a movement of the adversary the reptile arches his neck till the head is thrown backward, bringing the tips of the hypodermic teeth to bear. The muscles over the poison glands are contracted, and a thin stream of venom leaves each fang. The observer is liable to receive the poison directly in the eyes, and the amount thus ejected is surprising.

The writer has seen the entire lower part of a large glass pane peppered with tiny drops, and in photographing or observing the snakes always protects his eyes with auto goggles. The front of his camera is often well splattered with tiny drops of poison, as the cobra becomes infuriated at the movements of the photographer's hands in focusing.

In one of his books Theodore Roosevelt tells how the explorer Tariton was once struck in the eyes and nearly blinded by poison thus spit forth. Washing the eyes with milk was found to give the most speedy relief.

ANALYSIS OF A LAUGH.

Physical Exposition of an Act Some Persons Cannot Enjoy.

What is laughter? An American humorist has called it "an undignified widening of the human mouth, accompanied by a noise resembling a cough in the effort to avoid swallowing a chestnut."

"Laughter," said Professor Sir Charles Bell, "is a convulsive action of the diaphragm. In this state the person draws a full breath and throws it out in interrupted, short and audible exhalations. This convulsion of the diaphragm is the principal part of the physical manifestation of laughter."

"But there are several accessories, especially the sharp vocal utterance arising from the violent tension of the larynx and the expression of the features, this being a more intense form of the smile. In extreme cases the eyes are moistened by the effusion from the lacrimal glands."

There are some people who cannot laugh, who are wholly unable to enjoy either the physical or the mental luxury of a laugh. Thus it was said of William III, that he was utterly at a loss to understand what could be got out of laughter except loss of dignity. There are many persons in history who have been, according to common report, incapable of laughter. Queen Mary I, John Knox, Robespierre and Motke are examples. The Iron Duke himself rarely, if ever, went beyond a grunt.—London Strand Magazine.

Added Injury.

A woman who "had an account to settle" with the village schoolmaster in consequence of his chastising her boy visited the schoolroom and used some very strong language. The schoolmaster, finding it impossible to pacify her, put her outside and locked the door against her. For a long while the sounds of angry expostulations and of knocks and hammering upon the door were heard, but the much tried man took no notice. Ultimately he went to unlock the door and found the woman sitting on the ground, waiting for him with an expression on her face that was more eloquent than words. He had shut her skirt in the door when he locked it and kept her a prisoner all the morning.—London Globe.

Mother.

Children, look in those eyes, listen to that dear voice, note the feeling of even a single touch that is bestowed upon you by that gentle hand. Make much of it while yet you have that most precious of all good gifts, a loving mother. Read the unfathomable love of those eyes, the kind anxiety of that tone and look, however slight your pain. In after life you may have friends—fond, dear friends—but never will you have again the inexpressible love and gentleness lavished upon you which none but a mother bestows.—Macaulay.

A Good Sort of Man.

"Pray," said a lady to Foote, "what sort of man is Sir John D.?" "Oh, a very good sort of man!" "But what do you call a very good sort of man?" "Why, madam, one who preserves all the exterior decencies of ignorance!"

Grumblers.

Some people who are always grumbling because they cannot get what they consider their share of the sweets of life forget that they have omitted to put their penny in the slot.

Suspicion Aroused.
