

For Violent Transit.

A book by Edwin J. Dingle, entitled "Across China on Foot," contains a bit of practical advice about the manner in which American goods should be packed for transportation in the interior of China.

One of Mr. Dingle's friends, needing a typewriter and knowing the country, wrote home explicit directions as to the packing.

Didn't Convert Franklin.

Whitefield, the great preacher, who toward the middle of the eighteenth century started such a revival of religion in all the colonies, was, of course, a man of too much ability to escape the serious regard of Franklin.

"I had in my pocket," he says, "a handful of copper money, three or four silver dollars and five pistoles in gold."

Franklin and Whitefield became fast friends, and Whitefield often prayed for his friend's conversion, but "never," says Franklin, "had the satisfaction of believing that his prayers were heard."

Woman the Exception.

"As I understand it," said the young man thoughtfully, "two negatives make an affirmative."

"Quite right," replied the distinguished grammarian.

"And yet," persisted the young man, "it doesn't seem to work out just exactly right."

"What's the trouble?" asked the distinguished authority. "Perhaps I can straighten the matter out for you."

"I will be deeply indebted to you if you can," said the young man earnestly.

"In the last two months I have received two decided negatives—one each from two girls—and for the life of me I can't see where the affirmative comes in."

"My dear sir," explained the distinguished authority, "as you grow older you will learn how utterly impossible it is to apply any rules to womankind!"

Artistic.

"I will give you your dinner if you will beat those rugs," said the woman with the gingham apron at the back door.

"Ah, madam," replied the wanderer, his hat in his hand, "those rugs are really and truly beautiful—exquisite. I don't think they possibly could be beat!"—Yonkers Statesman.

A Boomerang Rebuke.

A certain high school professor, who at times is rather blunt in speech, remarked to his class of boys at the beginning of a lesson, "I don't know why it is—every time I get up to speak some fool talks." Then he wondered why the boys burst out into a roar of laughter.—Lippincott's.

The Grand Old Name.

All Englishmen disagree as to which of them are "gentlemen." The problem divides the whole nation into embittered units. It is, however, generally conceded that no man is a "gentleman" who has not had a remote ancestor who robbed the country.—London Truth.

A Thorough Test.

"Inspector, that woman I said was always listening on my party line must have quit."

"What makes you think so?"

"Why, my wife has been listening for three weeks and hasn't caught her yet."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Laziness Won.

The teacher had offered a prize for the best essay, the subject to be "The Reward of Laziness." When the compositions were handed in it was found that one boy had submitted a sheet of blank paper. He won the prize.—Chicago News.

Didn't Have It With Him.

Teacher (disgruntled):—My boy, my boy! Where is your intuition? Boy:—I ain't got any. I'm only here a few days, and I didn't know what I had to git.—Louisville Times.

Clams That Drown Men.

Those of us whose acquaintance with clams embraces only the Little Neck variety are slow to think evil of any members of so delightful a family, but the inoffensive Little Neck has some big brothers who vigorously resent any attempt to pry into their personal affairs.

Some partisans of final causes have imagined that the moon was given to the earth to afford it light during the night, but in this case nature would not have attained the end proposed since we are often deprived at the same time of the light of both sun and moon.

To have accomplished this end it would have been sufficient to have placed the moon at first in opposition to the sun and in the plane of the ellipse at a distance from the earth equal to the one hundredth part of the distance of the earth from the sun and to have impressed on the earth and moon parallel velocities proportional to their distances from the sun.

In this case the moon, being constantly in opposition to the sun, would have described round it an ellipse similar to that of the earth. These two bodies would then constantly succeed each other, and as at this distance the moon could not be eclipsed its light would always replace that of the sun.—Laplace.

The Transforming Touch of Genius.

The genius in tailoring accomplishes without effort things that refuse to yield to the most determined efforts of the ordinary mortal.

He apparently creates out of nothing. His touch transforms the shape of the customer and the set of the garment. He molds the ungainly form into an Apollo, and the misfit garment falls into natural place in his hands.

The lines of his draft are unapproachable, and his system is infallible. He knows just when the shoulder is to be advanced or receded; he understands intuitively just how much the waist is to be suppressed or filled in and how much spring is required.

He never makes a mistake, and if the journeyman ruins a garment beyond repair in the making the genius sets it right with a few touches, even though to repair it is beyond the ordinary cutter's skill.—Tailor and Cutter.

Close Mouted.

When Austin Lane Crothers was governor of Maryland he had the reputation of being harder to get information out of than any man the Maryland reporters ever knew.

A reporter who knew him very well was trying to find out whether he would call a special session of the legislature.

"Mr. Crothers," said the reporter, "in your conversations with Governor Crothers what does the governor say to you about a special session of the general assembly?"

"My son," whispered the governor, the governor never talks to me on the subject. I can't get a word out of the close mouted old rascal."—Saturday Evening Post.

A Poser.

It had been explained to a man that mathematics, politics, ethics and gymnastics "is." The plural form bothered him until somebody said: "Well, did you ever hear of a mathematic, a political, an ethic or a gymnastic?"

The doubter retired in confusion, but came back triumphantly from retirement after a while.

"Say, you wise guys," said he, "tell me the singular of dandruff."—Chicago Post.

Shaftesbury's Retort.

When a member of a church congress at Manchester argued that the introduction of the custom of cremation would endanger belief in the resurrection of the dead the reply of Lord Shaftesbury silenced any further doubt when he asked, "What, then, has become of the holy martyrs who were cremated?"

A Good Record For Both.

"I've driven my car for over a year now," said Bilkins, "and I've never run down anybody."

"That's nothing," said Mrs. Bilkins. "I've attended the meetings of our sewing circle for five years and have never run down anybody."—Harper's Weekly.

Turned Down.

"Pardon me," said the man, "but you look like a young lady, I know."

"Pardon me," interrupted Miss Bright, "but you look like a man I don't know."—Exchange.

Not What He Expected.

She—Say, are those poems in the paper signed "Oedipus" yours? He—Yes. She—Well, the girls persisted that they were, but I always spoke up for you.—Fleegende Blatter.

We do not learn to know men through their coming to us. To find out what sort of persons they are we must go to them.—Goethe.

Relics of the Capet Family.

The descendants of Edouard Lame, who was housekeeper of the Temple prison when the Capet family were there, gave to the Carnavalet museum, in Paris, some of the things which Louis XVI. and Marie Antoinette left in their rooms when they were taken to the scaffold.

There are two chemises of fine linen belonging to Marie Antoinette. The crown which was embroidered on them has been picked out, and only the initial "M." remains.

There is a black silk blouse, very much worn and mended in several places, which Marie Antoinette made with her own hands in prison and which was worn by the princess royal after her father's execution.

There are also two pairs of the king's silk stockings (darned rather badly), a pair of "Mme. Royale's" little slippers, a crystal bottle which has a few drops of Marie Antoinette's favorite scent remaining in it and Louis XVI's shaving dish.

But perhaps the most pathetic of the relics of the monarchy which went to pieces on the scaffold is a game of bricks with which the little dauphin, whose fate has always been and always will be a mystery, used to amuse himself in prison.

Turkish Women at the Theater.

A notice which is to be seen in one of the theaters of Constantinople effectively solves the problem of people at the back obtaining a clear view and is very much more radical than the polite request made in English and French theaters that ladies should not mar the view of the stage with huge hats.

The notice reads: "In order to render the performance agreeable to all those present the management of the theater has decided that the spectators of the first three rows should recline, those of the next three rows be on their knees and all the others be standing up. In that way everybody will be able to enjoy the play." This notice is followed by a suggestion implying the Turkish woman's lack of romance, "It is strictly forbidden to laugh, for it is a tragedy that is being performed."—Le Monde Artiste.

A Genial Young Man.

Late one night young Jinks sat in a crowded trolley car, and when a girl he knew got aboard and stood directly in front of him he made no sign. His face hidden by his newspaper, he pretended that he didn't know the girl would like to have his seat.

After awhile she spoke. "Good evening, Mr. Jinks!"

"Oh, good evening!"

"I've been to the Primrose Social dance." Then after a pause she added, "It's a wonder, Mr. Jinks, you wouldn't offer me your seat!"

Jinks then got up, but he was very angry. He said as he hooked himself to a strap, "I thought you wouldn't want it, for as you said you'd been to a dance I knew you must have been sitting all the evening."—New York Press.

An Interrupted Duel.

A fire engine was recently the means of putting a sudden stop to a duel in Germany. Two physicians quarreled and arranged for a meeting with pistols. The village chief magistrate heard of the proposed duel. He informed the firemen, and together, drawing a machine, they proceeded to the scene of the encounter.

Just as the seconds had stepped off the distance a heavy stream of water struck one of the physicians, and a moment later the second doctor was also drenched to the skin. The would be fighters, in their dripping clothes, looked so ridiculous that they both burst out laughing, shook hands and returned to their homes, thanking the ingenious mayor for his intervention.

Entirely Too Literal.

Some people are too literal for anything. A young man gave a graphic description of a narrow escape that he had recently had from an enraged bull:

"I seized him by the tail!" he exclaimed, "and there I was. I was afraid to hold on and I dare not let go."

"Between the horns of a dilemma, as it were," ventured a young lady, very much interested.

"No," replied the young man; "I wasn't between the horns at all, an', besides, he wasn't a dilemma; he was a Jersey."—London Mail.

The Unfinished Creation.

Men ever mislead themselves in science by not perceiving that all things on their globe are related and co-ordinated to the general evolution to a constant movement and production which bring with them necessarily both advancement and an end. Man himself is not a finished creation. If he were God would not be.—Honore de Balzac.

Real Competition.

"Competition is the life of trade," said the business man.

"Of course it is," replied Mr. Dustin Stax. "Only we want to get trade so regulated that folks will be competing for a chance to buy instead of a chance to sell."—Washington Star.

There never was a time when people appreciated the real merits of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy more than now. This is shown by the increase in sales and voluntary testimonials from persons who have been cured by it. If you or your children are troubled with a cough or cold give it a trial and become acquainted with its good qualities. For sale by all dealers.

It would surprise you to know of the great good that is being done by Chamberlain's Tablets. Darius Downey, of Newberg Junction, N.
